Mischievous Legislation.

WHEN direct legislation was under consideration by the electors of the State the prime argument in favor of the initiative was that any bad law passed by the Legislature could be held up until it should be voted upon by the whole State at a general election. No one seemed to recognize at the time that the referendum was a mechanical and not a moral device. The operation of a proposed law is suspended whenever a certain fixed per cent. of the electors of the State sign a petition opposing it.

As generally happens, it is the reform measures and not the doubtful bills that are blocked by the referendum. When the Legislature passed the Redlight Abatement Bill, it was held up for two years by petitions placed in circulation by the gamblers and dive-keepers of San Francisco. Just now there is a movement afoot to call a special session of the Legislature and abolish the saloons as a war measure. It has been pointed out that the cost of the special session would be not more than $15,000, while $250,000 a day is spent in California saloons. Eliminating waste and conserving food products are the arguments advanced to close the open bars.

But it is extremely doubtful if aught can be accomplished by calling a special session to close the saloons. Since the referendum has been placed in the State Constitution the Legislature is little more than a House of Lords. None of its actions is final. Under the referendum amendment to the State Constitution the bill could not go into effect until three months after the adjournment of the Legislature. Enough signatures could probably be secured in San Francisco and Oakland alone to suspend the operation of the bill. A special election could not be called for another three months and the date of the fall elections would be passed before the election could be decided. All this delay is caused by the referendum. If there were no direct legislation the saloons would have to close just as soon as the Governor signed the bill. It is significant that the dry forces which are urging the special session were all for the referendum. It never seemed to occur to them that it would at once become a weapon in the hands of the wets. Direct legislation is purely mechanical; it rules by force of numbers, no possibility is offered for raising the moral issue.

National Honor.

THAT is the measure of the greatness of a nation? This problem has been posed repeatedly through the centuries; but no solution has yet been received that civilization is inclined to accept. The reason for this dissatisfaction is not difficult to perceive; the world is asking for a moral solution while the only one that is not periodically disproved is a purely material one. Civilization would like to imagine that the greatest nation is that in which human thought has reached its highest attainment, which has become the nearest humanized. But the one solution which we are bound to accept is that the greatness of a nation is measured by its fighting force.

There is no reason to doubt that the human intelligence of Russia has reached a higher plane than it ever occupied before. The masses have received a liberal education by reason of war, revolution and anarchy But who would say that Russia is a greater nation in 1918, lying prostrate under the feet of the arrogant Hun, than in 1915 when her armies had crossed the Carpathians and were invading the plains of Hungary? We are prone to forget that a nation has a physical as well as a mental form. Just as the greatest human efficiency can only be attained from a sound mind operating in a sound body, so national greatness can never be secured if its physical force is neglected.

America is paying the price today of permitting its army and navy to languish during the period when powerful neighbors were developing their physical force to the utmost. Until a nation is willing to forget its honor it is foolish not to develop the forces on which it must rely to maintain that honor. As long as honor demands that certain insults shall be answered by a blow, just that long must honorable nations be prepared to fight. There is no other way.

Speaking of Budgets—

GREAT BRITAIN'S war budget of $14,000,000,000 is generally referred to as the biggest of its kind in the history of the world. It is true that Congress has authorized the Federal government to expend a little matter of $18,000,000,000 during the next fiscal year; but even our own financiers do not take Congress seriously. They refer to our Federal budget as a rough guess and express the opinion that it is from $6,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000 too high. The Congressional guess last year was $7,000,000,000 above the actual outlay.

Great Britain, on the other hand, is very careful about its budgets. Each one is prepared by a government department and introduced in Parliament by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. They are based on an intelligent consideration of the needs of the government for the period they cover. Our Congress, however, has proved at least that the American people are not niggardly with their credit at this time. Every estimate it has made has been in excess of the amount actually expended, while every British budget has been exceeded.

Southern California Rivers.

TO THE "tenderfoot" a Southern California river is a joke. Few who see the Los Angeles River during the greater part of the year, when scores of teams are busy hauling gravel from the river bed, to take its place in skyscrapers, can be induced to believe that sometimes this river is a rushing, swirling, roaring torrent. Such it was, not many years ago in February, when over seven inches of rain fell within forty-eight hours. In 1884, and again in 1889, the river was on a rampage, in the former year several persons being drowned.

Then, there is the Rio Colorado, a placid enough stream during most of the year, but in flood time a devouring monster, that never has been, nor probably never will be, entirely controlled by man.

Shams.

ONE of the most objectionable features of modern social life is the prevalence of hypocrisy and sham—of pretending to be and to have what you have not and are not.

The attempt to "keep up appearances" makes many families miserable that might otherwise be happy.

A plain-spoken rogue is safer company than a hypocritical model of propriety.

Plainly the qualifications requisite to successful military command have changed since the advent of the ocean cable and wireless telegraphy. The consensus of opinion in the British press is to the effect that Sir William Robertson was superseded in the high command by Sir Henry Wilson partly because the former had the reputation of being a blunt speaker, while the latter is a first-rate talker on military affairs. There was a time when blunt speech was the first requisite of a soldier while the realm of fine phrases was reserved to the diplomats.

LOS ANGELES TIMES INFORMATION BUREAU.
Frederic J. Haskin, director,

Has the Browning gun ever been adopted for the American Army?

Answer—Yes, the Browning automatic machine guns were publicly demonstrated and tested on February 27. The light rifle weighs only fifteen pounds. It can fire twenty continuous shots in two and one-half seconds. The heavy gun weighs thirty-four and one-half pounds. In the official test this gun fired 39,500 shots without a break.

How many lives have been lost due to the air raids in England?

Answer—The number of noncombatants, including women and children, who lost their lives in air raids in England up to February, 1918, was 1284. Over 3000 were injured. The number of noncombatants killed by German U-boats up to that date was 12,836.

What is meant by the expression "Cousin German?"

Answer—This term is applied to first cousins and signifies that they are from the same germ, or parental stock.

From where do we get the saying "Mad as a hatter?"

Answer—This old saying probably has no reference to hat makers. In the Anglo-Saxon the word "mad" was used to mean violent, furious and angry. Atter is the Anglo-Saxon word for an adder or viper and so this expression simply means "as venomous as an adder." The German word for viper is "Natter."

Why do some new quarters have three stars and others not?

Answer—The act of July 9, 1917, authorized this change in the quarter issued late in 1916. The first quarters issued did not have the stars under the eagle.

Do women in munition factories wear uniforms?

Answer—Yes. They will wear a distinctive uniform with an insignia to denote that the War Department recognizes them as an important part of the military organization. The style selected consists of a khaki blouse and specially designed overalls which are made full and button around the ankles. Puttees may be worn with the overalls. The cap is of a lighter fabric and resembles an aviator's cap in shape.

Have wages been advanced in proportion to the increased cost of living?

Answer—No; according to a report of Assistant Secretary of Labor Post the cost of food last year increased 25 per cent. for the entire country while wages rose only one-half or two-thirds of that rate.

What articles can be sent to soldiers abroad?

Answer—Postoffice order of March 28, states that parcels for members and individuals connected with the A.E.F. in Europe shall not be accepted for mailing, unless they contain only articles sent at the written request of the addressee. This request must be approved by his regimental or higher commander.

When is the new aerial mail service to begin?

Answer—This service will be in operation May 15. Three landings have been selected—Potomac Park for Washington; Bustleton, North Philadelphia for Philadelphia; and Belmont Park for New York.

What is the American Defense Society?

Answer—The work of the American Defense Society is educational. The object of the organization is to call public attention to the condition of unpreparedness in the United States and the need for all American citizens to engage in patriotic work. The society promotes its work by distributing pamphlets and articles. It also maintains war exhibits, and a literature fund.

Can I enlist in the Aviation Corps?

Answer—The Aviation Corps is not accepting men for the flying branch at present. Men of various trades may be inducted into the ground section of the Aviation Corps, where they are needed for repairing and maintaining the airplanes.

What city finished first in the second Liberty Loan campaign?

Answer—Tucson, Ariz.

How old is Billy Sunday and where was he born?

Answer—William Ashley Sunday was born in Ames, Iowa, November 9, 1863.

What is the war costing per day to individuals?

Answer—According to the latest estimate the war is costing Great Britain about 74 cents daily for each inhabitant. It is costing France 50 cents a day for each person; Germany, 50 cents, and the United States, 28 cents.

attacked Russia the Eagle, always loyal to the great religious journal of civilization which for so many years has published his weekly scream, took the part of the white face against the brown, of the so-called Christian nation against the so-called heathen one. That war took place only about a dozen years ago and four years ago when the German Kaiser, imitating the goddess of destruction, Ate, cried "havoc! and let slip the dogs of war" and things showed that Ate had come "hot from hell" to make the earth all Gen. Sherman is reported to have said war was, then Japan and Russia became allies in the great struggle of democracy against absolutism; of liberty against tyranny. And if you will believe your Eagle, Americans, well-beloved, Japan has done her part in the conflict far better than her old enemy has done hers.

Yes, indeed, the brown race has been truer to the cause of freedom than the white one. Sad to say, the so-called heathen nation, oriental to the core, has been truer to the cause of western civilization than has been the so-called Christian nation, at least half occidental.

The Eagle has watched Japan with keen eyes since she entered into war with Russia, particularly so since she joined the Entente Allies in the conflict for human freedom, and most particularly so since America, the real cradle of liberty, became drawn or driven into that war whirlpool shaking the earth to its foundations.

The Eagle has had serious misgivings as to the real purpose, the ultimate aim of Japan. He knows the people to be oriental, to be very competent, but he also knows them cold-blooded, ambitious, selfish, not afflicted at all with altruism. For this reason the Eagle has had his eye on every movement made by Japan since the conflict for freedom began. What is the result in the Eagle's mind of this watchfulness by the Eagle's eye? It is to give Japan absolute credit for loyalty to her allies, for thorough devotion to the cause she has espoused.

Recently the Eagle enjoyed an evening's conversation with a former schoolmate back in Wisconsin who went to Japan many years ago to do missionary work among the people in spreading among them occidental civilization especially as that is symbolized by Christianity. He had every opportunity of getting close to the heart of the people of Japan, of becoming acquainted with their thought, aspirations, aims and ambitions. The Eagle's mind was greatly relieved and his heart thoroughly satisfied by the report made by his old-time friend. This man was not subject to delusions. In reply to a question as to whether Japan was loyal to the Entente Allies the reply was "thoroughly so—for Japan's own sake." He went on to say that Japan was becoming very rich out of the war, that before the war, in the city of Tokio there were only few automobiles. Now there are thousands of them. With a good-natured chuckle he remarked, "Oh, they are becoming thoroughly westernized. They have an automobile before they own a house, or if they do own one they cheerfully mortgaged it to get money to buy a 'tin Lizzie,' a limousine or some other kind of a buzzwagon. The Russian War left the Japanese in a very bad way. They were overburdened with a debt that made the taxes press like a mountain on the back of every man in the kingdom. It would have taken many years to pay this debt if the new war hadn't come to bring big profits, which have lifted the debt, relieved their backs of their burden of taxes and enabled them to stand up straight."

Many people of Japan have been educated in the United States and in nearly every country in Europe. They come to New York, London, or Paris and they are made too much of in some cases, which gives them the "big head." He told a story of one who graduated from an eastern college with the degrees of A.M. and Ph.D. On arriving home being asked what he intended to do he leaned back in a big arm chair and with his "mug" wreathed in a most conceited grin replied, "I have not made up my mind what I shall do. But as to going into business, that is out of the question. For you see I am a philosopher now." But the American said this was a very unusual condition of mind to get hold of a Japanese. They are too practical, too capable, too efficient to permit such delusions to take hold of their mind. They are not a bit inclined to hallucinations but stick close to the every-day affairs of life.

They have done their full share in the war and will continue to do so. They have been of the greatest help to the Entente Allies in furnishing ships to carry provisions and munitions to France and other battle fronts. They have patrolled the Mediterranean, making commerce safer on that sea than it would have been without their help. They have patrolled the whole coast of Asia, not only releasing Great Britain's ships from duty there but also keeping down German raiders from preying on our commerce in those seas.

Let us go back now, beloved, and again cast our eye over the condition of Japan before Perry induced the kingdom to open her ports to commerce with western nations and compare that condition with what obtains today. It is a wonderful transformation. Nor has Japan been the only gainer in the change. Her work in the present war has been of the greatest use to the cause of that civilization to which she owes her progress. It surely speaks well of the Japanese that they have chosen the right side in the war which is rocking the world like an earthquake. It might have been expected of them that they would ally themselves with the cause of despotism. Is not this so when one considers their own government when Perry first visited them. They have made wonderful progress materially in the two generations since they took that plunge into the big swimming hole with the other nations. But their progress in the higher things of life has been more remarkable. They are not idealists, they are given little to poetry, their art is all borrowed from China, their industrial matters copied from the occident, their educational system may be modeled on those of America and Europe, it may be true that they have added little in the way of new inventions to the sum total of modern life, but surely much credit must be given them for the use they have made of what they have learned from the outside world in the short time since they lived in absolute barbarism.

They are a nation to be reckoned with in the future. They are in the swim and will tax older nations to keep up with the peace they are setting.

Yours for progress,

The Eagle

It is a neat, complete, discreet, arrangement, replete with foresighted efficiency. I particularly like that appropriate touch about the soldier son in the fighting line, it puts the thing on such a fine patriotic basis. And the Irish doctor thus evades the indecency of vulgar and unethical public advertising, everything confidential and refined.

And as for the "ultimate consumer," poor dear—how happy he or she should be to know that this landlord is so intimately interested in his sickness or his untimely demise. It should be a real comfort to feel that at least 20 per cent. clear profit is forthcoming to compensate him for the affliction of a tenant. One should be able to bear the torments of, say, pneumonia with greater valor in the knowledge that one is contributing to the support of a lady whose son is in Uncle Sam's army. In fact, who would begrudge a nice long serious illness and a nice neat death when by so doing one would contribute to the profitable services of the lady solicitor, the landlord, the doctor, the hospital and the undertaker. One can imagine the emotions of the forlorn little widow whose hubby's insurance had unfortunately elapsed a little too previously, when confronted with the collection of bills. One cannot make bargains at such times—but often enough the future has to be mortgaged to settle those mournful and stupenduous debts. And, of course, she may happen to have a boy in Uncle Sam's Liberty Army herself. I have personally known little widows who spent the subsequent years in wiping out hubby's funeral debts, a rather dismally tangible burden gratuitously added to their bereavement.

However, apartment-house owners, God bless them, don't seem to have taken very kindly to the lady's proposal, since so many of them have turned the matter over to your Lancer. So you tenants of apartment-houses need not all glare suspiciously at your landlord when he cheerily asks you how you are feeling this morning. Not always.

The Practical Joker.

The practical joker is usually a person with an indecent sense of humor, and a taste for frightfulness. There is no end to the trouble a practical joker will take to make people thoroughly uncomfortable. The newspapers of the city experienced a rather unpleasant example of the game last week when some idiot sent to the society editors a carefully written account of a wedding, which was accepted in all good faith. The whole thing turned out to be a "joke" on a young school girl and boy, which caused them and their families most painful ridicule and humiliation. Everyone was mortified and indignant, including the newspapers, and it is to be hoped the joker himself had full pleasure out of the incident, for no one else did.

Practical jokes are usually merely vulgar. Even when they are harmless, they are invariably unpleasant. One dazzling young wit was bragging recently that he sent five pounds of decomposing liver to an elderly lady the other day, wrapped in a luxurious candy box with ribbons. He obviously thought it the acme of scintillating humor, but we who listened were dullards, no doubt, and only felt disgusted.

The Matrimonial Joke.

But perhaps our vulgarity and perversity reaches its greatest height in the multitudinous matrimonial jokes. I sat through seven numbers at a vaudeville house recently and six of them had rather disgusting jokes belittling matrimony. And this at a time when holy matrimony as a sacred institution needs all the support the nations can give it. What is the use of our learned professors, our pastors and masters, preaching the sanctity of marriage while our popular playhouses make it their stock joke. Scarcely an act on the vaudeville circuits but what drags in some cheap joke at the expense of women and matrimony—but all the same, dear ladies, the nation expects that every woman will do her duty. Serious writers are bewailing the fact that educated college women don't marry. Voila, why should they voluntarily make themselves fit subjects for a vaudeville joke?

The matrimonial jokes are strictly masculine. Some jokes are you know. Perhaps women have been suspected of lacking a sense of humor chiefly because these masculine jokes on sex were a little too poignant for their proper appreciation. They can see the point but they don't think it funny. Feminine deformities are a great subject for our masculine humor. Maybe we men shall not see the jokes quite so vivaciously if they take the form of ridiculing our deformities after the war. That, of course, would be unpatriotic, unthinkable. But women have had to swallow the sort of thing with good humor all their lives.

We make fun of women if they are dowdy and therefore unattractive to men, and we make fun of women if they are sartorially chic and therefore specialize in being attractive to men. We make fun of the spinster who fails to marry and we make still more fun of the poor thing when she does. We joke at her expense when she marries money and we joke still more at her expense when she is married for money. We ridicule her if she is a prude and we ridicule her still more if she is not a prude.

We ridicule her if she is attired with masculine severity, and we ridicule her if she dresses a soupcon too feminine for our taste. In this connection a young pioneer on a Los Angeles street car interested me considerably last week. She had obvious workmanlike pants beneath a short skirt and a couple of fine manly youths of 20 or thereabouts guffawed out loud. She might have ignored them with feminine grace and old-fashioned decorum, but instead she turned upon them with a caustic young tongue and very pure English. "And the chances are, you young hoodlums, I am a good deal better man than either of you will ever be," she remarked, as she hopped cheerily off the car.

And somehow public sympathy hopped off the car with her, for there were two very discomforted young men left to think it over.

Chapter IX.

Fishing, Fun and Frolics.

SUDDENLY Avalon began to put on metropolitan airs, stores were built, restaurants opened, photographic parlors sprang up and the young people had their dances. It soon became the fashion for sailing parties to be arranged for week end visits and all were welcomed from the mainland. At one time I remember there were lying in Avalon harbor on a Saturday and Sunday, a dozen or more yachts, among them the "Aggie," a beautiful schooner owned by Dan McFarland; the "Penelope," by Mr. William Lacy, Sr.; "La Paloma," by Hancock Banning; "White Wings," by Capt. Whitman; "The Judge," also a Banning boat; a schooner belonging to Mr. A. Wheeler who had a bakery at Avalon; the schooner "Rambler," with Maj. Furrey on board; Capt. Remington's launch "Wanda;" the "Hattie," a power schooner; "San Diego," a large schooner, also with power, run by Will Condit; the "Allie," and a few others that I fail now to remember. Altogether they made a pretty sight, and all the girls and boys sported yachting clothes. Sometimes the sailing boats got becalmed a mile or so out, but we generally managed with Capt. Remington's help to get them towed in time to appear at the ball, which was held in the Metropole dining-room on Saturday nights.

The first fishing done on the island by amateurs was by hand line trailed behind a skiff, which was generally rowed by a boatman. Mexican Joe, Chris Hargitt, Hugo and some others had boats for hire and acted as guides with great success.

Then Mr. Holder suggested trying a rod and reel, which took the fancy of the sportsmen at once. Dan McFarland, the Lacys, father and sons; Hugh Vail, Ed Silent, Tom Beattie, C. F. Holden and I were the first to regularly go in for the fun, but soon the fever spread and, before the season was over, all sorts of fancy rigs were in operation. The sky got almost cloudy with the strings of fish stories that were told, mostly manufactured out of whole cloth, and then improved upon.

The Yellowtail Run.

There was, however, one occasion when Avalon Bay was alive with yellowtail. It may have happened before and perhaps since, but of that I don't know. The occasion I recall, though, was on a Wednesday towards the end of August, 1889. Early in the morning, about 6 o'clock a.m., I was awakened by a loud shouting of "Yellowtail." I jumped to the window to look out and saw what seemed to be a mighty rush of a rip tide, but turned out to be a school of fish. By the time I was on the beach, there were many others, all bent on the same errand. Three boatmen, Jose, Maria and Baptist, were circling the spot with nets, those on the shore threw out hand lines, some took to boats, but nothing seemed to stop this avalanche of fish. On they rushed like a conquering army charging a beaten foe, until they swarmed on the pebbly beach in front of the hotel. No necessity to use a net; no need to throw a hook and line, we simply picked up an oar or a club, hit a fish on the head and hurled him higher up on the beach. The sport, the slaughter rather, took an hour or so and then the remains of the school went below the surface of the ocean and swam away. Everyone had yellowtail for breakfast, for lunch and dinner.

Two tons were sent to Los Angeles by a special schooner, but hundreds were dumped in the ocean because they could not be used.

It is needless to say this fish story reached the public on the mainland and visitors flocked over thicker than ever and when they found the story was true, and not manufactured, there was not enough tackle on the island for all to be served.

A Real Fish Story.

About this time, an amusing thing happened that is worth telling. A certain banker and his son came over to try some of the heralded fishing, stayed at the Metropole and engaged a boat and guide for the next day. Later in the morning they returned amid great excitement, having hooked a fine large eighteen pound yellowtail which the banker promptly carried to the hotel and requested to have it cooked for his dinner. The cook was called, handed the fish and all instructions given as to cooking, sauce, etc. Unfortunately there was a rush in the dining-room that day, and about 3 o'clock, De Bussey the chef, informed me, in great perturbation, that the second cook had forgotten the instructions, and the fish had got cooked and eaten. Great Caesar, what was to be done? Another fish had to be got, that was certain. So off I rushed down the beach to replace the treasured catch. Not a fish of any sort, all the boats were in and no catch made—there wasn't a yellowtail on the island. I went out fishing myself and sent some boatmen out too, a fish had to be caught. Backwards and forwards, here, there and everywhere, but only one large rock bass was the result.

I had visions of a collapse if the facts were known, so called in DeBussey and Sam the head waiter, and they sadly took the bass to the kitchen to work up a fake.

Dinner time came, Sam had a table fixed up, decorated with flowers, the banker and son arrived in the dining-room beaming. "This way, yes sir, fine fish, yes sir, cooked to a turn," says Sam. Soup was eaten. I watched, trembling all over. In came Sam with a large dish with a metal cover, which he promptly put on a side table. "Yes sir, I had better serve it, yes sir," and each had a full plate of fish with dressing and sauce. "How do you like it?" "Fine, fine, best I ever ate, I had no idea yellowtail was so good." Sam winked at me as he returned the remains to the kitchen. And so the danger was diverted. The banker became another walking advertiser instead of a disgruntled, disgusted man. So all were happy and no one let on about the deception.

I have mentioned before about the liquor interests being served from a barge in the bay, called "Hardware" but which was finally ousted. The result of its closing was that those people who were in need of a tonic, and who were accustomed to taking a stimulant, brought over sufficient with them to last their visit. Some had a bottle, and others a demijohn, but somehow or other their thirst struck them so strongly that the stock was reduced rapidly, shortly after arrival, and all was consumed by the second day. It is easy to understand from this that often on Saturday night there were a lot of men who were more than half seas over, and sometimes caused annoyance to others and were a disgrace to themselves.

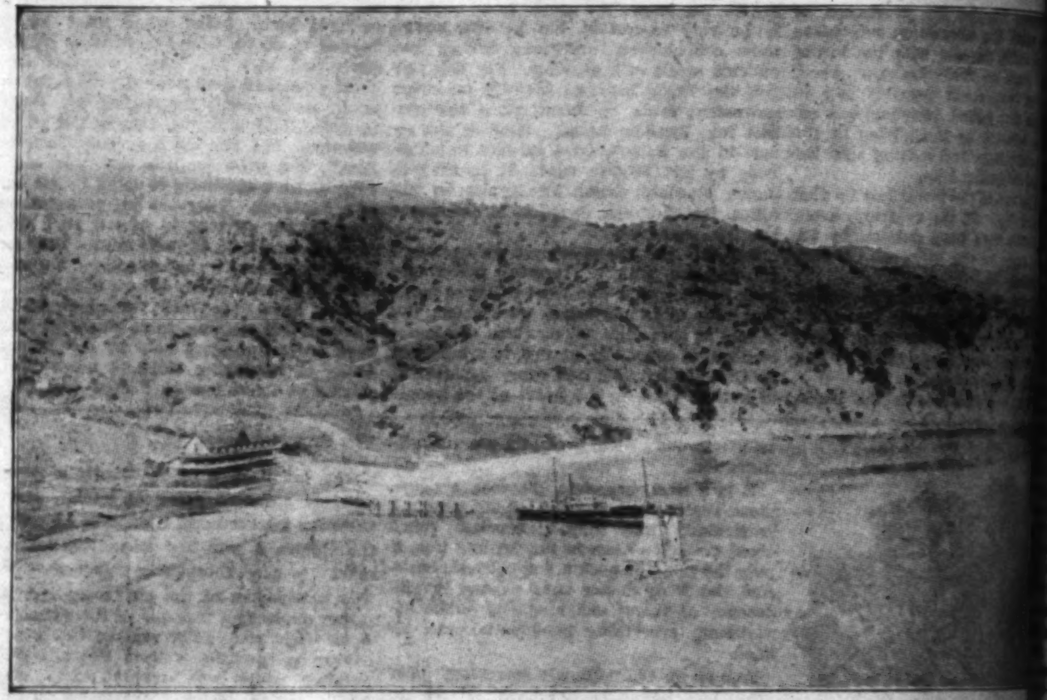
I pondered over the question, and decided that if good liquor could be had in the Metropole Hotel, without running a public bar, that most of the visitors would quit bringing over a supply of poison. Whereupon I opened a sideboard in a room adjoining the office, known as Number Six, and there kept an assortment of wines, liquors and cigars.

From that time on, I only know of four cases of drunkenness during the season of 1889, and two of these cases arrived in a battered condition and were promptly sent back by me on the steamer.

The bathing at Catalina, of course, was the great drawing card, and, on account of the still, clear water, ladies learned to swim in short order and some of them achieved as great feats in diving as the men and boys. For instance, Miss Ida Brown never swam before she came to Avalon, and before the season was over swam with Mrs. C. H. Ward from the bathing scow to the south point of Avalon Bay, then to Sugarloaf, and back to the bath house, the time occupied was one hour and thirty-one minutes, the distance about 1500 yards.

Miss Millie Kurtz, daughter of Dr. J. Kurtz now Mrs. Rufus Horton, swam from Avalon to Pebbly Beach, probably the first lady to do this feat.

The bath house in those days was on the beach about a couple of blocks east, rather northeast of the hotel. It was not a very elaborate affair but answered the purpose, and from ten to twelve o'clock in the morning the beach in front was the reception hall for all the unemployed visitors. It was here the scandals were discussed, the shortcomings of the husbands advertised and how nice the new beau acted, and how ridiculous Mrs. Shorty "looked in that baby bathing dress." "My, she must be all of 40 if she is a day," and so forth and so forth. And next day the same old thing.



Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, in 1887.

Straightening Out a Husband.

One day a prominent citizen of Los Angeles came over for a vacation, and proceeded to fill up his body with alcohol. He confided to me next day that he expected his wife over on the boat and that if she arrived, he was going in bathing to clear his system. He wasn't sure about her arriving, and not wishing a salt bath unless absolutely necessary, he engaged me as a lookout to signal the verdict. The first day she didn't arrive, so I didn't wave, and promptly the gentleman made a bee-line to No. 6. So next day when she didn't come over either and the devoted husband was at the bath house, awaiting my signal, I waved my handkerchief and the poor sot went to his doom in the cold, cold water. Twice I waved him back, and kept him there until he was a movable iceberg, then he dressed and returned to the hotel, a shivering, sober, white cheeked man. "Where-er-er is-s m-my wi-wife?" "Oh," says I, "she didn't come, I guess you got the signal mixed." He fumed and fussed, and called me names, but after a little came like a man and thanked me. He didn't want a nurse to care for him any more on that visit, and I rather think confessed what had happened when his better half turned up next day, for she knew about it and thanked me very cordially I had done.

Mr. Frank Whitley, whom I tioned as renting the island for bought a lot and built a house hotel a little way, and having a riding horses for his herders to suaded him to keep them in a rent them out for the visitors to over the hills. He had a dozen when I saw some of the boarders restless and hinting at leaving, make up a party, take some lunch have a picnic at Black Jack, the mountain. The harnessed "Thunder Bird" is "lightning" our daily burden in many more ways than these.

must be solved speedily, particularly for the period of the war, when we are supplying millions of tons of coal for export as well as operating our entire industrial system under forced draft. That a concerted effort along this line is to be made is shown in the attitude of the governments at home and abroad as they set up an organization to study the problem of fuel and power and to report back measures for harnessing the forces of nature and converting them into commercial energy.

Hydraulic power, it would appear, is to be the solution of the coal shortage. Uncle Sam and John Bull have joined hands on that proposition and purpose to cut down their coal bills by utilizing the vast resources in water power to alleviate acute economical conditions. In other words, they have started to electrify Great Britain and the United States, and, while this primarily is to advance the business of winning the war, it is of tremendous importance in turning over the whole industrial system by a revolutionary change that is to remain long after the war has been spread upon the pages of history.

A Story of Waste.

What are the facts? In the United States the power of 35,000,000 horses lies idle and wasted in the American streams. The rivers and creeks, with their purling waters, and splashing cataracts, are pregnant with power and await only to be enchained by man and turned into watts and ohms of electrical potentiality. Coal is relied upon almost exclusively to supply our motive power. The horse power of steam railway locomotives in the United States is placed at 25,000,000. In water power alone there is enough wasted energy in this country to operate every single railway train, passenger and freight, with 10,000,000 horse power remaining for industrial plants.

E. W. Rice, Jr., president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, estimates that the coal used by steam railways during the year 1917 amounted to 150,000,000 tons. By electrifying the railroads, he maintains, fully 100,000,000 tons of this coal could be saved. This, he declares, is an amount three times as large as the total coal exported from the United States during 1917. He mentions also the fact that the railroads consumed 40,000,000 barrels of oil, or 15 per cent. of all the oil produced, which should be conserved, he points out, for use in the ships of our new merchant marine, for the tractors that till our fields, and the motor trucks that serve as feeders to our railways.

"Our waterfalls constitute potential wealth which can only be truly conserved," says Mr. Rice, "by development and use. Millions of horse power is running to waste every day which, once harnessed for the benefit of mankind, may become a perpetual source of wealth and prosperity."

Pointing out that 25 per cent. of the coal dug from the earth each year is burned to operate our railroads, Mr. Rice makes the significant statement, that, under average conditions, the steam locomotive requires six pounds of coal per horse power hour while present central electrical stations could move the same trains with a consumption of only two pounds of coal per horse power hour. Electric locomotives, says Mr. Rice, speed up schedules fully 25 per cent., while cold weather that paralyzes steam traffic does not affect electrically operated lines. Where electricity has been substituted for steam, he says, there has resulted fully 50 per cent. increase in available capacity of existing tracks and other facilities.

It is not alone in the operation of railroads, however, that the substitution of electric current for steam effects a saving in coal while supplying a very efficient store of power. Hydraulic power derived from the streams of water, would be applied to thousands of industrial plants. Thirty million horse power is required annually for primary stationary power. Of this amount 6,000,000 is furnished by water power, and the remaining 24,000,000 horse power by coal. If the 35,000,000 horse power available from water were supplied entirely to primary stationary power there would still remain 5,000,000 horse power for railways or other energy-consuming agencies.

Electrifying Great Britain.

Great Britain awakened to these facts with a start. Hemmed in by the submarine, her coal-diggers removed from the mines of Wales to the trenches of France, she has set about the huge project of electrifying the United Kingdom. Great Britain has been using annually something like 80,000,000 tons of coal. She is not using that much now because she cannot get it. By electrification and use of her hydraulic powers it is estimated she will save fully 55,000,000 tons of coal annually. This has been worked out by the Ministry of Reconstruction in its electrification plans. It proposes now to set up sixteen huge central supply stations and expects to effect a saving in coal that, figured in dollars and cents, would be equivalent to $135,000,000 every year. France follows suit with the development of new canals linking the Mediterranean and the North Sea and the utilization of wasted energy in water power. Little Italy, having suffered much for want of fuel and power, forced to carry her guns and munitions into the mountain tops by man power or animal power, and then abandon them in flight before a superior force because of the lack of transportation facilities, will develop her water resources.

In the United States a gigantic movement of far reaching importance is well under way. Under the direction of Dr. Harry Garfield, the Fuel Administrator, the survey of power potentialities throughout the entire country has been pushed along this spring with a view of affording relief as quickly as possible for the strain upon power facilities. It is proposed to erect giant central generating plants with main feed wires reaching to all the industrial communities within a given radius. It is proposed now to carry the mountain to Mahomet.

It is planned to inaugurate this revolutionary industrial turnover from steam to electricity in the heart of the Pennsylvania anthracite belt and to develop it thence all over the country. New York and Philadelphia, two of the great producing centers in the nation's war crisis, are to be linked up for the mutual benefit of the government's plants and the privately owned enterprises. The power is to be developed right at the mines and transmitted by high-voltage wires to the great plants engaged in war work. It is proposed to generate a minimum of 100,000 horse power, or about 70,000 kilowatts, at each plant. In the city of Philadelphia alone it is expected the net saving in coal consumption will amount to something better than 500,000 tons of coal a year.

West Leads the East.

Private initiative plus governmental co-operation is expected to open up the hydraulic capabilities of the country. The East has faltered sadly in contrast to the West in the use of water power. More than 40 per cent of the developed water power of the United States is contained within the three States bordering on the Pacific Ocean—Oregon, Washington and California; 75 per cent. lies west of the Mississippi. In the great industrial section containing Pennsylvania and

NITRIC ACID FOR THE ARMY AND NAVY. THE GREAT PLANTS OF THE KAISER AND WHAT THEY ARE DOING—THE NITRATE DEMAND OF OUR FARMS AND FACTORIES. OUR IMPORTS EQUAL FORTY MILLIONS A YEAR—DID THE CHILEAN DEPOSITS COME FROM THE AIR?

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

ARLINGTON (Va.) 1918.

I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
Why, so can I, or so can any man;
But will they come when you do call for them?

I HAVE come to Arlington to show you how Uncle Sam is calling spirits, not from the vasty deep, but from the circumambient air. He is calling them to assist us in our great battles in Europe, and, more than that, they come when he does call for them. I refer to the nitrates that we are to bring from the clouds to aid us in making munitions for fighting the Germans, and the fertilizers needed for the food supply of the nation.

Over here on the edge of the Potomac, within a stone's throw of Arlington Cemetery, the government has erected an experimental laboratory to study some of the great problems connected with the war. One of these is to extract nitrogen from the air. The problem is that for which, in 1916, Congress appropriated $20,000,000, and the one for which tens of millions are being spent by the War Department at Muscle Shoals, on the Tennessee River, in Northeastern Alabama.

The progress of the work at Muscle Shoals is a war secret. The plant there is to supply nitric acid for the explosives for the army and navy, and its construction is being pushed in every possible way. It is to supplement the nitrates we are importing from the deserts of Chile, and in time to make us independent of the rest of the world in supplying the materials for national defense. The machinery here is much the same in miniature as that of the mighty plant there, and both are very similar to the hydroelectric plants of Germany, which are grabbing from the air the explosives for the Kaiser's great army.

Must Have Nitric Acid.

Nitric acid is absolutely indispensable in the munitions of the wars of today. It is used in the manufacture of powder for cartridges, and of high explosives, for shells and torpedoes. It is used in making guncotton, dynamite and gunpowders of every sort and description. It is a part of all smokeless powders, and is so important to us that if our nitrates should give out we would be out of the war in a very few weeks. At present all of our nitric acid is obtained from the saltpeter we import from the deserts of Chile, and the greater part of the nitrogen we are using comes from that source.

The necessity for a supply of nitrates within our own boundaries was brought before Congress at the beginning of the war in Europe, when the Bureau of Ordnance asked that storehouses be erected and a reserve supply of 32,500 tons be imported for the possible demands of the future. At that time it was said that we had only 25,000 tons on hand, which was about one-twentieth the quantity Germany had laid in to make her explosives. The amount she had was several hundred thousand tons. Nevertheless, when the war began, it was all used within a few months. Her guns ate up gunpowder at the rate of $1,000,000 a day, and it is only through the nitrates she has taken out of the air that she has been able to continue the struggle.

Germany has Plenty of Nitrate.

Indeed, it is said that Germany went into the war only upon the completion of her machinery to make nitrates. She knew that her importations from Chile would be cut off as soon as war was declared, and although she believed that her reserve supply would last her for the short time to elapse before victory came, she did not dare to risk a long war until she could make nitrates of her own. It is said that she has spent $100,000,000 to this end, and that she has made 500,000 tons of nitrates since she declared war. She has now several great plants, which have supplied not only the bulk of the nitrates for her explosives, but also a part of the nitrogen needed as fertilizer and as feeding stuff for horses and cattle. The Germans are making a nitrogen yeast which is good not only as fodder, but as a food for human beings, and it is said that they will soon be independent of the outside world for nitrate supplies of all kinds.

Our nitrate situation, at the present writing, is just the reverse of that of Germany. We are importing the most of the nitrates we use. Before the war broke out we were paying to foreign countries an annual tribute of more than $40,000,000 for materials of that kind. Almost half of the amount went to Chile, from where we got more than 500,000 tons of nitrate of soda per annum. Another large part went to Great Britain and Germany, which countries sold us ammonium sulphate, the same stuff that we are getting as a by-product from our coke plants and gas works; and about 30,000 tons came from Canada in the shape of calcium cyanamid. The latter is a form of fixed nitrogen which the Canadians are taking out of the air by means of a great electric plant located on their side of Niagara Falls. Just prior to the war they were taking out 64,000 tons per annum by means of the cheap water power there. In addition, we bought more than $5,000,000 worth of nitrogenous fertilizers in tankage, fish scrap and other refuse animal matter from different parts of the globe, and we imported other nitrogen compounds in the shape of chemicals, which were valued at more than $12,000,000. These came from Europe and chiefly from Germany.

Inside the laboratory. Grinding machines to the one ten-thousandth of an inch.

Fertilizer Big Figure.

As to our own production of nitrates, we were then producing in the neighborhood of 200,000 tons in the shape of ammonium sulphate. This came from the by-product coke ovens which recently have been established in connection with our largest blast furnaces and from our gas works that make coke. We got also a considerable amount from the tankage and other products of our slaughter-houses, and, in addition, many thousands of tons in the shape of fish scrap and cottonseed meal. Nearly all of this went into fertilizer of one kind or another. Indeed, the amount we spend for the nitrogen we use on our farms, taking all the products into consideration, is said to be about $75,000,000 per year, and we might spend much more at a profit.

It is estimated that one pound of nitrogen properly applied to the soil will increase the yield of wheat by one-third. It is one of the most important elements of the balanced fertilizers of today, and it is largely due to it that the countries of Northern Europe get so much more out of their land than we do. By means of it Germany has increased its average yield per acre of all crops several times as much as we have. Indeed, we cannot get along without nitrates in our manufacture of fertilizers, and they are of an enormous importance to the food supply of the present.

We need many thousands of tons of nitrogen for our military explosives. We need vast quantities in our chemical industries, and also in the ammonia necessary for our refrigerating plants of one kind or another. All of the fresh food that goes across the water is carried in cold storage chambers, which are cooled with ammonia, and the same is true of the cooling plants of the meat-packing industry. In short, we must have hundreds of thousands of tons of fixed nitrogen every year, and at present about half of all we use comes from abroad and mostly from Chile. The supply is deficient, and we shall need all we can make for some time in the future.

The Chilean Nitrate Fields.

I have traveled through the Chilean nitrate fields and have watched them taking out the salts and loading them on ships to be sent to our country. The nitrates come from the great desert which lies between the Pacific Ocean and the Andes Mountains. The country there is as barren as the Sahara. It has not a blade of grass or any green thing, and in parts of it you would have to go 100 miles for a drink. It is all rock, stone and sand, with here and there beds of salty particles that reflect the rays of the sun, inflaming the eyes. It is this salt when extracted that forms the nitrates of commerce. There are great beds of it in the desert. They run north and south for a distance of about 400 miles beginning below Antofagasta, from which most of the nitrate is shipped, and extending beyond the port of Iquique, which is not far from Peru. Both ports are in Chile. The belt in which the nitrate deposits lie is confined to that country. It is from twenty to 100 miles back from the coast, and it is seldom more than ten miles in width.

Nevertheless, that strip of desert [illegible] one of the most valuable strips [illegible] upon earth. Within the past [illegible] has paid Chile in export duties [illegible] eral hundred million dollars [illegible] today it brings in about [illegible] the government expenses, and [illegible] fortunes to the men who are [illegible] The bulk of the exports are [illegible] American and British capitalists [illegible] the war began we were taking [illegible] fifth of the product and our [illegible] year were over 1,200,000 tons. [illegible] are loaded at Antofagasta, from [illegible] come northward about 2400 miles [illegible] Panama Canal and thence to the [illegible] States ports. When shipped the [illegible] soda looks just like dirty white [illegible] put up in bags of 200 pounds [illegible] carried out to the steamers in [illegible]

It is interesting to watch the [illegible] nitrates. The salts are not [illegible] uted. They lie in pockets and [illegible] single bed that covers an area of [illegible] miles. The stuff is mixed with [illegible] and the best of the deposits [illegible] from 40 to 60 per cent. of [illegible] As a general thing the nitrate [illegible] the surface, with a little sand [illegible] above it. It is gotten out by [illegible] down through this sand and [illegible] on through the nitrate rock [illegible] earth beneath. This hole is [illegible] with powder and the rock blasted [illegible] powder is often made on the spot [illegible] same material as that found [illegible] After the rock has been taken [illegible] broken into lumps, crushed by [illegible] and boiled in great tanks of water [illegible] boiling the salts go into the water [illegible] it to a thick, lemonlike syrup. [illegible] is now taken off by evaporation [illegible] nitrates allowed to settle. The [illegible] dried and ready for shipment [illegible] prices as high as the traffic will [illegible]

Where Did It Come from?

And now as to the source [illegible] Chilean nitrates. The nitrogen [illegible] make for the future is to come [illegible] air. The nitrates from Chile are [illegible] to have come from the bed of [illegible] sea which once covered this [illegible] desert. There is nitrogen in [illegible] some believe that the nitrate [illegible] it when it decayed. Another [illegible] they are the salts of the [illegible] rose from the vast beds of [illegible] by the birds on the islands [illegible] coast, and a third that [illegible] from the air by certain electric [illegible] in the Andes Mountains which [illegible] such the air as to make [illegible] acid being deposited in the [illegible] form of nitrate of soda.

None of these theories is [illegible] but the last one is based upon [illegible] same principle as those now [illegible] arc process of getting nitrates [illegible] air.

The atmosphere which is [illegible] and which extends for miles [illegible] is a mixture of two gases, [illegible] oxygen. More than three-fourths [illegible] nitrogen, and this nitrogen [illegible] values of the stuff we are [illegible] Chile at a cost of millions [illegible] year. According to Dr. Charles [illegible] roe, the eminent chemist and [illegible] plosives, there are 33,000 tons [illegible] in the air over each acre of [illegible] is so much that a few thousand [illegible] a blanket above it which [illegible] nitrates than is now left in [illegible] Chile. There is so much [illegible] that if we could wall it [illegible] over a twenty-acre field and [illegible] we should have enough to [illegible] and navy with all the nitric [illegible] for explosives, give our [illegible] nitrogenous fertilizers and [illegible] plants sufficient ammonia, [illegible] enough left for our other [illegible] every description.

This nitrogen is floating [illegible] the air with its little sister [illegible] and all that has to be done [illegible] the nitrogen and harness it [illegible] with some other material, so [illegible] get loose. As free nitrogen [illegible] whatever. It has to be [illegible] some other element. In the Chile [illegible] it is combined with soda and [illegible]

But Warren had banged into the bathroom to wash up.

The hour before dinner Helen spent in sick brooding over the unwanted bookcase. She measured and remeasured all the wall space in the apartment, but even with the most radical readjustment of the furniture there was no place for it.

Even at the dinner table, to Warren's disgust, she kept jumping up to measure again, as she thought of still another arrangement.

They were finishing their salad when [illegible] appeared with the startling announcement:

"There's some men out there with some furniture."

"Not the bookcase—so soon?" amazed Helen.

Paid extra to have it delivered tonight," grunted Warren. "Thought you'd stew around less if you got it placed."

They were now shuffling in with the two heavy pieces—the base with drawers and the upper part with glass doors. Warren ordered it set up in the library between the windows.

"Little wide for this place, sir," returned one of the men.

"That's all right, we'll have it there for the present."

When, generously tipped, the men finally clattered out, Helen dropped into a chair and gazed at this latest acquisition with sick despair.

It was unquestionably an expensive piece. The auctioneer's statement that it had cost over $300, she did not doubt. But it was wholly unsuited to their apartment and their other furniture. The marquetry inlay looked almost garish beside their staid, restrained Chippendale and Sheraton.

"Well, how about it?" demanded Warren. "That for $80 was the bargain of the sale. Look at the thickness of these drawers—that's solid all right."

"But it doesn't go with any of our things. Oh, don't you see it doesn't? Every one thinks our apartment's so wonderful—and it's because I've kept everything in one period. It's all old English—Chippendale and Sheraton—and now this awful gaudy Dutch marquetry! Oh, can't you see how it spoils everything?"

"No, I can't! It's a corking piece and you ought to be mighty glad to have it. You're hipped on that period dope."

"But even if it was right—it's too big. Look how it comes out over the window. Oh, it can't stay there!"

"Then we'll put it somewhere else. How about the hall?"

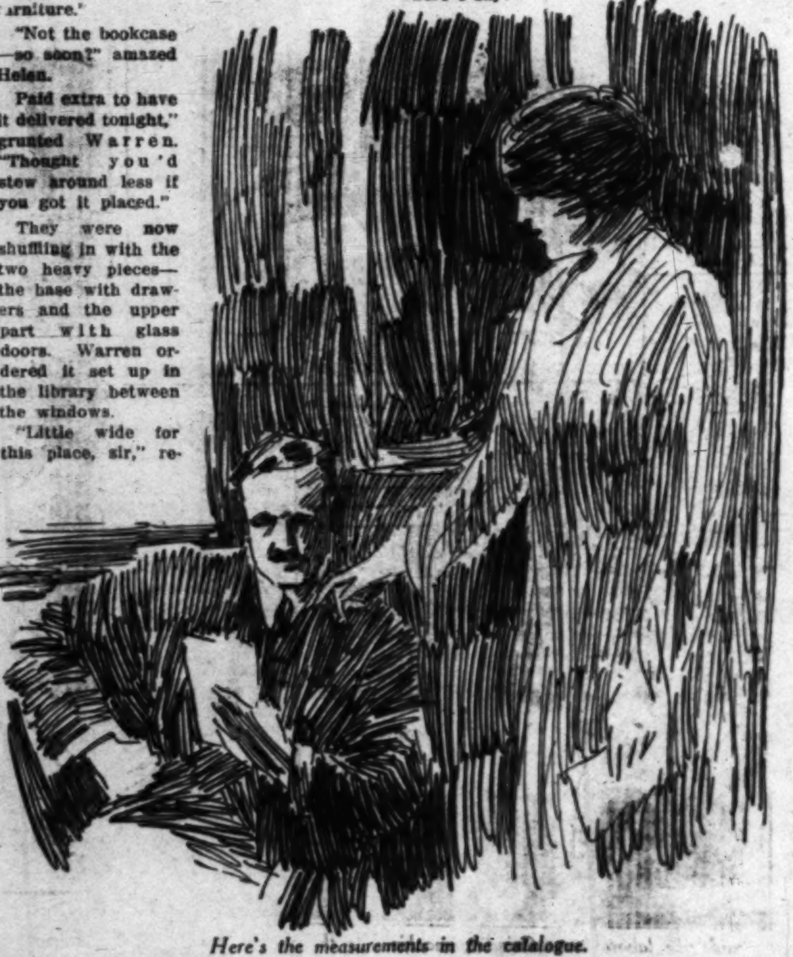
"It would look dreadful—we could hardly pass! Oh, I'm just sick over it," no longer able to keep back the tears.

Scowlingly Warren strode up and down, his hands thrust belligerently into his pockets. The silence was tense, broken only by his heavy wrathful step and Helen's muffled sobs.

"Now, see here, I've stood about enough of this," savagely. "We're going to have a few things that suit me—and this bookcase does. You've had your own blooming way so long—you forget I've some say around here."

"Why Warren!"

"You get whatever you darn please—and it's always all right. But when I buy anything for the place—there's always a howl. No, right here's where we turn a few leaves. Hereafter I'll get what I like—and it'll go where I say!"



Here's the measurements in the catalogue.

A vicious kick at a footstool emphasized his temperish outburst.

"And I'll tell you right now, I'm pretty well fed-up with this period bunk. We can't have this and we can't have that—because it isn't the right 'period.' Hereafter, if I like a thing we're going to have it—don't care a whoop what period it is. And I'll not stand for any yowling from you about it spoiling everything else."

Just here the telephone rang. With a muttered invective and another kick at the unoffending stool he strode to answer it.

"Hello! . . . Yes, this is Mr. Curtis speaking," brusquely. . . . "What's that? . . . Yes, I bought it—just been delivered. . . . How's that? . . . Why, if that's the case, I guess we'll have to let you have it. . . . Oh, no, I don't want any profit—didn't buy it for an investment," with a laugh. . . . "Well, if you insist—that'll be quite satisfactory. . . . Any time tomorrow."

When he left the phone, Helen was standing by the window, gazing down at the mist-blurred lights, her face turned from him.

"Well, your fireworks were all for nothing. That was the attorney for [illegible]state. The bookcase belongs to another member of the family—[illegible] in the sale by mistake—and they're willing to pay $100 to get it back. How about it? That satisfy you?"

"Why, I'm not to be considered," frigidly. "If it's just what you want—why give it up? Keep it by all means."

"Here, now," with a laugh, drawing her to him, "none of the high and mighty!"

"No, I mean it," holding herself aloof. "If hereafter you're going to select the furniture—you might as well begin now."

"See here, Kitten—you know I didn't mean all that. We're getting rid of the confounded thing and $20 to boot. Pretty neat, eh?"

"But you said you wanted it. You said—"

"Well, I don't say that now. Knew I was stuck and was pretty sore so I tried to bluf it. If it'll make you feel any better, I'll admit it looks rotten there—puts the whole place on the blink. That make it all right?"

"That helps," relenting.

"Maybe this'll help more," drawing her down to the window-seat. "We've got a corking place here, Kitten, and it's all YOU! It's the last time I'm going to butt in. Talk about interior decorators—you've got 'em all outclassed. Now that hundred's yours—to blow in on any old 'period' or semicolon that won't swear at the rest of your loot."

Electricity Speeds Production.

extending northward and eastward but 8 per cent is to be found, and even with Niagara Falls, the Great Lake region is but 3 per cent of the grand total. Pennsylvania, the banner coal and manufacturing State, has virtually no hydraulic power, but limitless resources.

While the East burns more coal the West utilizes its water power. The West has the first electric railway, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. It has the huge plant at Fresno county, California, developing 120,000 kilowatt power, with a transmission length of 240 miles. In San Francisco the Pacific Gas and Electric Company has eleven hydro-electric stations with 150 miles of 100,000 volts and 280 miles of 20,000 volt lines. Niagara Falls and Buffalo are well-known illustrations of the efficacy of hydro-electric power. The strain on Niagara has become so great that the government lately has considered legislation to consolidate two hydro-electric power companies here to provide 270,000 additional horse power in order to speed up war work.

Holyoke, Mass. affords another excellent illustration of the general good results obtainable through the utilization of neglected water facilities. Three lines of canals with a fall of sixty-one feet develop 30,000 horse power, distributing energy over a radius of sixty miles. In line with this there has been developed lately the proposition to utilize the canals lying adjacent to the Pennsylvania coal mines and thus facilitate the transportation of coal to tidewater. It has been proposed also to develop hydro-electric power in the same way while opening up the whole system of inland waterways. Promoters of this project point out that to "carry on" this work would serve the country in three vital ways: First, facilitate the common defense; second, relieve the problem of coal transportation as well as cut the cost, and third, provide valuable sources of hydro-electric power.

From these actualities already under way it is but a step to the more general utilization of electricity in the home as well as in the industrial plant. It is not unreasonable to expect that the time will arrive ere long when the modern home will be heated by electricity conveyed by the great transmission trunk lines from the huge central power plants. In the East these central plants will be located alongside the mines; in the West they will be located at the big rivers and waterfalls, as at Keokuk along the Mississippi.

Electricity to solve the food problem brings up other interesting pictures. This is an accomplished fact at the present moment when one considers that the electric spark in the carburetor ignites the gasoline that propels the farm tractor now so generally in use. But the possibilities of electricity in the stimulation of food production go even further.

In this country some very interesting experiments have recently been completed by Charles P. Steinmetz, "the wizard of Schenectady," in connection with J. L. R. Hayden. The results of their experiments were recently announced to the General Electric Company by these two leaders of the company's consulting engineering department. They have to do with the ef-

At a social function one evening one of the male guests began a remark with the words: "I bet she will," when an older gentleman interposed.

"Young man," said he, with a positive air, "don't ever bet that 'she' will do anything. You can never tell what a woman will do."

THE Congressional party brought back many stories from the fighting fronts in France.

"At a camp for German prisoners behind the British lines," said a member of the party in Washington, "a detail was called out for some ditch digging. None of the British guards could speak German and none of the Germans seemed to be able to understand a word of English.

"Under the circumstances it was difficult to give orders, and the 'Tommies' had a terrible time showing the prisoners what they wanted done. For this reason they drove the diggers a little harder, perhaps, than the union rules allow.

"Finally one big German, his face aglow with perspiration, dropped his shovel, straightened up painfully and said in a tone of genuine disgust:

"Wal, that's my aunt you're talking 'bout."

Several other questions were answered satisfactorily, when there came:

"My mother," immediately came from the selectman.

"But you told me just a few minutes ago that your aunt was the nearest living relative that you have," objected the officer.

Intrigues of the Kaiser's Sons. By William Le Queux.

August Wilhelm's Escapade

CHAPTER III.

MANY strange facts are whispered in the court circle at Potsdam concerning the curious life led by His Imperial Highness Prince August Wilhelm Henri Gonthier of Prussia, the Kaiser's third son. Before the war he was seldom in Germany, for he traveled about constantly. He is a rather studious man of 30, a doctor in political science, but possessing to an extraordinary degree the deep artifice of the Hohenzollerns.

Married at the age of 21 to Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderbourg-Glucksbourg, he has from the very hour of his wedding chafed beneath the marital tie, the match having been a mere marriage of convenience arranged by the Kaiserin, and applauded by the German press by order of her imperial husband.

From the first Berlin society knew that August Wilhelm made no pretense of affection, and it is said that when the Princess was informed by her Grecian-nosed mother that the Kaiser had ordered her to marry his son, she burst into tears, and cried:

"Why, I hate him! He is one of the fastest living young men in Berlin! I will never marry him—I would rather kill myself!"

A scene ensued, but the Emperor was inexorable, and had decreed that the pair should marry, and therefore with great ceremony, the wedding took place in Berlin at the end of October, 1908.

She Called the Kaiser Down.

Hardly surprising is it that such a loveless marriage should have turned out unhappily, more especially, too, when it is known that Princess Alexandra, who proved to be a very outspoken person, dared to criticise the All-Highest across his own luncheon table at Potsdam for his easy conscience in religion.

The Emperor actually left the table, boiling over with rage. The Empress sat aghast, while August Wilhelm's wife smiled in triumph. She is a lady with very fixed views upon religion, and had long sought that opportunity of speaking her mind.

"You were quite right, Alec!" whispered her husband when they were alone together. "My father well deserves the lesson you have taught him. He believes himself to represent the Almighty on earth, and he invokes His Name under all circumstances, and in all places. 'Unser Gott,' he says, in his desire to show that Prussia is the most favored of nations by God, and that he is authorized by the Supreme Being to perform Divine work to his own personal aggrandizement."

"Exactly!" said his wife. "That is my argument. When it has suited the Emperor's policy he has become the head of the Mohammedans in his juggling with poor old Abdul-Hamid, and a few months later he prayed to the Virgin in Poland. Yet only eight weeks afterwards he wrote to his sister, declaring that if necessary he will inflict terrible punishment upon any Catholic who dared to oppose his imperial will!"

Of scandals concerning the enterprising Prince August Wilhelm there have been many, all of them carefully hushed up, of course.

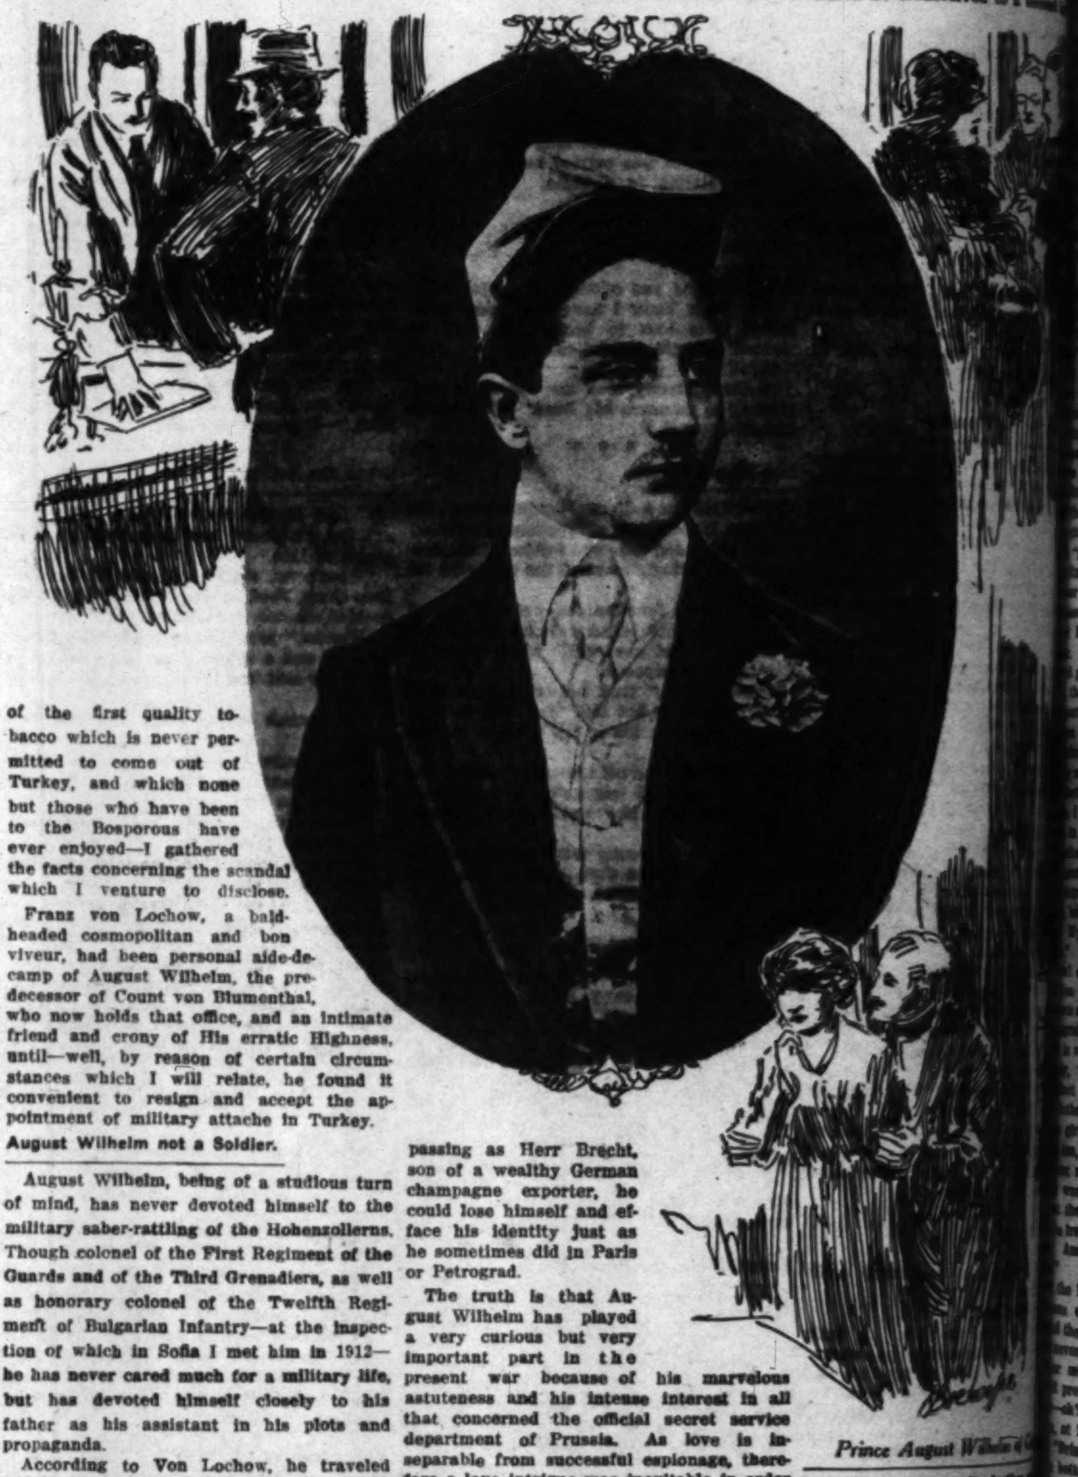
The German public have been told by their newspapers, with painful repetition, how deeply he is attached to his typical German wife, who has never yet learned to wear her clothes save in the manner of the usual stalwart German housewife, the type of yellow-haired women who possess little charm, good manners, or good looks.

The Lokal Anzeiger is never tired of placing the pair upon a pedestal as a model husband and a dutiful wife, yet the truth is they lead what in plain English we term "a cat and dog life." The fact is that Alexandra after her marriage bowed to the inevitable, and would have become a dutiful member of the House of Hohenzollern had it not been for the discovery of her husband's many amours and of his open and flaunting preference for other ladies outside the pale of the imperial court.

While in Constantinople a few months before the war, I became friendly with Maj. Baron Lochow, military attache of the German Embassy. Outwardly he possessed, as do all German diplomats, a veneer of polish, and was a relative of Field-Marshal von Heeringen, who afterwards established for himself a claim to posterity by his maltreatment of the civil population in the Ardennes.

Before the war, the baron was a fair-haired, smiling, round-faced officer of the true Prussian type, thick-necked and closely cropped, yet so merry and easy-going that he was always a welcome guest at the British Embassy.

As we sat together one hot summer's afternoon in the cool room in the Embassy, smoking our exquisite Turkish cigarettes—of the first quality tobacco which is never permitted to come out of Turkey, and which none but those who have been to the Bosporous have ever enjoyed—I gathered the facts concerning the scandal which I venture to disclose.



Franz von Lochow, a bald-headed cosmopolitan and bon viveur, had been personal aide-de-camp of August Wilhelm, the predecessor of Count von Blumenthal, who now holds that office, and an intimate friend and crony of His erratic Highness, until—well, by reason of certain circumstances which I will relate, he found it convenient to resign and accept the appointment of military attache in Turkey.

August Wilhelm not a Soldier.

August Wilhelm, being of a studious turn of mind, has never devoted himself to the military saber-rattling of the Hohenzollerns. Though colonel of the First Regiment of the Guards and of the Third Grenadiers, as well as honorary colonel of the Twelfth Regiment of Bulgarian Infantry—at the inspection of which in Sofia I met him in 1912—he has never cared much for a military life, but has devoted himself closely to his father as his assistant in his plots and propaganda.

According to Von Lochow, he traveled widely incognito up and down Europe, in secret, as his father the Emperor commanded, just as His Majesty's brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, was given the task of trying to "hobble" Great Britain's rulers.

It was Prince Henry of spy-motor-tour fame, that German royalty whom a certain club in Piccadilly feted and accepted his "trophy," who had the audacity to visit King George at Buckingham Palace a week before war was declared, and though the German army was already mobilized, he assured His Majesty, with Prince Lichnowsky the Ambassador as his underling, of the Kaiser's pacific intentions.

With this wolf-in-sheep's-clothing, the Kaiser's son, Prince August Wilhelm, acted constantly in concert, and it is one of his clever intrigues which I am able to disclose.

It seems that the Emperor was constantly calling his studiously quiet son into conference in the many months preceding the completion of his plans for the world war. August Wilhelm is a hater of Britain, quite as bitter as was the late "uncle" Zeppelin, Hans Delbruck, the professor in politics, the spy diplomat von Bernstorff, and Krupp von Bohlen of Essen. But his hatred did not prevent him having a distinct penchant for London and London night-life, wherein, passing as Herr Brecht, son of a wealthy German champagne exporter, he could lose himself and efface his identity just as he sometimes did in Paris or Petrograd.

The truth is that August Wilhelm has played a very curious but very important part in the present war because of his marvelous astuteness and his intense interest in all that concerned the official secret service department of Prussia. As love is inseparable from successful espionage, therefore a love intrigue was inevitable in order to effect a successful coup against the enemies of Prussia, as you will here understand.

I relate the story just as my German informant told it to me.

August Wilhelm's Story.

On February 3, 1913, there arrived at the Hotel Astoria in Petrograd two fair-haired, youngish men whose passports showed them to be Danes, the name of the elder being Axel Larsen, and the younger Erik Wolff. They took rooms overlooking the St. Isaac's Square, and made arrangements for a lengthened stay. They were the representatives of an enginering firm in Copenhagen, and had come to the Russian tain certain contracts regarding bridge to be built at Petrograd and Moscow.

Within a few hours of their ubiquitous "Third Division," or cal police, were eagerly inquiring bona fides, a fact no overlooked travelers.

Vera was his only child. He was devoted to her, and it was his dearest wish that she should marry Paul Petroff, son of the old Gen. Petroff, Governor of Kharhow. The young man, who was employed in the ministry, had proposed to his daughter six months before, and he had given his consent.

She Falls in Love with the Dane.

The pair had been blissfully happy until one day, at a reception given by old Countess Zinovieff at her big house in the Tavritsheskaya, she had met and chatted with Erik Wolff, a stranger in Petrograd. So charming were the manners of the young Dane, that accidentally meeting him in the Hevski next day, they became on friendly terms, and eventually Erik made violent love to her and found his affection reciprocated. She little dreamed that the affable young man had come specially from Berlin to meet her, or that his presence at the countess's reception had been due to the introduction given by a German secret agent.

Very soon, however, Erik had extracted from her a confession that she was tired of Paul, and indeed, as she stood there with him that afternoon of their rendezvous, she repeated her declaration.

"I feel that I can never marry him," she said, "because—because I love you, Erik!" And she raised her face to his and kissed him.

"But you, alas, must!" he said with a sorrowful air. "It is wrong of me to come to see you clandestinely like this, when you are to become the wife of another man."

"Ah! I hate him now, Erik! I try and avoid him all I can," she said, a desperate look upon her pale, handsome countenance.

"But all this is foolish, very foolish, Vera! You must not break with him at present—for both our sakes. Not now, but you might later. Remember what I asked you when I was last here—and what you promised me," he said in a low voice. Then he asked, "Do you still intend to keep that promise?"

"Of course. I have already taken some steps towards fulfilling it. I have spoken to Paul, and he, suspecting nothing, is ready to do anything I wish."

"What excuse have you made to him?" asked Erik eagerly.

"I said that my Uncle Alexander, who lives in Warsaw, desired to ascertain the facts in confidence. And he believes me."

"Well," said her lover. "If you can obtain what I ask, you know what a great service you will render me personally." Then drawing her closer to him he bent and whispered into her ear, "you well know, Vera, how deeply I love you—how, if I but had the means, I would willingly stand in Paul's place and marry you. But without sufficient money—well—"

And he drew a long deep sigh of regret.

"But I thought you said that if I could obtain what you seek it would mean a big sum to you, and would provide means for us both?" the girl said wistfully.

"Certainly, dearest," was his answer; "the future is entirely in your hands. If you can induce Paul to act innocently, because of his love for you, then in a few weeks' time I will return, and we will get away to Sweden or Denmark and marry in spite of all your father's opposition."

"You really mean that?" she asked very seriously. "You really mean that you would marry me, Erik?"

"Did I not promise when I was here before? Of course I will, providing that you are able to get Paul to act as I have suggested," he said. "Is it not a bargain between us?"

And again he bent to her and kissed her upon the lips in a passionate assurance.

He Urges Her to Betray Her Fiance.

"But," he went on, "you must treat Paul with every affection. He must not be allowed for a moment to suspect that your love for him has grown cold. Talk to him of your coming marriage, and make pretense of love, even though it may not be in your heart. Then afterwards beg of him that great favor—for your uncle's sake—to save him from arrest—eh?"

"An excellent idea! Leave it to me. I will tell Paul some story that he will believe," said the Privy Councillor's daughter.

"Good. I have business in Petrograd, therefore I shall remain at the Astoria with my friend Larsen for a week or so," said her lover. "It will, perhaps, be best that we should not meet very often. I have the names written here, in case you have forgotten them," he added, drawing a slip of paper from his vest pocket. "Copy them in your own handwriting, and destroy mine. Documents are always dangerous to keep."

"I will do my best, Erik," she assured him. "But when shall we meet again?"

"At any moment you may wish. A letter to the Astoria will find me. Berrin's the confectioner's in the Gogolya, would be a good place for an accidental encounter, would it not? Remember, I may be watched.'

"Yes. We will meet at Berrin's," she said. "I will telephone Paul, and see him here tonight."

Then for a long time as the light faded they sat together, the Prince holding her in his arms, kissing her again and again, and expressing a wild desire that her efforts with the general's son should be successful, and thus enable them to go abroad and marry.

"Soon, my darling Vera," he said in parting, "soon you will be mine—if only you are alert and discreet."

Half an hour later His Imperial Highness was back again in the sitting-room of the hotel, whence the major awaited him.

"Well," asked the latter, "how goes it?"

"All is well," was the Prince's reply. "The little fool suspects nothing."

As the days went by the ingenious pair pretended to be occupied with several business men in Petrograd, all of whom were Germans who, until the declaration of war, lived there unsuspected, most of them naturalized as true subjects of the Czar.

The two men passing as Danes had presented their cards of identity as important secret agents from Berlin, and in consequence were receiving the hospitality of their ready compatriots. By this means the attention of the Petrograd police was quickly removed from them, and they went to and fro without hindrance.

By day they held many business conferences concerning the proposed bridge at Sologoye and another at Tver, and at night they dined at one or other of the gay restaurants and afterwards remained in the night cafes until the early hours in the morning.

Suddenly one day a stupid-looking Russian girl of the servant class was ushered into Erik Wolff's sitting-room by a waiter who said that she desired to see him personally on urgent business.

His Highness was quickly on the alert. As soon as the waiter had gone the girl said in broken German:

"I have a message, Madamoiselle, my mistress, whom you know, will receive you at 11 o'clock tonight at her house. She will be alone. Will you come?"

"Yes," he said, giving the girl a couple of roubles. "Tell your mistress I will call."

"My mistress told me to say that it was better not to write."

"I quite understand," he said, and then he showed the girl out.

The tryst seemed a mysterious one. Half an hour later both men discussed it. Evidently Vera dared not openly meet the man with whom she had fallen in love.

"It seems as though something unexpected has happened, Erik," remarked the major, addressing the Prince by his assumed name.

"Yes. But she will be alone. Therefore there can be no danger."

Franz von Lochow shook his head dubiously. They were in Russia where the system of contra-espionage was the most complete in all the world. He was distrustful of every man or woman in Petrograd.

Shortly before 11 o'clock that night the two men left the hotel and walked together to the house of the Privy Councillor. The night was very cold, but clear and moonlit, and many sledges swept past them as they walked over the hard beaten snow.

Just before they reached the house they parted, the major to stroll back and His Highness to meet the handsome daughter of Nicholas Stroukoff.

The man in the big fur coat passed within the iron railings, pulled the bell, and waited in eager expectancy. Eleven o'clock at night in Petrograd is not late, for the smarter set turn night into day.

A Surprise for the Prince.

The summons was not answered. Twice he rang, when at last he heard footsteps in the marble hall, and the door was opened by a young man in a smoking jacket.

His Highness started. It was Paul Petroff, whom he had never met but whom he recognized by his photograph in Vera's room.

With true Hohenzollern acuteness he asked in German:

"Is His Excellency at home?"

"No. He is not," replied the young Russian official in the same language. "He is not in Petrograd. Will you leave your name?"

"No," replied the Kaiser's son. "It really does not matter. I am from Copenhagen and am passing through the capital. I will call upon His Excellency on my return. I regret that I have troubled you."

And His Highness bowed and turned away completely mystified, wondering what could have happened. Could a contretemps have occurred? If so, did any danger lurk ahead?"

Nothing could be done that night, therefore he returned to the hotel. It was curious that Vera should have made an appointment with him when Paul was there! Could it be that the ignorant Russian servant, evidently a country girl, had made a mistake in the message?

They had not long to wait for word from the girl, for about 11 o'clock next morning. His Highness had a scribbled line put in his hand making an appointment at the confectioner's at 4 o'clock.

At the time appointed they met amid the crowd of smart people, mostly women, who patronize the place. The encounter was apparently quite an accidental one.

"Come at 10 o'clock tonight," she whispered under her breath as he bowed over her hand. "I shall be alone."

And then he stood aside for her to pass out. Next second his way was barred by a young man—Paul Petroff, who looked askance at his beloved and Erik. The encounter was certainly an awkward one, but in an instant Vera was perfectly calm.

"Oh, Paul! How delightful!" she cried. "I had no idea of meeting you here!" Then, turning to Erik, she said, "Do let me introduce you to my cousin Ivan. He is a son of Uncle Alexander at Warsaw, you know, but he has lived long in Germany."

"I think we met last night," remarked Erik. "I called upon my Uncle Stroukoff, but you told me he was not in Petrograd."

"Oh, yes," laughed the young man pleasantly. "I thought you were a complete stranger."

"Well, so I am," replied the Prince. "I live in Hamburg and have not been in Petrograd for some years. Vera was quite a little girl when I saw her last."

"And yet you recognized her!" exclaimed Petroff.

"By the recent photograph which she sent me a few months ago. Vera is easily recognizable," he added in a tone meant to be complimentary.

They walked together gossiping as far as the end of the Gogolya, when Vera's supposed cousin pleaded an engagement, and promising to call as soon as his "Uncle Stroukoff" returned, bowed and left them.

At 10 o'clock that night Erik ventured to the Privy Councillor's house, and this time the door was opened silently by Vera herself.

"I do hope we are not watched," she whispered apprehensively.

"I think not. Why?" he asked.

"Because, though we successfully misled Paul, he seemed afterwards to doubt whether you could recognise me from the photograph, even though I told him a long tale," she said when they were together in that handsome upstairs room. "I have pointed out that if my uncle in Warsaw is arrested disgrace and probably the Tsar's disfavor will fall upon my father. For days he has remained obdurate, refusing to disclose any fact of a confidential nature. I have begged him; I have cried to him, and I have threatened to break my promise of marriage if he refused to trust me."

"And what has now happened?"

"By the last threat I have triumphed!" said the girl.

"You have them here!" cried Erik, his eyes wide open in eager anticipation.

"No. But he has promised to bring them here tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock. I have told him that my uncle is coming here at 11 o'clock in order to examine them. Paul will not be here, as he fears to be implicated in the matter. Therefore you will come instead of my uncle—eh?"

"Certainly," exclaimed Erik, filled with satisfaction.

"Is the information of such great importance to your friends in Copenhagen?" she asked innocently.

"Yes," he replied briefly, offering, however, no further explanation.

Then seated beside her upon the silken ottoman, he drew her to him and whispered into her ear sweet words of passionate affection which she in her ignorance fully believed.

"As soon as I can convey the information to Copenhagen, I shall receive payment in BATTLE ZONE OF THE LOW COUNTRIES

Heroic Rise of the Dutch Republic. By Frank J. Klingberg, U. S. C.

IT IS a strange fact that the small triangular half-submerged corner of Europe, now divided about equally between Belgium and Holland, has been struggled for as desperately as if it had been the garden of Eden instead of the bottom of the sea. The ocean has been both the friend and the foe of the people living in this low land, nether land, hollow land or Holland. Land reclaimed from the sea has been preserved by dykes and the water of the Rhine carried off by canals above the level of the fields but which are so much below the level of the high tide that gates prevent the waters from piling in on the land.

"Foreign tyranny from the earliest ages, has coveted this meager territory as lustfully as it has sought to wrest from their native possessors those lands with the fatal gift of beauty for their dower; while the genius of liberty has inspired as noble a resistance to oppression here as it ever aroused in Grecian or Italian breasts."

These words of the great American writer, the historian, Motley, who described the heroic Dutch struggle for all time, ring with added meaning today, when another great chapter has been acting itself out in the development of modern liberty. Americans are proud that one of their countrymen, in burning pages, pictured one of the greatest crises in history, setting forth the glowing scenes, the pageant and color, of the Dutch resistance to the strongest, most powerful empire of the world at that time. These scenes of disaster, battles, sieges, excutions, deeds of tyranny, and of superhuman resistance, says Motley, reveal the world's most awful spectacle of human energy, human suffering and human strength to endure.

Caesar discovered the remarkable fighting qualities of the early population of these marshy lands. The people were partly German and partly Celtic. The Belgae were the bravest of all the Celts, Caesar said, and in the Batavians, who lived in a Rhine island, the Romans found the finest cavalry who thereafter fought upon every battlefield of Europe. The Batavians, having won the respect of the Romans, paid no tribute, but furnished their blood. Gaul was "pacified" as every schoolboy knows by hunting and exterminating the fierce tribes like beasts of prey.

Swarms of the wandering nations, Saxons, Franks, Vandals and others trampled over the Netherlands, during the decline of Rome but after the great shake-up, the Belgian portion of the Netherlands is occupied by the Celtic group, and the "free Frisians" closely akin to the Anglo-Saxons have the future Dutch territory.

Charlemagne tried to subdue the chaos, to Christianize and rule over a great empire including the triangle of low lands, but when his empire broke up, this fragment of watery land "which the Romans hardly knew whether to call land or water" fell into five centuries of isolation. At the end of this time, the many different provinces began to be collected under one master, and during the fifteenth century, the Dukes of Burgundy, by successful marriages, by cession, and by conquest, had acquired practically all the seventeen provinces.

Marriages that Changed History.

Two famous marriages then altered the face of the earth. Mary, the Burgundian heiress, married with her possessions into the Hapsburg house, and thence the Netherlands passed to Spain by the marriage of the Archduke Philip to Joanna of Spain; their famous son Charles V thus by a purely personal tie held the different provinces by various titles.

During the interesting Burgundian period wonderful progress had been made. The deformity and niggardliness of the country was to be forgotten as she floated "mermaid-like, upon the waves." "Enriched with the spoils of every clime, crowned with the divine jewels of science and art, she was one day to sing a siren song of freedom, luxury and power." Philip the Good, one of the many interesting characters of the ruling family, founded the celebrated order of the Knights of the Golden Fleece, to typify the woolen fabrics which brought such material splendor and wealth to the country, and also to symbolize the Lamb of God and the humility to be observed by the Knights.

"The fisheries were the nursery of seamen, that race of cool and daring mariners, the militia of the ocean, whose fierce descendants, the 'beggars of the sea,' were to make the Spanish Empire tremble, who swept the sea with brooms at the masthead and fought with their equally fearless English brethren battles lasting four uninterrupted days and nights."

The northeast provinces furnished butter and cheese, Flanders was rich in corn as well as in the busy looms, which reproduced the richest fabrics of the world, even the finest shawls and silks of India. Gorgeous tapestries, silks and linens were exported to all parts of Europe and of the world. Homely and useful manufactured goods were sold in all the markets of the seven seas. The cattle of The Netherlands were the finest in Europe and the agricultural products those that might have been expected from the most fertile soil. Thus the swamps and thickets supported a population of 3,000,000 of the most industrious, the most enterprising, the most skilled artisians and mechanics in the world.

Wonderful Art in Netherlands.

Not only were the Flemish unrivalled in the mechanical arts. Another anomaly as surprising as the development of such wealth in a meager country, was the perfection of art. The Van Eycks and numbers of other painters used brilliant colors and combinations never seen before and were the forerunners of other schools of painters whose wonderful secrets of color have never since been learned. The drab low countries, without the magnificent variety and beauty of landscape of other favored lands, have been the home of art and of fabulous wealth.

Charles V had been able in a few years to collect more than 24,000,000 of ducats from the Netherlands and of 5,000,000 of gold making up the annual imperial income, he received more than 2,000,000 from the thriving hive of industry in the Low Countries, while Spain and the Indies furnished 500,000 each. Thus the small circle inclosing the Netherlands poured out more revenue than all the wealth of the silver mines in Mexico and Peru, supposed to be the never ceasing fountain of Spanish riches.

While Charles V had regarded the Netherlands as his treasury and forced extraordinary subsidies from them for his wars with which they had no concern, yet he was popular there, being a Fleming born. Ghent was his birthplace, and it was his policy to appoint only Flemings to office in the Netherlands and also to put them in high places in Spain. The great sweep of his empire gave the Dutch merchants ample space to trade in, his wars offered employment to those who liked this profession and his military genius and distinction won him the respect of the turbulent, prosperous folk by the sea.

The Emperor boasted that he was born a soldier, saying to officers who flocked from all parts of the empire to serve under him, "I love peace no better than the rest of you; so long as I have these banners I will never leave you idle." This energy and a great calmness of temperament under stress made him the idol of soldiers of fortune. He seemed to be without fear, and along with his warlike tastes, he had good skill in leading a charge, planning a campaign, and handling the art of "victualling his troops," and setting an army into the field.

His strenuous life and personal habits made an old man of him at 55. He had endured every hardship on his campaigns except hunger but forty years of heavy eating left him in the clutches of gout. At dinner he always partook of twenty dishes, reveling in sardine omelettes, eel pies, pickled partridges, fat capons, quince syrups, and flagons of wine, quantities of pastry and sweetmeats, and at midnight came a second supper, the heaviest of the day, for good measure.

Brilliant festivities marked in 1555 his abdication in favor of his son Philip II; a great political spectacle was staged magnificently by the Emperor, who loved display. He chose Brussels for the scene, and in this beautiful city the estates of the Netherlands gathered to witness the abdication. Brussels was 500 years old and famed for its fine churches, and for the exquisite tower of the townhouse "a miracle of needlework in stone, rivaling in the intricacy of its carving the cobweb tracery of that lace which had been for centuries synonymous with the city."

Some of the Men at the Coronation.

The extraordinary group of men gathered here are fascinating subjects of biography in themselves and represent the forces that were to grapple in the great conflict now at hand. William of Orange, upon whose shoulder the rheumatic and suffering old Emperor leaned, was a fortunate youth who seemed born to luxury and magnificence. Distinguished ancestry gave him rank and splendid estates in several countries. He was the intimate special friend of the Emperor, had been his favorite page, and had received all that education and training behind the curtain of the Spanish court could give him.

William gained his name of the "Silent" later in life, while a hostage in France for a treaty. It has been said that he was born to resist Philip and Alva, and this mission began to reveal itself when the French King, Henry, while hunting, confided to him the details of the plot to exterminate all heretics, saying that the Spanish soldiers would be ample for murdering the Netherlanders in their beds. Alva, a fellow hostage, was alone commissioned to plan this destruction, but the Prince of Orange gave no sign by word or look of the blunder made in communicating to him plans which led to much bloodshed before St. Bartholomew's day.

Egmont and Horn, two patriot leaders, Granvelle and Ruy Gomez among the Spanish grandees, were important characters in this brilliant group of men nearly all of whom went to bloody graves or perished by mysterious doom. Philip II was a Fleming in appearance but had the cold and haughty manners of a Spaniard. His hundred churches in Flanders alone sacked, and the gorgeous cathedral of Antwerp was stripped of its rare paintings, images, shrines, manuscripts, and stores of embroideries, etc. For about a week the frenzy lasted; the treasures were not taken for plunder but were destroyed, broken and ground to dust.

This "massacre of the statues" as it has been called robbed the world forever of treasures which could never be replaced.
The Church of our Lady, the beautiful cathedral of Antwerp, "was rich beyond expression. The daring spire alone was a plant of a whole century's growth. The church with its perpetual twilight was a sacred island in the midst of the noisy city streets. A forest of columns rose to form a canopy of foliage, flowers, fruits, birds, beasts, griffins, and the strange vegetation of a fabulous world. The organ seemed like the rushing of the wind through the forest."

Into this sacred place, a mob armed with bludgeons ladders, pulleys, ropes and heights were climbed in order to tear off the "slowly matured fruits of centuries," the age for building and decorating cathedrals having gone never to return.

The Netherlanders had also this summer christened themselves with the name "beggars of the sea," an epithet first applied to them in contempt. The name was adopted at a luxurious banquet, and it then became the fashion to discard gold lace and velvet.
young gentlemen wore on the streets coarse short cloaks of gray, gray hose, common felt hats, and carried beggars' pouches and bowls.

Alva now arrived with a programme intended to make this mummery and church sacking a desperate business for the whole people. The notorious Council of Blood was appointed to try offenders, and had ready-made orders to dispatch the leaders. The Counts of Egmont and Horne, arrested treacherously at the home of Alva, where they had gone by courteous invitation, were both good Catholics but had incurred the suspicion of Philip. After strange adventures, elaborately devised by Philip according to custom, they passed from apartments hung solidly with black into prisons from whence they were "released," so promised the Duke to their wives, but by execution.

The armed invasion of The Netherlands was intrusted to the greatest soldier of the age. The Duke of Alva was now in his sixtieth year. It was said that no man of his time had besieged so many cities, fought so many battles, or had so much knowledge of military science and experience. In his youth he had performed many feats of romance such as his mad ride from Hungary to Spain and back again in seventeen days to visit his bride. He had fought the Turks and won brilliant victories for Charles V in wars with the German princes.

Could not Subdue The Netherlands.

He was given 10,000 of the finest troops in Spain; the privates were in full engraved gilded armor, and the musketeers, like officers, were attended each by a servant who carried his piece for him except in battle. The force went by ship to Genoa, then overland through Savoy and Lorraine.
The Spanish soldiers were the boldest, most terrible in the world, with a reputation for such valor and ferocity that panic went before them.

William the Silent and his brother Louis collected a motley force of Germans,
Huguenots, and exiles with which they entered the provinces, hoping that the people would rise in the revolt. The brisk and eager Spaniards were defeated by excessive valor in the Battle of Heiligerlee. Louis of Nassau had drawn up his forces on rising ground in the midst of some watery pastures enclosed by the Ems and the Lippe, from which peat had been taken out in large squares, a green scum replacing the turf.
The Spaniards fell into these pools while the "beggars" without wetting their shoes fell upon them and shoved them back with them to a muddy death.

Alva now banished all the Dutch leaders on penalty of death and himself marched against Louis defeating him in the Battle of Jemmingen. Louis had chosen a position of great danger between the foe and the river Ems, in order to force his mutinous mercenary army to fight. Surrender was impossible as the Spaniards gave no quarter; so was fight. Louis himself helped to cut the dikes and the water had risen waist

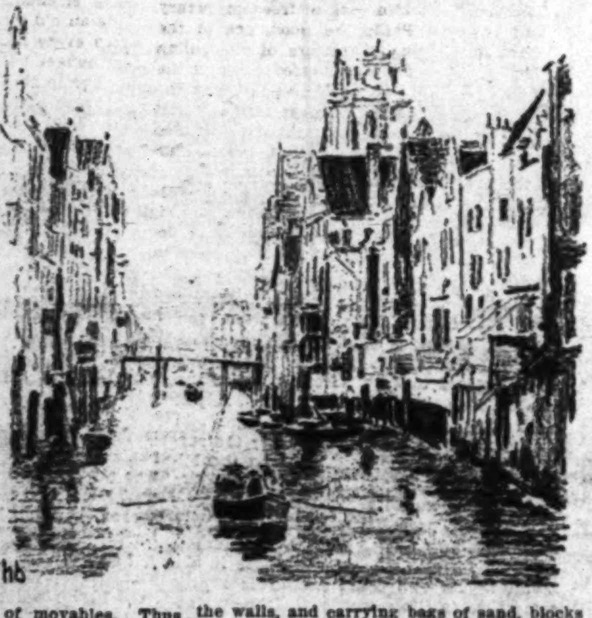
Surrender was the Spaniards gave no quar- fight. Louis himself helped to and the water had risen waist high at points when the advance guard of Alva stopped the work and a frightful massacre followed in which 7000 rebels were killed and only seven Spaniards.

Such an incredible discrepancy in the numbers slain occurred again and again. Defeat followed defeat until it has been well said that the Dutch won their independence by disasters, not victories. Undisciplined, untrained troops, whatever their numbers simply could not stand against the skilled veteran of Spain. Later on, Maurice, the son of William, with a tiny army, trained to fight and to fortify, won surprising victories on land, but during the early part of the conflict, The Netherlanders on land were simply butchered by the thousand. Whenever the Dutch could get a boat, they were victorious; even old tubs floated in upon a few feet of water when the dikes were cut gave the Hollander his chance and he slew his foe with a boldness and vigor that was appalling.

After the Battle of Jemmingen Alva avoided a pitched battle, knowing that victory was necessary to his enemy. These wary tactics wore out the patience of the ill-paid forces of William; they began to desert, no city opened its gates, and the Prince was forced to retire from the country for a time. The Netherlanders were crushed by the reign of terror, and being slow to move, the time was premature f… them to risk all.



Alva had promised Philip torrents of wealth from The Netherlands. Confiscations were to furnish the stream of gold "fathoms deep." His greedy expectations had fallen short and he now demanded the most extortionate tax upon the wealth of all, known as the tenth penny. He levied a tax of one per cent. on all property, a tax of 5 per cent. on every sale of land, and one of 10 per cent. upon every sale of movables. Thus commodities were taxed four times before reaching the consumer.

Merchants declined to sell, bakers to bake, and tapsters to tap. In spite of the example of hanging a few bakers by their doorways, the Duke could not keep business going or banks from falling. The people took to the sea as pirates against Spanish commerce, many emigrated from the country, and following the capture of Brille at the mouth of the Meuse by the "beggars," the whole Northern Netherlands rose. Flushing on the mouth of the Schedlt, and the chief towns of Holland and Zealand declared for the Prince of Orange. Amsterdam and Middleburg were still held by the Spanish

Other great encouragements to the rebels were the gain of favor at the French court, and the taking of Mons by Louis, assisted by the Hugenots. A great blow now fell upon William, however, in the news of St. Bartholomew's massacre in France. Mons was retaken and city after city in the southern provinces or what is now Belgium returned to allegiance. Mons, famous in the present war, was cruelly treated, the terms of its surrender broken, and a prosperous city near Antwerp, Mechlin, now Malines, given over to pillage for three days. Catholics and Protestants suffered everything from the brutal soldiery.

A Battlefield of Ice.

The dramatic siege of Harlem and of Layden are most noteworthy among a long series of military events centering around the names of places familiar in the daily papers of 1918. Harlem situated on the neck of land outlining the Zuyder Zee, which was formed by the great inundation of the thirteenth century, was the key to the northern portion of Holland. The siege of seven months was marked by many striking events.

A little fleet of armed vessels coming to the aid of Harlem had been frozen up in the neighborhood of Amsterdam. The crews fortified themselves by digging a wide trench around the fleet, and when Don Frederick, the son of Alva, sent a force of men over the ice to attack this novel fortress, they were met by a brilliant band of musketeers on skates. The Hollanders, used to winter sports, rapidly slew the Spanish by hundreds on this slippery battleground. The astounded Spaniards wrote long descriptions of their experiences and being quick to adopt the new, began to practice on the ice, 7000 pairs of skates having been ordered by Alva.

The garrison was small, about 4000 only, but the people resolved stout-heartedly to hold out to the end. The beautiful city, one of the largest in The Netherlands, was very weak, and had a peculiar position, on a thread of land which could be crossed in an hour's walk, with Harlem Lake and other waters on all sides. Don Frederick drew up his forces over the ice and built forts to face the weak but turreted walls. Under cover of a frozen curtain of mist the heroic people brought contributions to the city using sledges on the ice; even the children on skates braved the December cold to help.

Three hundred fighting women armed with sword, musket and dagger took part in some of the fiercest conflicts of the siege. Led by a widow 47 years old of a very distinguished family, they fought both within and without the walls, and carrying bags of sand, blocks helped in the digging of trenches, repairing te walls, and carrying bags of sand, blocks of stone, even carting the statues from the churches to throw into the breaches. Terrible fighting took place in the tunnels and mining operations carried on by both sides, each side working daily at subterranean attacks.

The women and old men built a fine halfmoon of new masonry concealed within the crumbling old walls. Rations grew short, and carrier pigeons were used to carry messages to and from the Prince, begging for relief. By June the people were eating linseed, rapeseed, cats, dogs and mice; when these were gone they boiled ox and horse hides, they ate shoe leather, and picked the grass and nettles from the cemeteries. They marched daily on the walls, beating drums and wearing the rich robes of the priests taken from the churches, in order to show their dauntless spirit to the enemy.

Hideous Massacres.

After many disasters, the defenses and defenders were so worn down that the city fell. The admiration wrung from the iron headed Duke himself did not save the city from the most horrible butcheries in the massacre that followed. The general massacre ordered regularly to follow a victory had been systematized by the ferocious Spanish soldier of the age and was so well known that the men decided to put the women on the inside of a living square of men and fighting their way out, die all together.

Don Frederick, believing that the inhabitants would fire the city and burn themselves with the buildings, sent in a special letter, promising pardon. But breaking his word a band of executioners chopped away until 2300 heads had fallen; many were drowned, tied two and two. The defense of Harlem is said to have won the independence of Holland. Such a story as that of Harlem is a national asset of everlasting power.

Resquesens was sent to relieve Alva who had found the "men of butter" the hardest to crush of all who had resisted him. The siege of Leyden was begun with the people fully resolved to drown themselves rather than be taken. The sea was fifteen miles away but it was brought to the city. After the dikes were cut, there was great anxiety as the waters did not come in upon the land in sufficient depth to bring the boats. Great September and October gales, however, piled the waters up and many dramatic moments occurred as the 200 boats arrived to succor the city. The flotilla stuck at several barriers, while the starving city climbed the towers to watch for the relief. The leaves were strippd from the trees when maltcake, used as a bread substitute, was gone, milk cows were distributed in tiny portions, even the blood from the slaughter houses was lapped by starving wretches. The gutters were searched for food, and rats were a luxury when, at last, the rising water brought panic to the foe.

The terrifying sensation of seeing the ocean surround them overwhelmed the Spaniards, who were not seamen. Their paths and roads sank out of sight, and the wild Zealanders sprang out of their boats to harpoon them like fish. The dikes were crumbling and during a pitch black night, the city wall fell, opening the city to the foe. The enemy, however, hearing the crash, too brave to fear man, believed the hand of God was against them, and fled from the black waters and the tempest. Bread was thrown from the boats to the weeping multitudes, who gathered in the churches to sing their hymns of thanksgiving.

The story of Antwerp and the arrival of Don John, the most picturesque character of the period, belong to the final chapter of the story.

Early Days in California.

we kept all amused and drove dull care away. It was an awfully hot day, the wind came from the north, a yellow haze covered the mainland, and the beach was broiling. Those on the veranda, the males, were in the coolest place, if there were such a place and really all were suffering. Haddock was gasping, "It never was hot like this in Chicago," whereupon we one and all denied its being hot. We chimed in with the fact we had a nice breeze where we sat. It never was hot at Avalon, and the thermometer never was over 70 deg., and wasn't now. Arguments were started, Haddock was certain it was hot and he didn't have a fever. The only way to prove we were right was to produce the thermometer, which I proceeded to do. There it hung in the hallway, and horrors, it registered 95 deg. Not having ever up to that time confessed that Chicago was cooler than Avalon, I did not propose to give in now, so tore the lying weather gauge off the wall and put it in the ice cooler. When the mercury had become more reasonable I brought it out and showed the proof that the heat was all a myth in Haddock's mind.

The thermometer registered only 55 deg., and as we all claimed it couldn't tell a lie that settled the question. Avalon was better than Chicago after all, but as Haddock eyed the tally, the mercury slowly rose until the thermometer was snatched out of his hand, and taken away with the remark that if the fever in his Chicago body got rampant much longer the poor implement would be broken. Heated remarks continued but towards evening Chicago cooled and we remained happy ever afterwards.

We arranged to get up some entertainment every evening or so, there was plenty of musical talent on the island, and some very successful concerts were held in the ladies' parlor at the Metropole. Among our amateur artists that gave all so much pleasure singing, were Miss Adele Stoneman, daughter of Gen. Stoneman, the Governor; Miss Williams of Asheville, N. C.; Mrs. Schallert, now Mrs. Arnold Burkelman; Mrs. Kannon, Miss Florence Perry, now Mrs. Fern Johnson, Mrs. Beeson, Mrs. Stella Matthews, and Mrs. Sumner, and there were always plenty of gentlemen to help amuse and make up quartettes.

One day we had a mock trial. Someone was arrested for throwing an empty can in the sea and was promptly put in confinement on the hotel veranda, until his trial could take place. Judge Alexander Campbell presided, Frank Polley was one of the attorneys, I was arresting officer, and we had some lawyers taking part. All entered into the spirit of the thing, and the attorneys objected to everything, the judge overruled them and finally insisted that the court was not a court of justice but a court of injustice, so what could be done? It was a constant "Sit down," "You're fined." Altogether the trial caused a good deal of fun but broke up in a riot when the prisoner was sentenced to catch clams for bait for a week.

The Catalina Complexion.

Here is a description of the proper Catalina complexion as given in the Catalina Jew Fish:

"From San Pedro to Avalon, yellow verging into green, blue nose and white lips—the first stage. Then after landing at Avalon the complexion becomes pink, rather blotchy. The third stage is red and purple with lobster nose; fourth vermilion, slight peeling of the skin, and general appearance of an active volcano. Fifth, deep red with light brown trimmings. Sixth, terra cotta turned up with mahogany, the nose a fiery red. Seventh, mahogany with terra cotta points getting deeper and richer according to exposure." Visitors could readily be spotted as tenderfeet or old residents by the color of their face, and no amount of cosmetics could change the tone or deceive a veteran. You understand the aim of everyone was to be an old timer on the island, and not one of the newly overs.

As it was hoped to make the island popular as a summer resort without frills and furbelows, to make the visitors happy and comfortable without having to dress up and put on style, I being mayor and council, called the latter to a meeting at which I presided. As a councilman I proposed and as another councilman I seconded a resolution that no "fancy hats, plug or otherwise, no boiled shirts, dress suits, or patent leather pumps, be allowed to be worn or put on exhibition." As mayor, I signed the ordinance, and posted it on the veranda where all could read it and it became law.

There was a general rejoicing and from that time on the free and easy negligee costume was adopted as the proper caper, and even the Saturday dances were held by people costumed in flannel outing and yachting costumes.

Some Climate.

The wonderful climate of Catalina Island was heralded everywhere and doctors began to send their patients over there to recuperate. Here is a story, of course vouched for:

"Patient, who has been to Catalina, to doctor who has just examined him: Well, doctor, how do you find me?

"Doctor: How long did you stay at Catalina?

"Patient: Six months.

"Doctor: Well, you stayed too long. When you went over, you had one lung, now you have three."

I hope my readers won't think I am writing an advertisement for Catalina Island. Nothing of the sort, but I am free to confess that I am now and always have been in love with the place, and think there is nothing like it. The Mediterranean can't hold a candle to it.

Mr. Shatto and I always intended to make the island a great sportsman's resort, stock it with wild animals, deer, antelope, partridges, pheasants, wild turkeys and so on. There are no wild animals to prey on the game, the only vermin being a small flying fox, a sort of squirrel. But things changed and the programme was never carried out.

When the Hotel Metropole was built, it was never dreamed what a business would be done. It was always supposed that people would have their cottages there for summer recreation, and that a few people would use the hotel. There were not enough rooms for a crowd and what there were, were too small. However, we had such a rush and the place became so popular that I was sorely pressed to know where to house the guests. We put up some tents which helped somewhat, had cots in the passages and even gave blankets and pillows for the surplus to sleep in the hall, some on the billiard tables and some on the floor. We could feed them all right, but the sleeping was a hard proposition. Still there was little grumbling.

I soon learned who was the boss in the families. As two could not dress at the same time in the same room, I knew whoever came down first was the second fiddle, and the one that remained in bed had all the say. Consequently if it was the hubby, I kept him happily employed, if it was wifey she was looked after. In this way I was able to reduce the work of entertaining down to a fine point. But when three girls all occupied the same single bed, I had to watch closely to see who was last, and sometimes then got fooled as to the boss.

As the steamer during the week came over every other day at first, the ice used to melt, and when 1000 pounds left the mainland, only about 500 pounds reached the hotel. We had a large cool storeroom, but meat easily spoiled, and fruit as well. One time I ordered six dozen chickens, intending to keep them ready to kill, but a mistake was made in the order and instead of sending them alive they were killed, plucked and beautifully packed in a barrel. The storekeeper notified me the chickens hadn't come thinking the barrel contained crockery or hardware, and, being pushed for time, the cask wasn't unpacked for a few days. So of course when it was reached all the contents were spoiled and had to be thrown away. So instead of chicken for the Sunday dinner, fresh fish took its place.

A splendid array of the younger element patronized the island during the summer season and made things lively. In fact, some of them set me down as an awful ogre and a semi-barbarian when I insisted upon their going to bed instead of dancing and singing on the hotel veranda after the rest of the guests had retired to sleep.

Here are some of the popular ones: Miss Susie Patton, afterwards Mrs. LeMoyne Wills; her sister, Miss Annie Smith, now Mrs. Hancock Banning; the Misses Sullivan, afterwards Mrs. Stephens and Mrs. Dick Lacy; the Misses Lacy; Miss Polley, later on Mrs. Harry Macomber; Miss Lulu Glassell, who married Dr. Shorb. Then there were the J. C. Clines, Capt. W. Banning, J. B. and Hancock Banning, John Moore, Harry Merryman, Frank Polley and his brother Harry, Philip Glassell, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Borden, Miss Borden, and a host of others that my space precludes mentioning.

You can imagine from reading over this list the kind of a time there was, with the girls ready for a sail, a swim or a dance at any time, day or night; with Hancock Banning playing his cornet at all hours, and all up to some innocent deviltment, all rules defied, and "What are you going to do?" the question asked when I insisted upon order. My, but the dear ones enjoyed themselves, and in spite of my assumed dignity, so did I.

The Fire.

We had a catastrophe, however, that brought the season at Catalina to a close earlier than was intended. One night towards the end of September, about 2 o'clock a.m., cries of "Fire, Fire!" awakened us all and an intense blaze lit up the whole heavens. The kitchen, a one-story wing at the back of the hotel, was on fire and threatened to spread to the whole house. The water mains had been plugged and tampered with so that we could not use the hose. As soon as possible we organized a bucket brigade from the sea, using wash pitchers, slop bowls, wash tubs, a bucket or two and any container we could find. Ladders were raised, I used an ax and cut away the roof where it joined the main building and others threw the salt water on the flames. Dan McFarland came over from the Aggie with his guests and crew, and others in the bay did the same. We had no lack of help, but precious little apparatus, but wonder behold, the fire was put under control and the only bad damage was to the kitchen roof and one side.

There were some curious scenes that, after the fire was over, were laughable. One lady was discovered sitting on a sofa in full calling costume so far as the upper part was concerned, best hat, diamond earrings, necklace, bracelets, sealskin coat, etc., but no shoes and stockings, and only a night dress as a skirt. A gentleman, who forgot he was still in his pajamas, was seen lugging down a great trunk from the third story, with all his clothes packed in it, and with the lock snapped and the key inside. One couple came down carrying their clothes; the lady went to the ladies' parlor to dress and found she had her husband's pants instead of her skirt. However, all was straightened out at last, but the scare sent many home, so we decided to call the season over and shut up the Hotel Metropole for repairs.

A Queer Mining Scheme.

In 1889 Mr. Henry Defty, a mining engineer from England, went over to Catalina Island on a prospecting trip and claimed to have found sufficient evidence of mineral deposits to warrant his forming a corporation to work the ore. Not wishing to encumber the property with leases and so forth, Mr. Shatto finally agreed to give an option to purchase the whole island, including of course mineral rights, for the sum of $400,000. So Mr. Defty contented himself with this proposition, took the option, and set to work on the purchase.

A short time afterwards, he returned from England with Col. C. F. Smith who represented a London syndicate, and after a thorough inspection, they decided to close the purchase and paid $80,000 towards the price. Instead of a deed and mortgage, an agreement to convey was only given, the purchasers being the International Mining Snydicate of London, signed for by Col. C. F. Smith.

I was left in charge of the island as before, but nothing ever was done in the way of improvements, and the advertising stopped. I forget how long after this we began to suspect a promoters' scheme, but it turned out to be that; Col. Smith never came out again, no representative turned up, and no one knew for certain what was going to happen.

The property, of course, still belonged to Mr. Shatto, subject to his agreement to sell to the English company. However, the interest and deferred payments were defaulted, and no satisfactory explanation was ever made from headquarters.

Then an unfortunate railway accident took place. Mr. Shatto was riding in a caboose, returning from a mine inspection, and while asleep on a bench in the car, was violently thrown down when some cars were carelessly shunted, so that his neck was broken.

It was a sad, sad ending to an active, upright, life, but he luckily suffered no pain. His life was snuffed out instantly, greatly mourned by a large acquaintance.

The island now changed hands. The Bannings became the owners, and organized the Santa Catalina Island Company. It was somewhat of a job straightening kinks in the title. I helped where I and Mr. Lowe of the Banning Co went over to London to finally close syndicate interest and all was closed

Thus my agency closed, and from time on I became only an interested tator, always pleased to visit the old but always regretting the leaving.

Catalina Island will ever have a place in my heart and continue to be back upon as the spot where so many times took place. Vale.

PAPA FISH THE MOTHER.

Mr. Black Bass—Housewife. By Jeanne Judson.

[illegible] and Maeterlinck may have discovered all that can be known of the domestic arrangements of the bee, but [illegible] for one Dwight Lydell of [illegible] Park, Mich., to reveal to a shuddering masculine world the startling feminine tendencies of the small-mouthed [illegible]

[illegible] fisherman who has ever tried to snare [illegible] black bass—the gamest [illegible] fish not excepting trout—would have suspected him of believing that [illegible] is in the home. Yet such is [illegible] truth as proved by Mr. Lydell during fifteen years of close study. Mr. [illegible] has lived with small-mouthed black [illegible] as fully as anything without gills and [illegible] with a fish.

[illegible] Mr. Lydell first attempted the [illegible] small-mouthed black bass in the [illegible] State Fish Hatchery he was [illegible] by all the fishwise men in America. [illegible] said that the small-mouthed black [illegible] too delicate and too wild to ever [illegible] successfully in a hatchery. Yet [illegible] for small-mouthed black bass [illegible] and Mr. Lydell determined to [illegible] the result that he is now considered the greatest authority on small-[illegible] black bass in America, and the [illegible] hatcheries have adopted the methods [illegible] he developed in his State hatchery [illegible]

[illegible] rearing of fish Mr. Lydell, as well as [illegible] fish experts, had gone on the theory [illegible] woman's place is in the home, and [illegible] the failure to rear black bass [illegible] method should be understood) had [illegible] to this mistake.

[illegible] matter of fact the frivolous female [illegible] bass cares nothing at all for [illegible] or the rearing of children," says [illegible]. "The men of the family, however, [illegible] intensely paternal. As the season [illegible] approaches Mr. Black Bass busily [illegible] himself in the building of a home. [illegible] nose he pushes small stones around on the bottom of the shallow water of the pond until he has made a saucer-shaped hollow about two feet long. One side is usually sheltered under a log or rock. When the basin is formed Mr. Bass cleans and polishes the small pebbles with his tail, fanning away every particle of dirt and vegetation until the little nest shines like gold through the dark water in contrast to the weed-clogged surroundings.

"When the home is finished Mr. Black Bass goes out in search of a wife. This is sometimes a difficult matter, as the ladies are not at all domestic. However, Mr. Black Bass is never discouraged. He leads one lady to his bower and if she flips a scornful fin and departs he goes in search of another. But just where peaceful domesticity should begin it ends, which may be one reason why Miss Black Bass is so reluctant to go into the charming home prepared for her.

He Drives His Wife Out.

"No sooner are the eggs deposited on the smooth, golden pebbles than Mr. Black Bass in a great rage drives his wife from the house, declaring her to be unfit to care for the children. There are only about 5000 of them anyway, and he can take care of them himself. He hovers over the nest night and day, fanning the spawn clean of sand which might smother them, and making vicious attacks on enemy fish that show a tendency to make a meal of his precious offspring. To be sure there are only about 5000 children in the family, but they take up twenty-four hours a day of their father's time."

Mr. Lydell, unfortunately, has not made a study of the activities of Mrs. Black Bass after being driven out of her husband's house, so no one knows how she spends her time. It is probable, however, that she attends mothers' meetings and literary clubs, or perhaps she gives lectures to the men, telling them the latest development in child culture.

"Most people seem to think that fish spring full-fledged from the spawn and then go promptly about their own affairs," said Mr. Lydell. "If this were true Mr. Black Bass would find the duties and responsibilities of fatherhood comparatively light, but like many other tasks the care of 5000 infant black bass is much more difficult than it looks.

Eggs Hatch in Six Days.

"The eggs hatch in five or six days, but the fish are still helpless. They have no eyes and no mouths, either large or small, and are fed by means of a food sack which is absorbed as the fish body develops. All the time this food sack is being absorbed—a week or more—the babies lie close in the nest, watched by the father, who keeps the water running clean and clear over them by fanning with his tail, and guards them from the predatory fish who might enjoy making a meal of these water babies. Of course, in a State hatchery pond there is really no danger from this source, but Mr. Black Bass patrols as diligently as if the waters were full of these enemies.

"When the babies do finally develop eyes and fins and tails and mouths, the father gives up the long fast which he has maintained during the nursing period. All this time he has not stopped to eat or sleep. Now the babies must eat, so Father Black Bass goes out in search of food, swimming proudly away with his children, which have now reached that stage called 'fry,' swimming around them to keep them together, and leading them to the best fields for food, which consists chiefly of water fleas. Just how long the father continues to swim with his children is not definitely known, for before he deserts them they have grown large enough to be taken out of the pool and put in the tanks in which they are shipped to the lakes and streams where they provide 'sport' for thousands of fishermen who do not know or care whether they are nursed by the masculine or the feminine side of the house.

"Another thing that I have learned about this most interesting of my fish is that an equal number of males and females must be put in the pond. If the males predominate they fight and kill each other during the mating season and they are so busy fighting that no families are raised. I don't know why the males assume all the home duties. They are certainly not effeminate, a thing which should be carefully noted by men who want to keep women in 'their proper sphere'; instead they are the gamest fresh water fish in the world. Not only do they fight each other, but any fish that comes near the nest. They will even strike at one of the attendants if he happens to come too near the nest when feeding the other fish.

Father the Dressy One.

"Another curious thing about the small-mouthed black bass is that it is the male who seems to care most for dress. In almost every other variety only the female changed her 'dress' during the courting season. But the small-mouthed black bass changes his sober colors and dons bright yellow stripes and mottles when he goes courting.

"The men, in other words, take a vital interest in children and clothes, things supposed to be in women's sphere, while the women do not seem to care about either; but that doesn't change the fact that they will fight viciously on the slightest provocation. In small-mouthed black bass society the 'female of the species' is certainly not more deadly than the male.

"No one who has lived with fish and understands them as I do will ever call a stupid person a 'fish.' Fish are as intelligent as dogs or horses and far more interesting. The aquatic world is one of perpetual interest and fascination. I have learned a few things about fish, but a whole lifetime is really not sufficient for the study. Every variety has its peculiar habits and every individual fish has a personality of its own."

The Strain of the Wolf.

[illegible] for it—and then we shall be free [illegible]," he added.

[illegible] Lochow, whom Paul had not seen, [illegible] upon Nicholas Stroukoff's house [illegible] the next night, and saw the [illegible] enter carrying a good-sized [illegible]. Then he waited in a neighboring doorway and half an hour later saw [illegible]. Then he dashed around to the [illegible] report to the Prince.

[illegible] We ought to finish our work [illegible]

[illegible] passed slowly until at a quarter to [illegible] His Highness left the hotel, and on [illegible] the house was admitted in se[illegible] Vera. The two servants who re[illegible] caretakers in the absence of her [illegible] slept in a wing at the extreme rear [illegible] premises.

[illegible]" whispered the girl as her lover [illegible] in the wide marble entrance [illegible] warm atmosphere of which was [illegible] with the scent of flowers. "All has [illegible]. I have them upstairs! Make no [illegible]. The girl Marya may not yet have [illegible] bed."

[illegible] upstairs, the pair at last entered [illegible] tiny little room, when, from be[illegible] couch Vera drew the leather bag [illegible] detested Paul had brought to her. [illegible] opened it with eager fingers, and [illegible] found four well-worn black leather [illegible] each filled with a miscellaneous [illegible] of papers and reports, all of which [illegible] carefully indexed. The back of each [illegible] number.

[illegible] were dossiers from the archives of [illegible] political police in the Ministry of the [illegible], those secret reports which are kept [illegible] regarding the doings and opinions [illegible] prominent person in Russia.

[illegible] make some extracts," Erik said [illegible] and seating himself at the small [illegible] set near the curtained window, [illegible] on the light and began rapidly [illegible] as she translated from Russian into [illegible]

The first dossier she opened was the one he most of all desired to examine and make extracts. It concerned the private life and the actions of one Boris Sturmer, a civil servant employed in the Ministry of Finance.

Rapidly he turned over document after document, some in German, some in French, and many in Russian.

They were engaged upon the third dossier, that of a merchant named Nepenine, when a movement behind them caused them to start and look up.

Paul Petroff stood before them!

"So, Vera! This is your uncle—eh?" he asked in a hard voice.

But without a second's hesitation His Imperial Highness, who was a very athletic man, sprang up and planted a heavy blow directly between the eyes of the intruder, sending him backwards over a small table and hurling a great glass bowl of roses to the floor. The two men struggled desperately upon the carpet, for both were equally matched in strength, while Vera screamed:

"Spare him, Erik! Oh, spare him. He will say nothing—for my sake!"

Next second Von Lochow, who had watched outside and seen Petroff enter, dashed in to render his imperial master assistance.

Erik had obtained the information he had sought—it only now remained to get away in safety.

To do so was not an easy matter. Vera had fallen upon the couch in a dead faint, while, in struggling, Petroff struck his head violently against the corner of the high Russian stove and had also lapsed into insensibility

Cutting down some of the blind cords they quickly bound and gagged the young man, then dragging him into an adjoining room, which proved to be the grand salon, they found other cords, and with them tied him to one of the two marble columns which supported the center of the great apartment.

Returning to Vera, the men quickly bound and gagged her also, and carrying her to the salon tied her to the opposite column. Then they closed the door, and taking more papers from all the dossiers, they left the house.

Two hours later they were in the express for the German frontier, not, however, before they had posted an anonymous note to the chief of police, disclosing the treachery of Vera and Paul, and that they would be found in the house of Nicholas Stroukoff.

The story of Vera Stroukoff and Paul Petroff were not believed by the police, for both are still in prison on charges of espionage, while the girl's father, Nicholas Stroukoff, was degraded and banished to the Caucasus, where he died soon afterwards.

Electricity Speeds Production.

fect of artificial light on the growth and ripening of plants. Beans were grown in beds upon which strong electric lights in reflectors were played continually. The experiments were conducted in midwinter during a period of seventy-three days, running from December to February, in a greenhouse that averaged 18 to 20 deg. centigrade. As a check test other beans were grown at the same time subject only to natural light.

Dr. Steinmetz gives as the result of his experiments the conclusion "that under the influence of intense artificial illumination the plants have grown and brought fruit in a little more than half the time required under daylight alone. . . ." It was found to be an expensive experiment, though, so far as current electric light costs go, and therefore not at all practical for the average home gardener, if you please.

Making the Hens Lay.

As a result of research work conducted by Loring Pratt at the Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J., they have obtained information from various sources to the effect that hens can be forced to increase their production by means of electric lights installed in the hen houses. The general principle seems to be that by turning on the lights early in the morning during the winter months, when the days are short, and leaving them on until daylight, then turning them on at nightfall and leaving them on for a few hours, the hens have as long a day as in the summer months, get more exercise and consequently produce more eggs.

It is estimated that the increases thus obtained vary between 35 and 500 per cent., with an average of about 100 per cent. It is said that the poultrymen who have tried this system think that it has in no cases injured the hens. Dr. Raymond Pearl, Orono, Me., thinks that this practice, if carried on regularly, would injure the breeding qualities of the eggs, in that the eggs would be less fertile. He questions also whether the extra eggs obtained would more than compensate for the cost of the electricity.

There is some difference of opinion about the whole matter, and it remains to be further developed before the feasibility of such a proposition on a commercial basis, aside from the scientific experiment, can be established. J. H. Drevenstedt, editor of the American Stockkeeper and Fancier of Boston, says there is nothing to this proposition. Prof. Luther Banta of the New York School of Agriculture, Alfred, N. Y., says he has evidence in the form of definite data "which is certainly convincing and apparently conclusive." He declares that "artificial illumination has been found of permanent advantage only with nonbreeding stock, because the excessive winter-egg production causes a serious reduction in fertility and hatchability with breeders the succeeding spring." This he says, is the conclusion of ten years' work in the State of Washington.

All of which is interesting when one considers that the ordinary hen averages 12[illegible] eggs a year, while the American hens produce a yearly average of more than 40,000,000,000 eggs. The value of the annual egg production is about equal to the total cotton crop of the country, more than twice as much as the net proceeds of all the freight and passenger traffic of all the railroads of the country, and worth five times as much as the total amount of gold and silver produced in the same length of time by the mines of the United States.

Not Quite Sure.

An insurance agent was filling out an application blank.

"Have you ever had appendicitis?" he asked.

"Well," answered the applicant. "I was operated on, but I have never felt quite sure whether it was appendicitis or professional curiosity."—[Grit.

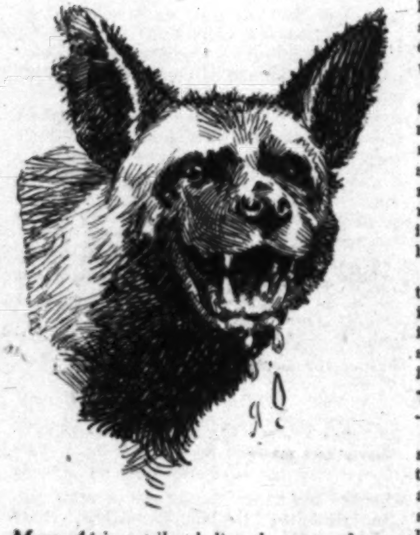
THE WHY OF SACRED ANIMALS.

Strange Beliefs. By Don Marlin.



Many African tribes believe human souls pass into hyenas.

FROM the day that Eve transacted business with the snake in the Garden of Eden animals became sacred, and being sacred they were naturally worshiped.

Readers of the Bible will recall how Aaron made the Golden Calf in the wilderness, how Jeroboam set up calves for worship in Bethel and Dan, and how one of the four cherubim of prophetic vision had the face of an ox, the king of tame beasts. In this connection it is interesting to remember that one derivation given from the Hebrew word "Elouhim" God, is from "oul" meaning horn.

These so-called deities, tame as far as possible, were of almost every conceivable variety, from the vulture to the swallow or goose, from the lion to the shrew mouse, from the hippopotamus to the sheep and the monkey, from the crocodile to the tortoise and the cobra, from the carp to the eel and from the scorpion to the scarab beetle. Just how these respective animals became the symbol of good and evil among the primitive and barbarous of men is still somewhat in doubt. On the subject Sir George Grey, says, "The natives represent their family names as being derived from some animal common in the district, which really means that they believe him to be their protector, thus they pray to him and he becomes sacred."

One thing, however, is certain each tribe considers itself to be descended from the object of its reverence. And only animals which were either harmful or of great service were made the subject of a special cult. By some it is held that this worship of animals has its origin in metempsychosis, or in the belief that animals are inhabited by the souls of dead ancestors.

The African believes in the transmigration of souls into hyenas. And Strabo says that, "The inhabitants of Sais held sheep sacred, those of Lykopolis, the wolf, those of Hermopolis, the dog and ape, those of Memphis the baboon, the Thebans the eagle, the people of Leontapolis, the lion, the people of Mendesiea, the goat, and those of Anthribite the shrew mouse."

Or a more plausible theory is that which the ancient Egyptians had that if the whole tribe vows not to kill a particular animal, a band of friendship is sealed with the entire race, and that the assistance of this animal can always be called upon.

Then again the Manitou of our Algonquin Indians may be the key to the origin of this custom which has survived from the dark ages. The Manitou is always an animal, each individual having one assigned to him by dream inspiration at the greatest religious act of his life, his first fast. This animal then becomes his fetich, its skin is carried as a charm, and representations are tatooed or painted on his body or engraved on his weapons. Imagine then, a young Indian of about 14 years of age going into the forest to be inspired by his fetich. He fasts sometimes for days to purify himself. During that time his thoughts are constantly of animals. His father probably holds the wolf as sacred. It is natural for the boy to think of this, and at last overcome by sleep he dreams of a wolf. And presto, it becomes sacred to him also. This may happen to a dozen generations in succession, and the wolf becomes the tribal god.

Herbert Spencer was inclined to think that this explanation is the most rational. A modern Egyptian version is that in some moment of danger the gods concealed themselves from their foes in the shape of animals. In the cities of Thebes and Aelianus, mothers considered their children fortunate if they were eaten by the crocodile, for they had passed into the body of their godhead.

Whatever the origin may have been, be it the cunning medicine man, the power seeking priest, mythology, superstition, fear or ignorance, the fact remains that the why of sacred animals is an all-absorbing, interesting and educative study.

The Festival of Fools.

The ass shares honors only with the snake in the sacredness of animals. Among the nomadic people of ancient Greece it is a solar emblem. To this day it is so considered by the wandering Brinjaris of India. In the story of Samson the jaw of an ass is a weapon from which comes a stream of water to refresh the hero.

In the yarn about Balaam the ass is able to see an angel and approach his master with human voice. Arabs still believe that asses see spirits and kneel down when they do so, and that they were turned into beasts of burden because the gods were jealous of their power. To them it is not as in Europe an emblem of stupidity and obstinacy, nor is it such in Hindu literature.

Instead of blows and ridicule this truly intelligent animal receives praise for its patience, in which lies wisdom. And its conduct points many a moral in the fables of the East. It has to its credit the "Feast of the Ass," on St. Stephen day, which was celebrated in the Roman Church, until the latter half of the sixteenth century. This service consisted of a chant beginning, "Ex Orientis partibus, advenivit Asinus," and the refrain sung in chorus ended with an imitation of the braying of an ass.

The missal was composed by the Bishop of Sens, who died in 1222. The symbolic beast stood in the middle of the choir decked in sacred vestment, and the procession moved about it chanting this hymn. The rite went on all night and part of the next day, the singers being refreshed with wine, and the ass was provided with provender and water at regular intervals during the liturgy. In the middle of the service the anthem beginning "Conductus" was the signal for the congregation to join the clergy in dancing around the ass and braying. After the rites were concluded they went outside the church to rest, and then returning some would be stripped naked and soused with water. This was truly called the festival of fools.

The bear enjoys a large measure of respect from all savage races that come in contact with it, which shows itself in festivals in its honor. Certain North Asiatic races consider the bear their grandfather and beg him to forgive their killing him, attributing his death to an accident. In East Asia, among the Siberian tribes he reigns supreme. And among the Sakhalin, a young bear is caught at the end of the winter and fed for nine months, then after receiving honors it is killed, though the people who previously mourned his approaching fate, dance merrily around him and feast of his body.

Bull!!!

Since time immemorial the bull was always the emblem of male strength. The Egyptians allotted him a period of twenty-five years of life during which time they held him sacred. But if he survived that limit he was drowned in a cistern and mummified in a special coffin and placed with his predecessors in the Serapeum, a huge excavated chamber, and there worshiped.

His cow mother was said to be impregnated with celestial fire and the spirit of Osiris was in him. To many races the emblem of the bull and the cow is too sacred to be offered in sacrifice. The bull was everywhere the emblem of production, life, strength and creation.

Then there is the sacred Brahami bull. They feed at will from straw pile, fruit seller's baskets, or evening meal at door of hut, making holy any dish which they touch. The older bulls, like policemen, are said to be fully alive to their privileges and select only the finest fruit. Sometimes a patient habra seller will remonstrate, "My brother, eat not from my stall, it is not worthy. The man across the street makes much better jam, he is richer than I and can much better afford thee for a friend. May it please your holiness to go. Nay—nay, brother, it is too bad. But take thy will."

Our Mother the Cow.

In Egypt the sacred cow is the emblem of heaven and earth. The Indian Aryan holds all cow excretions sacred. Cows were not sacrificed by the ancient priests, being regarded too holy to kill. The Mazdeans of Persia forbade the invocation of the cow in the presence of any evil power. Someone called the Hindu religion a worship based on the care of a cow. The affection bestowed on this animal in India can scarcely be grasped by the western mind.

"Brother to the ox" is no poetic fiction on the lips that daily utter, "Our mother the cow." The idea of cow sacredness can be traced back to the prayers of the Rig-Veda. "God is cow-giver, Lord-of-pastures, Bestower-of-cattle." From Sanscrit legends we may learn how deep rooted are the religious convictions on which the sacredness of the cow is based, the tender regard in which she is held, the affectionate companionship accorded her, and the horror with which our eating the flesh of our mother is held.

Everything about the cow is noted. Every emanation from her body is venerated and used in worship. The true cause of the Indian mutiny was that the British [illegible] fed on beef. "As much water as will [illegible] hole made in the mud by a cow's hoof" [illegible] a well-known Aryan measure. The [illegible] India gives but little milk and never [illegible] the calf suckles.

In China the dragon is the most [illegible] deity. But if he fails to send rain [illegible] treated, his shrine is uncanopied [illegible] posed to the scorching heat of the sun. [illegible] Tieh-poi, or iron well-covering of his [illegible] spring, is removed to the altar of [illegible] and the abbot of the Taoist [illegible] the Dragon and Tiger mountains is [illegible] of his salary.

The great celebration of this [illegible] held in the third week of June, when [illegible] are thrown into the waters from [illegible] boats," which form a procession. The [illegible] says that of old the water [illegible] a sacrifice of a minister of state at [illegible] He rode on a white steed in his [illegible] office into the river, the horse [illegible] ing with a message of peace and [illegible] be hung to the city gates. The Chinese [illegible] also an evil dragon that is supposed [illegible] in a well in the courtyard of the [illegible] Shu-ling-fu. This well is kept closed [illegible] stones and every prefect on [illegible] must affix his seal on the well [illegible] not to let "kou-lung" out. [illegible] China and Manchuria the great [illegible] "feng-shui," representing wind, [illegible] ter, is still the most important [illegible] mythology. He is the great [illegible] moving" over the land, and great [illegible] be taken not to offend him by [illegible] walls or other impediment. [illegible] course is stayed and stayed his [illegible] cease and the people will suffer. [illegible] naturally connected with the sky [illegible] great rivers on which the [illegible] prosperity of the land depends. The [illegible] especially detests railways.

White Elephants Baptized.

In Siam it is believed that the [illegible] phant may contain the soul of [illegible] perhaps a Bhudda. When one is [illegible] capturer is rewarded and the [illegible] to the king to be kept ever [illegible] cannot be bought or sold. It is [illegible] feted and mourned for like a [illegible] at its death. In some parts of [illegible] the belief is prevalent that [illegible]

Bears are sacred aimals in nearly all American Indian tribes.

ON THE

IN THE New Grass, April-moon of a long ago summer, 1876, the Pikuni, or South Blackfeet, moved in from the Bear Paw country to Fort Benton to trade their winter take of buffalo robes and furs. The big camp was pitched in a long, well timbered bottom of the Teton River, just over the ridge north of the fort, and for several days the trail swarmed with people riding in with their bundles of trade stuff, and returning with their [illegible] of the much prized white man's [illegible] Everyone was gaily clad in bright [illegible] new blankets. Everyone was happy. [illegible] and gambling and singing and [illegible] parties were the order of the day [illegible] night. Young couples took advantage [illegible] the plethora of purchases to marry and [illegible] a lodge of their own; and many a [illegible] warrior took unto himself a third, or [illegible] or fifth, or sixth wife. Owing to the [illegible] of war and the chase, there was [illegible] a large preponderance of women in [illegible] tribe, and they had to be cared for in [illegible] way, poor things.

[illegible] the fourth morning of the trading [illegible] ment, and just at dawn old Four [illegible] camp crier and man of mighty voice, [illegible] this dream time of happy idle[illegible] "Awake, ye warriors," he shouted. [illegible] and arm yourselves; the enemy has [illegible] us and taken many horses."

[illegible] may not be true. Some early riser has [illegible] missed his herd and just suspicious [illegible] they have been stolen," I said to Lone [illegible] as we hurriedly dressed and tore out [illegible] the lodge.

We defy you!"

The insult made our warriors grit their [illegible] and vow all sorts of vengeance upon [illegible] raiders. With scores of other anxious [illegible] Lone Elk and I hunted the valley and [illegible] near plains on the north side of the [illegible] for our animals, and failed to find [illegible] His loss was twenty odd head; mine, [illegible] well trained, swift buffalo runners. Of [illegible] several thousand horses the tribe [illegible], about 400 head had been taken, all [illegible] the raiders could manage. Scores of [illegible] men mounted their own, or borrowed animals, and started out full speed [illegible] the trail of the enemy, although they [illegible] knew that it would be almost impos[illegible] to overtake them. The pursuer had [illegible] the one horse to ride; the pursued could [illegible] mounts often and keep going for a [illegible] a night, and even longer, at top [illegible]

Very early in the day White Calf, head [illegible] of the tribe, called a council of the [illegible] chiefs, at which it was decided that [illegible] strong party of reprisal should be sent [illegible] the Assiniboines, believed to be [illegible] camped in the vicinity of the mouth of [illegible] River, several hundred miles to the [illegible] Lone Elk, John Monroe, or Piskan—[illegible] Trap, and I also councilled together [illegible] decided to form a war party of our own. [illegible] had also lost all of his horses, fif[illegible] head, and simply had to recover them [illegible] get others in their place. The thought [illegible] struck me that instead of tramping [illegible] that long way to the hostile camp, it [illegible] be fine to buy a skiff at the fort and [illegible] the swift current of the Missouri take [illegible] to the mouth of Milk River.

ON THE WAR TRAIL WITH THE INDIANS.

In Buffalo Days. By James Willard Schultz.

AUTHOR OF "MY LIFE AS AN INDIAN," ETC.

IN THE New Grass, April-moon of a long ago summer, 1876, the Pikuni, or South Blackfeet moved in from the Bear Paw country to Fort Benton to trade their winter take of buffalo robes and furs. The big camp was pitched in a long, well timbered bottom of the Teton River, just over the ridge north of the fort, and for several days the trail swarmed with people riding in with their bundles of trade stuff, and returning with their [illegible] of the much prized white man's [illegible]. Everyone was gaily clad in bright [illegible] blankets. Everyone was happy. [illegible] and gambling and singing and [illegible] parties were the order of the day [illegible]. Young couples took advantage [illegible] plethora of purchases to marry and [illegible] a lodge of their own; and many a warrior took unto himself a third, or [illegible] fifth, or sixth wife. Owing to the [illegible] of war and the chase, there was [illegible] a large preponderance of women in [illegible], and they had to be cared for in [illegible] way, poor things.

[illegible] the fourth morning of the trading [illegible], and just at dawn old Four [illegible] camp crier and man of mighty voice, [illegible] this dream time of happy idle[illegible]. "Awake, ye warriors," he shouted. "[illegible] and arm yourselves; the enemy has [illegible] and taken many horses."

"[illegible] not be true. Some early riser has [illegible] missed his herd and just suspicious [illegible] have been stolen," I said to Lone [illegible] as we hurriedly dressed and tore out [illegible] lodge.

[illegible] mistaken; a crowd of men near by [illegible] examining a coup stick that had been [illegible], contemptuously, stuck upright in [illegible] ground in the very center of the en[illegible]. It was unquestionably of As[illegible] make—the pattern of the beaded [illegible] below the eagle plumed crook of [illegible] told us that; and the message [illegible] silently gave us was, practically: "[illegible] sleeping fools, we have your buffalo [illegible]. We depart. We defy you!"

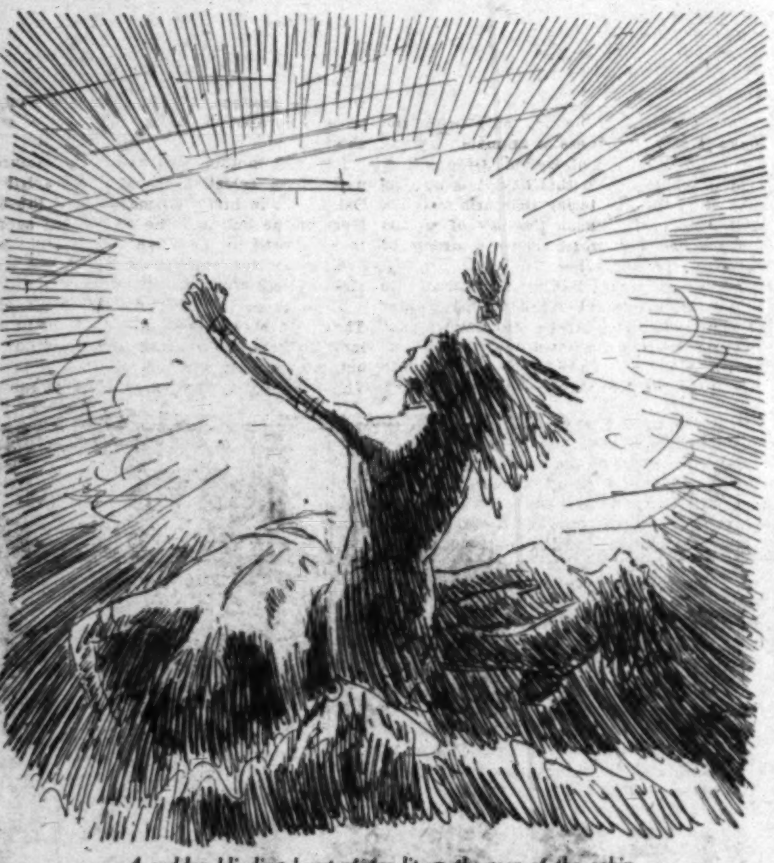
[illegible] made our warriors grit their [illegible] and vow all sorts of vengeance upon [illegible]. With scores of other anxious [illegible] Lone Elk and I hunted the valley and [illegible] plains on the north side of the [illegible] for our animals, and failed to find [illegible]. His loss was twenty odd head; mine, [illegible] well trained, swift buffalo runners. Of [illegible] several thousand horses the tribe [illegible], about 400 head had been taken,—all [illegible] riders could manage. Scores of [illegible] men mounted their own, or bor[illegible] animals, and started out full speed [illegible] the trail of the enemy, although they [illegible] knew that it would be almost impos[illegible] to overtake them. The pursuer had [illegible] one horse to ride; the pursued could [illegible] mounts often and keep going for a [illegible] and a night, and even longer, at top [illegible].

[illegible] early in the day White Calf, head [illegible] of the tribe, called a council of the [illegible] chiefs, at which it was decided that [illegible] party of reprisal should be sent [illegible] the Assiniboines, believed to be [illegible] in the vicinity of the mouth of [illegible] River, several hundred miles to the [illegible]. Lone Elk, John Monroe, or Piskan— [illegible] Trap, and I also councilled together [illegible] decided to form a war party of our own. [illegible] had also lost all of his horses, fif[illegible], and simply had to recover them [illegible] others in their place. The thought [illegible] struck me that instead of tramping [illegible] long way to the hostile camp, it [illegible] be fine to buy a skiff at the fort and [illegible] swift current of the Missouri take [illegible] the mouth of Milk River.

"[illegible] That is the very thing for us to [illegible] Monroe exclaimed, when I proposed it. [illegible] Lone Elk shook his head in negation: "[illegible] the solid earth. I shall keep away [illegible] the terrible Under Water People whenever it is possible," he said.

We argued with him a long time before he consented to fall in with our plan. He had lost a brother by drowning, and was positive that the boy had been seized and devoured by a race of cannibal people whom the Blackfeet believe inhabit the depths of all large streams and lakes.

I walked over to the fort that afternoon and succeeded in getting a skiff from old Baptiste Rondin, one time batteau and keel boat builder for the American Fur Company. On the following morning, taking each of us a blanket, several lariats, and our rifles and ammunition, we hurried to the fort, there purchased an outfit of store grub, and set out on our voyage of several hundred miles to the mouth of Milk River. As Lone Elk took his place in the bow of the rather cranky craft he dropped overboard a fine beaded belt, and a porcupine quill embroidered buckskin sack containing a pipe and tobacco, and cried out: "Hai-yu! People of the deep, dark waters! I make sacrifice to you. Have pity on us. Allow us to safely pass over your homes in this great river."



A sudden blinding burst of fire lit up the rear of the cabin.

Having made his prayer and offering he perceptibly brightened up, and in a short time lost all fear of this—to him, strange way of traveling.

I was the oarsman, Monroe the steersman. I certainly admired him as he sat there in the stern so straight and alert, scanning the stream, and the shores and valley slopes with his big and kindly, all seeing eyes. He was a man of medium height and weight, and in all his actions as quick and lithe as a cat. His father was Hugh Monroe, the first white man to see the country between the headwaters of the Saskatchewan and Missouri rivers. His mother had been the daughter of Lone Walker, the greatest chief, perhaps, the Pikuni ever had. He was himself a brave and noted warrior, loved and honored by his own people, and feared by the many tribes with whom the Pikuni were ever at war. I considered it a great privilege to be in his company in this adventure.

Hour after hour of the warm April day we drifted and rowed down the swift current, and toward evening entered the upper end of the wonderful sandstone and trap formation of the upper river, which is alone worth crossing the continent to see. Here the river bottoms are small and narrow, and walled in with towering cliffs of the white and red rock, carved into innumerable weird shapes by the winds and storms of this old, old world. Here is truly a dream country. One has to rub his eyes and wonder if it is real—if he has not in some mysterious way been transported back to the scenes of medieval times. For, here and there along the rims of the valley, are what are apparently ancient walled cities; battlemented castles, and broad roadways leading up to them in winding ascents hewn in the solid rock. And here and there along these roads are groups of moving figures. Mailed warriors? Peasantry going to pay tribute to their overlord?

"Ha! See the band of bighorns mounting there!" Monroe exclaims, and the dream is broken.

On and on we drifted through these weird scenes, more and more enchanting as cliff after cliff took on the colors of the setting sun. Just ahead three old buffalo bulls stood motionless on a sand bar. Deer and elk came boldly out from the belts of cottonwood for their evening drink. Came also covey after covey of sharptail grouse to sup the water, and, clucking and scolding, chase one another along the sands. Here and there big gray wolves raised the call for the evening hunt, and coyotes gathered to follow them and feast upon their leavings. As dusk came on beavers emerged from their safe hidden homes in the cutbanks, and swam up and down the stream playing tag, and loudly spatting the water with their broad flat tails. Oh, there was life enough in those days in the weird old badlands, and now—I doubt that even a grouse can be found in the whole length of them.

We needed fresh meat and held council as to what kind should be killed; and while we were debating the matter a lone yearling bighorn ram appeared on a steep slope right over us. I snatched up my rifle, took quick aim, and at the report of the weapon the animal gave one leap ahead and fell, and rolled and bounced down into the river with a mighty splash. We towed it to the head of an island and soon had it dressed, and a fire going. Some of the liver and meat broiled, with coffee, crackers, and a can of tomatoes, furnished a good meal for us; a far better one than I had enjoyed for some time. When it was devoured to the very last scrap, Lone Elk lighted his big stone pipe and we smoked by turns. And then we loaded the meat into the skiff and drifted a couple of miles down the dark river to another island, and drew out onto the sandy shore and went to sleep with easy minds; any prowling war party that had seen our cooking fire would certainly not pot us beside it.

The deep and winding river valley was not uninhabited. Here and there, generally at the foot of a rapid, or shallow bar, were the log shacks of "wood hawks," men who cut and corded along the banks great quantities of fuel for the steamboats that every summer plied their way from far St. Louis to Fort Benton with loads of freight. The wood hawks were without exception brave and hardy men. Always likely to be attacked by war parties of many tribes, they, so to speak, cut wood with one hand and held an ever ready rifle in the other; and despite their caution and watchfulness, many and many a one of them was riddled sooner or later by the arrows or bullets of the enemy. But there were always others ready to take their place: with wood at $20, and even $30 a cord, men gladly risked their lives to cut and sell it.

Monroe and I were acquainted with many of the wood hawks, for Fort Benton was headquarters for them all. Thither they all gathered twice a year to buy supplies, and to squander their big rolls of money. So it was that they often hailed us from the bank and invited us to their cabins, where they set before us the best they had, and begged for news of the upper country, and the States. They were all pleased with the object of our journey, and hoped that we would get away with all the Assiniboine herds.

Just below the mouth of the Musselshell we camped for the night with Angus McDonald and his men. Angus, or Red, as he was called, was a fierce looking, big and powerful South-American, and an old, oldtimer on the upper river. The Assiniboines and other tribes hated and feared him, for he had invariably worsted them in many encounters during the years that he had lived here and there along the river. He took no avoidable chances with them. His cabins were always stockaded and looped for rifle fire, and when his crew was at work one man was always kept on the lookout for the enemy. Nevertheless, only a week before our arrival one of the men had been shot full of arrows in broad daylight while going to the river for water, and in the evening of that day the war party had attempted to get the work horses out of the corral adjoining the cabin. Failing to open the chained and padlocked gate, they had begun shooting at the animals, and managed to kill and cripple several of them before being driven off by the rifle fire of the wood hawks.

"And the worst of it was," Angus concluded, fairly hissing the words through his red, bristly mustache, "the worst of it was that we didn't get ary a one of the outfit. It was that dark that a windowless dugout couldn't have been darker. An' there they was, about fifty of 'em, I guess, a shootin' an' yellin', an' singin' their war songs, an' calling us all the bad names there is in the Yanktonais language."

"Ha! They were Yanktonais?" Monroe asked.

"Sure they were. Don't I know their lingo? An' their way of featherin' arrows? You bet that's what they were. They an' the Assiniboines have been campin' together all winter down about the mouth of Milk River, an' both tribes are helpin' old Sittin' Bull an' Rain-in-the-face all they can. I tell you what, fellers, there's goin' to be doin's with the Sioux an' the Cheyennes right soon."

We left the woodyard at daybreak the next morning, but not without breakfast, for Angus himself had slipped out of his bunk at 3 o'clock and baked a Dutch ovenful of sour dough biscuits, broiled some elk ribs, and made coffee for the early meal. When we finished eating he went down to the shore with us, and his parting words were: "I wish I could go with you, but I just nat'erally can't; these here tenderfeet men of mine wouldn't last any time without me. It's me that keeps the hair on their heads, you bet!"

We had supper earlier than usual that evening, landing near the lower point of an island, and on its north shore, to cook it. The meal was soon over, the little fire soon went out, and while waiting for the cover of night to hide our move on down to a sleeping place, we walked to the extreme end of the point and sat in the edge of the thick willows covering it. Close ahead the river made a sharp bend to the south, and the high, wooded bank on that side prevented a view of the bottom lands beyond. To the north, however, there was an unobstructed vista of grassy bottom and partially timbered valley slope. A few buffalo feeding near the shore were the only living things in sight. There was no wind, no calling of bird nor beast; the country was apparently peaceful enough.

But in that old time West appearances were ever deceitful. Lone Elk had just exclaimed: "How peaceful, how restful is the river country," when there appeared on the edge of the south bank opposite us, first one, and then in single file a dozen Indians. Out from the heavy timber they stole, and gazed up and down the river, and at the opposite bottom and slope; but they could not see us, nor our boat drawn up on the north shore of the island. There was not more than seventy-five yards of water between us and them, so we could plainly see their red painted features. Sioux faces they were, and their manner of dress, the single eagle tail feather sticking up at the back of each head, were evidence enough that they belonged to Sitting Bull's hostile band. They stood quiet for several minutes while the man who had first appeared addressed them, and then they one by one fell in behind him and stole down along the edge of the bank, and out of sight around the bend.

"Ha! Lone Elk, the country is not as peaceful as it might be!" I said with a little laugh, but he did not smile; instead, he very solemnly exclaimed: "Our medicine is strong. The gods protect us; they hide us from the dangers along our way."

"I wonder what those Indians are up to?" said Monroe. "They are a war party, of course, but why going down river instead of up? Down stream is home direction for them, and Sioux war parties do not often go home afoot and empty handed."

"When we start on I think we should keep going until midnight. We don't want to take any chances with that party," I said.

"Right you are. We will never stop until we are a day ahead of them," Monroe answered.

Little by little the shadows of coming night stole over the valley, and presently a gentle breeze blew up from the east and brought to our ears the faint, distant sound of the chopping of wood. "Ha! A woodyard is down there around the bend. The war party is sneaking upon it," Monroe exclaimed.

And he had no more than uttered the words than the freshening wind brought with it the booming of guns and the unmistakable war cries of the Sioux.

"They attack the white men!" cried Lone Elk, springing to his feet.

"We must help the wood cutters," said Monroe, and we tore through the brush to the skiff, shoved it out from the sands and sprang in.

The river ran swift below the island, and swifter still we sped down it with hard working oars and paddle. Close under the high cutbank we ran, and around the bend. There the bank soon sloped down to a broad, sandy shore bordering the heavy growth of timber and willows that pretty well covered the upper end of the bottom. We continued on close in its shelter for a quarter of a mile, then beached the skiff and took to the woods, continued firing and shouting apprising us that we were near the scene of the fight. We soon came to the border of the timber. A couple of hundred yards out from it, and fifty or sixty yards back from the river, and long rows of corded wood, we saw a small log shack in the open, grassy bottom. Between it and us was a coulie running down to the river from the hills, and in it some of the war party, well concealed by the bordering sage and grease wood, were keeping up a desultory fire at the west side of the cabin. Others of the party, behind the cord wood, fired at the front and east side of it, and two men, working with great rapidity, carried wood and piled it against the back or south side of the dry log structure, with the evident intention of setting fire to it, and forcing its occupants to come out. We wondered how many men were inside the place, and why they did not shoot down the fuel gatherers?

"Something is wrong with the wood hawks," Monroe said. "Wounded, perhaps, or out of cartridges. Surely they have loop holes in the walls of the place through which they could shoot down the enemy if all was right with them."

"You speak truth. They are in trouble of some kind," Lone Elk muttered, and added: "Well, they shall not be roasted if I can help it." And with that he aimed his '73 Winchester at one of the men bringing an armful of dry bark kindling to the cabin, and pulled trigger. We heard the bullet strike. At the spat of it the man gave an awful yell, dropped the wood and his gun, teetered drunkenly on his feet for a moment, and then pitched head first against the bottom of the cabin wall.

Then happened a strange thing; we all turned loose our fire at the other wood carrier, now running for the shelter of the cord wood piles, and not one of our many bullets struck him. Never had we done such poor shooting. The result, or, rather, the non-result, sickened us. The absolute quiet that ensued made us terribly uneasy. Not a shot was fired in our direction. Not one of the enemy was to be seen, neither along the river shore nor in the coulie in front of us. What were the two sections of the party doing? Were those by the river sneaking around to get in our rear—and those in the coulie crawling through the sage brush to flank us?

That was the one, the proper thing for them to do. Lone Elk and I did not need Monroe's hiss to start us. "Back! Back to the boat," he said, but we were already going! We tore through the brush like so many frightened deer. Sprang into the skiff and skooted across the river, striking the shore with a sudden thud that jarred us from our seats.

Out we sprang and, out of breath, sat down in the willows and looked across the stream for sight of the enemy. Not one of them was to be seen; it was likely, we thought, that, intent upon surrounding the place from which we had fired at them, they had slowly, cautiously surrounded it and never discovered our quick flight. Were that the case, so much the better for the besieged wood hawks; the Sioux would never attempt to set fire to the cabin so long as they believed that we were lurking near it.

Said Monroe presently: "Younger brothers, we have before us a hard task. The enemy are twelve to us three, and they have every other advantage. They will surround the cabin, and in the darkness it will be useless for us to try to get near the place. Truly, I can not think out a way for us to help the wood cutters. But we must find a way; we cannot desert them in their need."

"No, we cannot leave them to be burned out and scalped," said I, and Lone Elk made an emphatic sign of agreement.

Black night came on while we sat there trying to plan some way to help the besieged men, and over and over we kept asking one another what prevented them returning the fire of the Sioux? Why, if there were no loop holes in the cabin walls, they had not here and there knocked out bits of chinking, and through the opening shot down the enemy as fast as they came in sight?

"It may be that there is no one in the cabin," I suggested.

Monroe gave a short laugh: "Sioux would never go to the trouble to smoke out an empty hole!" he exclaimed.

"That is truth," Lone Elk agreed. "Myself, I think that the white men were wounded by the Sioux, that they just managed to get into the cabin and shut fast the door, and are now unable to defend themselves."

Monroe and I admitted that this might be the case, and, impatiently springing to his feet he ordered a move. "We will go down across to the lower end of the bottom," he exclaimed, "and at least be nearer the trouble."

We kept close to the north shore until some distance below the cabin, and then quartered across and struck the extreme lower end of the bottom. There the skiff was noiselessly drawn up on the shore, and a moment later we were cautiously working our way through the tall sage brush toward the cabin, a quarter of a mile or more up the flat. After a time Monroe halted us: "Have either of you thought out a way to save the wood cutters?" he asked.

"No."

"Not yet."

"Well, think hard, now, and meantime we will move on a little further," he said.

So on we went in the darkness, feeling our way through the sage and making not the least noise. On and on at about the pace of a turtle, Monroe led, Lone Elk and I close following; and as we neared the place where we might at any moment come upon the Sioux, my skin sure began to twitch with anticipation of sudden perforation. Nothing in this world is so trying to one's nerves as the approach to known but unseen danger.

Monroe led on and on. We neared the cabin. I was about to catch him by the sleeve and ask his intentions when he stopped, drew us to him and whispered: "Well, we are almost there. Now, what shall we do?"

"Stop right here and watch for what may happen," I answered.

"Yes," Lone Elk put in.

"Agreed!" said Monroe, and we stood side by side, there with rifles cocked and ready, listening intently for any move of the Sioux, and trying to make out just how near we were to the cabin. Once we heard a faint rustling in the brush ahead of us. It died out and we held our breath listening for a repetition of it. Then, apparently a hundred yards or more away, a minute point of fire flared for an instant, and went out.

"Ha! A match. It failed," Monroe whispered. "Now, watch! They are going to fire the cabin. When they strike the next match we will shoot a little above and to the left of the light, and perhaps hit the lighter. Shoot three or four times direction, and then follow me."

We raised our rifles ready to waited. A moment or two passed, a sudden blinding burst of fire lit rear of the cabin, a terrific boom hit our ears, and we saw a of Indians and cordwood hurtling and upward from the cabin wall. We so surprised—so startled by the we never fired a shot. As quickly flared up the glare of fire went out, yells of the panic stricken, and them no doubt injured, Indians ceased.

"Oh, my brothers! What a was that," Monroe chuckled.

"Ha!—Powder. A whole keg, kegs of it. How smart are the Lone Elk whispered.

"And now—what?" I asked.

"This! Listen! Monroe answered. "I think that just not a Sioux near the cabin. shall take the chance and go wood cutters to follow me to the you two, a couple of hundred the hills, there fire a few shots enemy that way, and then boat and wait for me."

But it should remain so and untrimmed except as it is found necessary to restrain the growth from encroachment on the pathway. If such landscape features in parks are a menace to our morals by reason of the hiding places afforded we must have more police in parks and ordinances more strict with which to deal justice to the irresponsible. We cannot sacrifice too much of art and propriety to civic ugliness and impropriety.

Scum on Ponds.

At this season of the year complaints reach us of scum and water weeds in lily and fish ponds. In large ponds or lakes copper sulphate, known as blue vitriol or bluestone, is placed in a bag and trailed about the lake until all is dissolved. In a smaller body of water the bluestone or salts may be placed in a smaller sack fastened to the end of a pole or stick and trailed through all parts of the pool. Of course this treatment should at times and in some cases be somewhat modified to meet unusual conditions, the general treatment is simple and the amount used is one pound of copper sulphate to 1,000,000 gallons of water. Mere scum on water indicates a lack of balance in the pond between animal life and vegetable life, or a needed change of water where but one phase of life is fostered.

Iris in Bloom.

Just now nearly all sorts of iris are in bloom and the day of close observance and study of named varieties should obtain. Whenever you see a sort that suits you, inquire as to name. If the grower does not know take a flower to some nurseryman who handles iris, to an iris specialist, or study the matter for yourself through catalogue descriptions. Only in this way may you easily get names of observed plants that you particularly desire. But do not neglect the iris, for no garden is considered complete without a few varieties of these lovely and easily grown flowers.

The Red Cherokee Sport.

The so-called red Cherokee climbing rose, sometimes known as Ramona, has fallen by the wayside. In plain English it has in many cases reverted in color of blossoms to the original pink Cherokee from whence it sprung. Many large plants heretofore bearing red or nearly red flowers have this year been indistinguishable from the pink variety growing near by. With age the "sport" of red in color gradually disappears. On one very large climber daily observed by the writer just three red flowers came amid the thousands of pink ones. Last year the proportion of reds was much greater, but never have all of the flowers that appeared been red. This novelty was placed before the public in all honesty. The writer was given one of the first plants propagated from the original and several times visited the nursery where it originated with the dealer who purchased and distributed it, and therefore knows the original stock very well. Not all the first lot of several thousands grown from cuttings produced red flowers, but the small proportion bearing pink flowers was conscientiously removed from the lot. In spite of this nearly all have with age reverted to the original pink from whence they sprung. A few still hold their red color and may always do so. But no one may with any assurance propagate from these and warrant that the progeny will flower red. It is an unreliable source of color.

Pruning Time.

The present is the best time in which to trim nearly all plants that have lately bloomed. For now will be made the new growth which will continue more or less throughout the summer and [illegible] this growth will come the flowers of next year. This programme is especially marked in the case of acacias, these trees setting their next flowering buds very shortly after the present flowering season. Prune the annual-blooming roses, such as the several Cherokees, at once. Lilacs, bridal wreaths and all the flowering deciduous shrubs should also fall under the knife or shears. Do the work now, not next month.

A Freak Season.

Because the autumn and early winter of the season just passing were most unusually dry, in fact without a precedent, followed by copious and sufficient rains, the seasonal development of many plants and many sorts of plants has been very freakish. Do not therefore depend upon it as a criterion of what will occur each succeeding year; rather judge by what has gone before.

A Severe Test.

The long almost rainless year that ended about February, 1918, was a severe test of the drouth-resistant qualities of all classes of plants, native as well as exotic. The great superiority of native plants in this respect was plainly shown. Eucalypts and other foreign introductions, long supposed to surpass native Californians in their fight against thirst, succumbed by thousands, while our native trees and shrubs bore up bravely. How splendidly was our coast live oak behaving! Not a leaf turned yellow or brown and when the welcome rains came it was first to respond and what a response! Never has the new growth on live oaks been greater or more handsome. Truly, it is a splendid tree and in greater and growing proportion should each year be freely planted in park garden, and along streets and highways.

American Boys are Safe in France.

The gratitude that France feels toward America holds great promise for the future. For in truth America no longer has one capital city, but two. You have had Washington, but now you also have Paris. If one were to go to France today he would see more American flags in Paris than he sees in many an American city.

I saw the first American boys arrive in Paris, and the reception given them was most touching. French soldiers, some of them seriously wounded, would run to catch hold of some American soldier and kiss him to express their gratitude. Indeed the reception was so warm, so affectionate, that all the French mothers were jealous, for the boys of France were never thus received in their own capital city. there to stay—and may it not be many—will depend upon your loyalty and your support. But to the mothers of America I would say that I know that the little boys and girls of France will go and gather the fairest flowers of our land to place on their graves, and if you go to France after the war, you will not be able to tell which was the grave of an American or of a French boy, for they will all be taken care of with the same love and the same affection.—[Lieut. Paul Perigord, of the French army, in Cartoons Magazine.

Tardy America.

Over in Paris they tell this story of Gen. Pershing. The general had engaged a taxi to call for him at 2 o'clock sharp. At three minutes past 2 the taxi driven by a young woman in uniform, drew up. The American commander, who, nervous and watch in hand, had been pacing up and down the walk, said sternly:

"Ma'amselle, you are three minutes late!"

The young woman thought an instant and then said quietly:

"Gen. Pershing, you were three years late!"

it. The meal was soon over, the little fire soon went out, and while waiting for the cover of night to hide our move on down to a sleeping place, we walked to the extreme end of the point and sat in the edge of the thick willows covering it. Close ahead the river made a sharp bend to the south, and the high, wooded bank on that side prevented a view of the bottom lands beyond. To the north, however, there was an unobstructed vista of grassy bottom and partially timbered valley slope. A few buffalo feeding near the shore were the only living things in sight. There was no wind, no calling of bird nor beast; the country was apparently peaceful enough.

But in that old time West appearances were ever deceitful. Lone Elk had just exclaimed: "How peaceful, how restful is the river country," when there appeared on the edge of the south bank opposite us, first one, and then in single file a dozen Indians. Out from the heavy timber they stole, and gazed up and down the river, and at the opposite bottom and slope; but they could not see us, nor our boat drawn up on the north shore of the island. There was not more than seventy-five yards of water between us and them, so we could plainly see their red painted features. Sioux faces they were, and their manner of dress, the single eagle tail feather sticking up at the back of each head, were evidence enough that they belonged to Sitting Bull's hostile band. They stood quiet for several minutes while the man who had first appeared addressed them, and then they one by one fell in behind him and stole down along the edge of the bank, and out of sight around the bend.

"Ha! Lone Elk, the country is not as peaceful as it might be!" I said with a little laugh, but he did not smile; instead, he very solemnly exclaimed: "Our medicine is strong. The gods protect us; they hide us from the dangers along our way."

"I wonder what those Indians are up to?" said Monroe. "They are a war party, of course, but why going down river instead of up? Down stream is home direction for them, and Sioux war parties do not often go home afoot and empty handed."

"When we start on I think we should keep going until midnight. We don't want to take any chances with that party," I said.

"Right you are. We will never stop until we are a day ahead of them," Monroe answered.

Little by little the shadows of coming night stole over the valley, and presently a gentle breeze blew up from the east and brought to our ears the faint, distant sound of the chopping of wood. "Ha! A woodyard is down there around the bend. The war party is sneaking upon it," Monroe exclaimed.

And he had no more than uttered the words than the freshening wind brought with it the booming of guns and the unmistakable war cries of the Sioux.

"They attack the white men!" cried Lone Elk, springing to his feet.

"We must help the wood cutters," said Monroe, and we tore through the brush to the skiff, shoved it out from the sands and sprang in.

The river ran swift below the island, and swifter still we sped down it with hard working oars and paddle. Close under the high cutbank we ran, and around the bend. There the bank soon sloped down to a broad, sandy shore bordering the heavy growth of timber and willows that pretty well covered the upper end of the bottom. We continued on close in its shelter for a quarter of a mile, then beached the skiff and took to the woods, continued firing and shouting apprising us that we were near the scene of the fight. We soon came to the border of the timber. A couple of hundred yards out from it, and fifty or sixty yards back from the river, and long rows of corded wood, we saw a small log shack in the open, grassy bottom. Between it and us was a coulie running down to the river from the hills, and in it some of the war party, well concealed by the bordering sage and grease wood, were keeping up a desultory fire at the west side of the cabin. Others of the party, behind the cord wood, fired at the front and east side of it, and two men, working with great rapidity, carried wood and piled it against the back or south side of the dry log structure, with the evident intention of setting fire to it, and forcing its occupants to come out. We wondered how many men were inside the place, and why they did not shoot down the fuel gatherers?

"Something is wrong with the wood hawks," Monroe said. "Wounded, perhaps, or out of cartridges. Surely they have loop holes in the walls of the place through which they could shoot down the enemy if all was right with them."

"You speak truth. They are in trouble of some kind," Lone Elk muttered, and added: "Well, they shall not be roasted if I can help it." And with that he aimed his '73 Winchester at one of the men bringing an armful of dry bark kindling to the cabin, and pulled trigger. We heard the bullet strike. At the spat of it the man gave an awful yell, dropped the wood and his gun, teetered drunkenly on his feet for a moment, and then pitched head first against the bottom of the cabin wall.

Then happened a strange thing; we all turned loose our fire at the other wood carrier, now running for the shelter of the cord wood piles, and not one of our many bullets struck him. Never had we done such poor shooting. The result, or, rather, the non-result, sickened us. The absolute quiet that ensued made us terribly uneasy. Not a shot was fired in our direction. Not one of the enemy was to be seen, neither along the river shore nor in the coulie in front of us. What were the two sections of the party doing? Were those by the river sneaking around to get in our rear—and those in the coulie crawling through the sage brush to flank us?

That was the one, the proper thing for them to do. Lone Elk and I did not need Monroe's hiss to start us. "Back! Back to the boat," he said, but we were already going! We tore through the brush like so many frightened deer. Sprang into the skiff and skooted across the river, striking the shore with a sudden thud that jarred us from our seats.

Out we sprang and, out of breath, sat down in the willows and looked across the stream for sight of the enemy. Not one of them was to be seen; it was likely, we thought, that, intent upon surrounding the place from which we had fired at them, they had slowly, cautiously surrounded it and never discovered our quick flight. Were that the case, so much the better for the besieged wood hawks; the Sioux would never attempt to set fire to the cabin so long as they believed that we were lurking near it.

Said Monroe presently: "Younger brothers, we have before us a hard task. The enemy are twelve to us three, and they have every other advantage. They will surround the cabin, and in the darkness it will be useless for us to try to get near the place. Truly, I can not think out a way for us to help the wood cutters. But we must find a way; we cannot desert them in their need."

"No, we cannot leave them to be burned out and scalped," said I, and Lone Elk made an emphatic sign of agreement.

Black night came on while we sat there trying to plan some way to help the besieged men, and over and over we kept asking one another what prevented them returning the fire of the Sioux? Why, if there were no loop holes in the cabin walls, they had not here and there knocked out bits of chinking, and through the opening shot down the enemy as fast as they came in sight?

"It may be that there is no one in the cabin," I suggested.

Monroe gave a short laugh: "Sioux would never go to the trouble to smoke out an empty hole!" he exclaimed.

"That is truth," Lone Elk agreed. "Myself, I think that the white men were wounded by the Sioux, that they just managed to get into the cabin and shut fast the door, and are now unable to defend themselves."

Monroe and I admitted that this might be the case, and, impatiently springing to his feet he ordered a move. "We will go down across to the lower end of the bottom," he exclaimed, "and at least be nearer the trouble."

We kept close to the north shore until some distance below the cabin, and then quartered across and struck the extreme lower end of the bottom. There the skiff was noiselessly drawn up on the shore, and a moment later we were cautiously working our way through the tall sage brush toward the cabin, a quarter of a mile or more up the flat. After a time Monroe halted us: "Have either of you thought out a way to save the wood cutters?" he asked.

"No."

"Not yet."

"Well, think hard, now, and meantime we will move on a little further," he said.

So on we went in the darkness, feeling our way through the sage and making not the least noise. On and on at about the pace of a turtle, Monroe led, Lone Elk and I close following; and as we neared the place where we might at any moment come upon the Sioux, my skin sure began to twitch with anticipation of sudden perforation. Nothing in this world is so trying to one's nerves as the approach to known but unseen danger.

Monroe led on and on. We neared the cabin. I was about to catch him by the sleeve and ask his intentions when he stopped, drew us to him and whispered: "Well, we are almost there. Now, what shall we do?"

"Stop right here and watch for what may happen," I answered.

"Yes," Lone Elk put in.

"Agreed!" said Monroe, and we stood side by side there with rifles cocked and ready, listening intently for any move of the Sioux, and trying to make out just how near we were to the cabin. Once we heard a faint rustling in the brush ahead of us. It died out and we held our breath listening for a repetition of it. Then, apparently a hundred yards or more away, a minute point of fire flared for an instant, and went out.

"Ha! A match. It failed," Monroe whispered. "Now, watch! They are going to fire the cabin. When they strike the next match we will shoot a little above and to the left of the light, and perhaps hit the lighter. Shoot three or four times direction, and then follow me."

We raised our rifles ready to

But it should remain so and untrimmed except as it is found necessary to restrain the growth from encroachment on the pathway. If such landscape features in parks are a menace to our morals by reason of the hiding places afforded we must have more police in parks and ordinances more strict with which to deal justice to the irresponsible. We cannot sacrifice too much of art and propriety to civic ugliness and impropriety.

Scum on Ponds.

At this season of the year complaints reach us of scum and water weeds in lily and fish ponds. In large ponds or lakes copper sulphate, known as blue vitriol or bluestone, is placed in a bag and trailed about the lake until all is dissolved. In a smaller body of water the bluestone or salts may be placed in a smaller sack fastened to the end of a pole or stick and trailed through all parts of the pool. Of course this treatment should at times and in some cases be somewhat modified to meet unusual conditions, the general treatment is simple and the amount used is one pound of copper sulphate to 1,000,000 gallons of water. Mere scum on water indicates a lack of balance in the pond between animal life and vegetable life, or a needed change of water where but one phase of life is fostered.

Iris in Bloom.

Just now nearly all sorts of iris are in bloom and the day of close observance and study of named varieties should obtain. Whenever you see a sort that suits you, inquire as to name. If the grower does not know take a flower to some nurseryman who handles iris, to an iris specialist, or study the matter for yourself through catalogue descriptions. Only in this way may you easily get names of observed plants that you particularly desire. But do not neglect the iris, for no garden is considered complete without a few varieties of these lovely and easily grown flowers.

The Red Cherokee Sport.

The so-called red Cherokee climbing rose, sometimes known as Ramona, has fallen by the wayside. In plain English it has in many cases reverted in color of blossoms to the original pink Cherokee from whence it sprung. Many large plants heretofore bearing red or nearly red flowers have this year been indistinguishable from the pink variety growing near by. With age the "sport" of red in color gradually disappears. On one very large climber daily observed by the writer just three red flowers came amid the thousands of pink ones. Last year the proportion of reds was much greater, but never have all of the flowers that appeared been red. This novelty was placed before the public in all honesty. The writer was given one of the first plants propagated from the original and several times visited the nursery where it originated with the dealer who purchased and distributed it, and therefore knows the original stock very well. Not all the first lot of several thousands grown from cuttings produced red flowers, but the small proportion bearing pink flowers was conscientiously removed from the lot. In spite of this nearly all have with age reverted to the original pink from whence they sprung. A few still hold their red color and may always do so. But no one may with any assurance propagate from these and warrant that the progeny will flower red. It is an unreliable source of color.

Pruning Time.

The present is the best time in which to trim nearly all plants that have lately bloomed. For now will be made the new growth which will continue more or less throughout the summer and upon this growth will come the flowers of next year. This programme is especially marked in the case of acacias, these trees setting their next flowering buds very shortly after the present flowering season. Prune the annual-blooming roses, such as the several Cherokees, at once. Lilacs, bridal wreaths and all the flowering deciduous shrubs should also fall under the knife or shears. Do the work now, not next month.

A Freak Season.

Because the autumn and early winter of the season just passing were most unusually dry, in fact without a precedent, followed by copious and sufficient rains, the seasonal development of many plants and many sorts of plants has been very freakish. Do not therefore depend upon it as a criterion of what will occur each succeeding year; rather judge by what has gone before.

A Severe Test.

The long almost rainless year that ended about February, 1918, was a severe test of the drouth-resistant qualities of all classes of plants, native as well as exotic. The great superiority of native plants in this respect was plainly shown. Eucalypts and other foreign introductions, long supposed to surpass native Californians in their fight against thirst, succumbed by thousands, while our native trees and shrubs bore up bravely. How splendidly was our coast live oak behaving! Not a leaf turned yellow or brown and when the welcome rains came it was first to respond and what a response! Never has the new growth on live oaks been greater or more handsome. Truly, it is a splendid tree and in greater and growing proportion should each year be freely planted in park garden, and along streets and highways.

American Boys are Safe in France.

The gratitude that France feels toward America holds great promise for the future. For in truth America no longer has one capital city, but two. You have had Washington, but now you also have Paris. If one were to go to France today he would see more American flags in Paris than he sees in many an American city.

I saw the first American boys arrive in Paris, and the reception given them was most touching. French soldiers, some of them seriously wounded, would run to catch hold of some American soldier and kiss him to express their gratitude. Indeed the reception was so warm, so affectionate, that all the French mothers were jealous, for the boys of France were never thus received in their own capital city.

there to stay—and may it not be many—will depend upon your loyalty and your support. But to the mothers of America I would say that I know that the little boys and girls of France will go and gather the fairest flowers of our land to place on their graves, and if you go to France after the war, you will not be able to tell which was the grave of an American or of a French boy, for they will all be taken care of with the same love and the same affection.—[Lieut. Paul Perigord, of the French army, in Cartoons Magazine.

Tardy America.

Over in Paris they tell this story of Gen. Pershing. The general had engaged a taxi to call for him at 2 o'clock sharp. At three minutes past 2 the taxi driven by a young woman in uniform, drew up. The American commander, who, nervous and watch in hand, had been pacing up and down the walk, said sternly:

"Ma'amselle, you are three minutes late!"

The young woman thought an instant and then said quietly:

"Gen. Pershing, you were three years late!"

Fasting for Health.

IN THE United States Senate Senator Smoot recently urged a monthly fast day, to conserve the food supply.

This would be no great hardship. I know some people who always fast one day a week—from the evening meal of one day to the evening meal of the next. During "Ramazan" all good Mohammedans abstain from food until after sunset.

Hippocrates admitted the possibility of fasting more than six days without a fatal issue. Don't laugh at Hippocrates. There are even today physicians who will solemnly tell you that a man cannot go more than ten days without food, and that those who pretend to do so are fakers.

Meantime, the fasting cure has become quite popular since thirty-five years ago, when Dr. Tanner, now a resident of Los Angeles county, astonished the country and provoked incredulity on part of the medical fraternity by twice fasting for forty days. Since then this feat has been exceeded, and in some cases almost doubled.

Fasting is no new thing. In olden days it was common for philosophers and students and religious enthusiasts to fast, in order to mortify the flesh, and increase their spiritual and intellectual powers. Jesus fasted for forty days in the wilderness before he approached his great task.

Astonishing ignorance prevails among "laymen" and medical men alike on the subject of fasting. Recently a Los Angeles paper announced that a woman had fasted for forty-five days, "subsisting on little else but milk." Little else but milk—that is to say, she ate little besides food. Again, not long ago an old gentleman made a trip of 100 miles to ask me "what he should eat when he was fasting."

Fasting is a house-cleaning process. Here is an extract from an article on the "Fasting Cure" by J. H. Kellogg, M.D., of Battle Creek, in "Good Health:"

"The majority of people are eating two or three times as much as they need, and the consequence is that they cannot utilize it all, and it accumulates in the body as half-burned material, just as cinders will collect from the furnace until you cannot get air through the grate. You have to remove them before you can get a good bright fire burning. . . . Fasting gives the body a chance to clear up all the unnecessary material, which it will do before it will begin to consume the vital tissues. It is exactly the same principle that you follow in your house when you have a coal famine. Before you burn up the bric-a-brac and the furniture, you get rid of all the rubbish and unnecessary things."

Fasting is a most efficacious means of aiding nature to eject morbid matter from the system and restore normal conditions. In some cases—for instance when there is an internal tumor—it is the only way. Fasting gives the overworked and much abused stomach a therapeutic rest.

Fasting is especially indicated when a person is fleshy, incumbered with waste matter, "positive" physically and mentally, one who does not take sufficient physical exercise. Such people should also take frequent short fasts, and should never eat more than two meals a day. Fasting is not indicated in people of a nervous, emotional temperament, below normal in weight, and physically and mentally negative, with weak and flabby muscles. That is to say, they should not take a long fast, except when nature calls for a fast by forcing elimination, in the shape of some form of sickness. Those with organic heart disease should not take a long fast. See, however, that what you think is heart disease is not merely gas pressure on the heart.

Objections have been raised in some quarters against fasting that it is a species of cannibalism, the body feeding upon itself. For over forty years I have made a study of fasting for the cure of disease, and am therefore somewhat qualified to express an opinion. It is true that during a fast the body feeds upon itself, but it happens that it first proceeds to devour matter that should be got rid of. In Yeo's Physiology the following interesting table is published, showing the losses that occur in death following starvation:

Fat	97	per cent.
Spleen	63	"
Liver	56	"
Muscle	30	"
Blood	17	"
Nerve centers	0	"

The late Dr. Dewey claimed that during a protracted fast the most malignant tumor may be absorbed.

You may say that we often read how people have died after a week, or ten days, of starvation. There is a great difference between fasting and starvation. Fasting is voluntary; starvation is unvoluntary. Starvation, as in the case of shipwrecked mariners, or lost prospectors, is usually accompanied by great mental agony, exposure and physical suffering. That is what does the harm, not the abstinence from food.

It may also be said that death occasionally terminates a protracted fast. Sure. I have also heard of deaths following a brief illness, during which the patient was stuffed with food and doped with drugs. In such cases the death is not ascribed to the treatment administered by eminent medical practitioners, but to the disease. How illogical. Hereward Carrington writes as follows on this phase of the subject in "Vitality, Fasting and Nutrition:"

"In the last stages of many diseases, I do not doubt that a cure is quite impossible to effect, even by fasting, aided by all other hygienic auxiliaries. But the case should not have been left thus long before treatment was begun. The cause of the patient's death is, therefore, not the fasting, from which the body derives extreme benefit in every case, but the previous, lengthy and neglected diseases, which rendered the system incapable of being cured by any means; in fact, rendered the case absolutely hopeless. That so very few deaths result from fasting, then, shows the almost unlimited potency of this method of treatment; and shows also that death, in such cases, always results in spite of, not on account of, the fast having been ultimately undertaken."

During the past quarter of a century many persons have, with great benefit to their health, undergone periods of total abstinence from food, ranging up to seventy-five days. The limit where starvation is reached appears to be about ninety days, judging from cases where the stomach has been irreparably injured by a corrosive chemical.

There are two sure things about a fast. First; the unpleasant feelings—and they are often unpleasant enough, as when a man gives up the use of alcohol—last only from two to three days. After that all is peace and comfort. Second; the average loss of weight during a fast is one pound a day. If a person is much overweight, it will be more. If a person is very thin, it will be somewhat less.

There are few simple precautions that must be taken in fasting. To begin with, if you have been living entirely on cooked foods, lacking in the important mineral elements, so that your system is deficient in these elements, you should, before beginning a fast, live for a month principally on fresh fruits and salad plants, in order that you may have a proper start. Otherwise you are likely to suffer. It is absolutely essential that—at least during the first days of a fast—the bowels should be emptied daily by means of an enema, as during a fast they do not work normally. Many have found fasting a failure because they did not observe this simple rule. It is astonishing how much waste matter may come from the bowels after one, two or three weeks of fasting, showing how necessary such a house cleaning was. A warm bath should be taken daily. Drink water according to thirst. The fast should continue until the tongue is clean, and there is real hunger, not merely appetite.

The main thing is for you to have confidence in the outcome. If you have not that confidence, you should not fast, for your mental attitude will prevent it from benefiting you as it should.

The most striking immediate effects of a fast are the great increase in keenness of the perceptive faculties—sight, hearing and smelling. The intellect becomes much brighter, and mental tasks that seemed heavy are now trifles.

Care must be exercised in breaking a long fast.

Short fasts of from one day to a week are often of much benefit. A good plan is to fast every week for twenty-four hours, which may be done easily abstaining from food from the evening meal of one day to the evening meal of the next. This is going without food for twenty-four hours, yet you don't pass a day without eating.

In any case, be sure never to eat when you are not hungry. In such cases the food does you no good, but does harm. Don't eat merely because the dinner bell rings. Skip a meal, or two or more if necessary, until you are really hungry, and a crust of dry bread looks good to you. Then you may safely eat.

The no-breakfast plan, popularized by the late Dr. Dewey, is an excellent and valuable aid to the recovery of health. Scores of my consultants have reported that this one step has done more than any other one thing to transform them from invalids to healthy, active men and women. Strength is restored during sleep, so that a meal on awakening is altogether superfluous. If you have not yet done so, give the no-breakfast plan a fair trial, say for a month. You will be surprised at the wonderful increase in mental and physical efficiency during the forenoon. If you think you must do so, take, until you have weaned yourself from that also, a cup of tea or coffee, not less than one hour after rising, but do not eat even a cracker with it.

When a person is ignorant on the subject of fasting he should place himself in the hands of an experienced person, before undertaking a protracted fast.

Sometimes a "fruit fast"—eating nothing but fresh fruit in season—is better than a total fast, and where there is organic disease it is the only way. In this manner, while you are eating, you absorb only a small amount of nourishment. You have the benefit of the pure, filtered water in the fruit, and the medicinal acids it contains.

Fasting is a cure not only for physical, but also for mental ills. Wonderful recoveries from insanity have followed a complete fast. Perhaps some day, when medical bigotry ceases to fight against anything that is not indorsed by medical "authority," we shall see the fasting cure introduced in our insane asylums, and jails and reformatories, when the results will astonish the world, as they have in the fruitarian hospitals of Mildura, Australia, and Bromley, England.

Do not go to extremes. Do not fast merely for the sake of fasting. Above all, remember that it is of little use to abstain from food, if after the fast you resume a wrong method of eating. A fast gives you a fine opportunity to reform your dietetic habits, because at the end of a long fast a crust of dry stale bread will appeal to you.

For temporary relief, the acid of citrus fruits is highly effective, also pineapple. When a child evinces throat trouble do not be alarmed. Put it to bed for several days on a diet of oranges, grapefruit, pineapple and lemonade, the latter made, not with sugar, but with honey. Put a rag wrung out of cold water on the throat at night, covering it with dry flannel and wash off with cold water in the morning. Clean out the bowels, massage the throat with the fingers, dipped in oil, keep the child warm in bed, with fresh air.

Under this simple natural treatment I have seen chunks of white matter removed from the throat, and in a few days, the child was well. Under ordinary treatment there would have been a long and serious illness, quarantine and the inevitable after-effects of suppression, that does not cure.

Camouflage.

Women have a habit of diminishing their age. Perhaps that is pardonable, so long as men judge women like flowers, or birds of paradise, according to their beauty.

On the other hand, men who pose as discoverers of a "secret of youth" frequently enlarge their age, so as to add to their fame.

Thus, Adolph Hanish, teacher of health and breath culture, and leader of the "Mazdaznan" cult, who has recently again got into unenviable notoriety, claims to be 75 years of age, whereas he was born on December 7, 1866, in Weissenberg, West Prussia, thus being now only 52 years old.

Again, a noted lecturer on health, who recently appeared in Los Angeles, under the auspices of a church organization, is, I am told by one who knows him, much younger than he pretends to be.

The efficiency of the methods of those who practice this kind of camouflage may justly be questioned.

Mental methods, in which their exponents use incantations based upon the will, and aim to use the mechanism of the mind to force phrases of words wilfully upon the mind of another, are not true mental methods. They appeal to only the sensuous features of the animal mind, but do not appeal at all to the intelligence of the real mind. No actual healing action is ever established in these ways.—[L. E. Whipple, M.D.

Eating absolutely dry—and this includes avoiding mushes and soups—and eating absolutely nothing between meals, will go far to cure chronic constipation.

EVERY HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD KNOW—

Of These New Cretonne Things. By Retta Badger.

THERE is such a big field for the use of cretonne and yet the material is so varied that it never becomes ordinary. There are designs for every room and to suit every taste and each day seems to bring new ideas for the utilization of this cloth of many colors. Some of the newest patterns of cretonne are especially adapted to cutting out and appliqueing. The stunning piece with black bars and medallion figures (the one in the illustration) is one that is very good for this purpose. At the same time that I saw this piece I saw another of Egyptian design that could be cut apart into the most wonderful figures that seemed to have been planned for the scarf or pillow on which they were to be appliqued.

A design in cretonne that lends itself especially well to decoration.

The charming boudoir set of daintily flowered cretonne demonstrates again how useful this material is. Everything is made to match, dressing table cover, candle shades, pin cushion, glove box, tray, waste basket and boudoir pillow, all of the same delicately tinted piece. The effect is charmingly refreshing to look upon for the design is one that is subdued and the colors are of the softest so that the whole reminds one of a bed of forget-me-nots in an old fashioned garden—it is just that quaint and simple.

USE POP CORN—THREE WAYS.

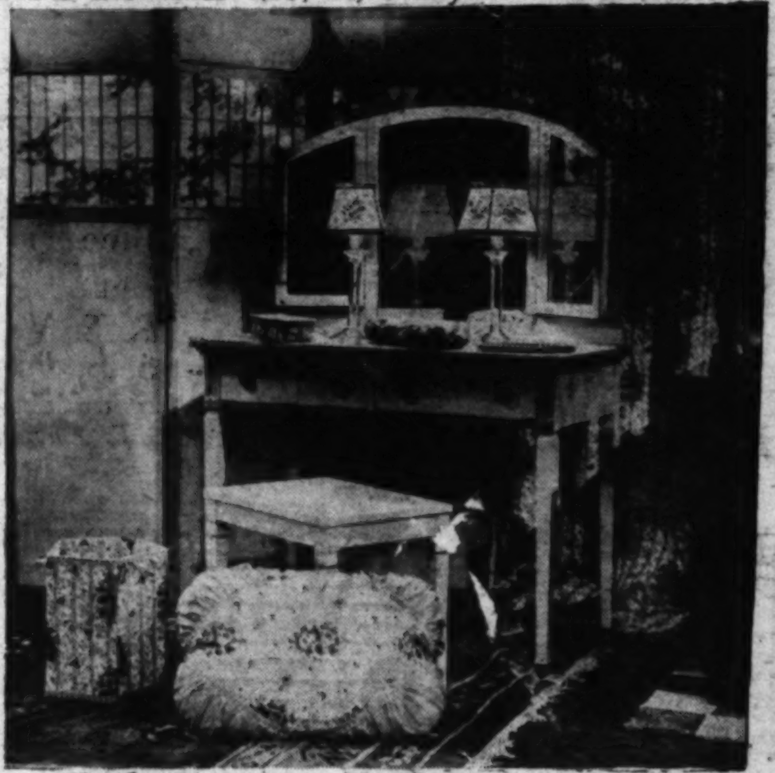
There is one good American food of which we have an abundance and we can use as much of it as we like—corn. Use all kinds and in many ways. Pop corn is one of the kinds everyone likes. It is a good food just simply popped, and can also be made into such a wholesome, inexpensive sweet that it should be widely used. Here is the way to pop it and several ways to use it.

Shell the corn if it is on the cob and pop the dried corn in a covered iron frying pan or a regular popper, shaking vigorously. If a wire popper is used, do not pop the corn directly over the flame or it will scorch. Shake it quite high over the flames, or better over coals or on the top of the stove. Take just enough corn to cover the bottom of the popper. A cup of pop corn makes about three quarts when popped.

Pop corn is good, of course, seasoned with salt. A common way of serving is to mix with a very little melted butter and then sprinkle with salt. But have you ever tried it as a breakfast food eaten with milk or cream? It makes a good cereal.

To make a sweet of pop corn boil together one cup of corn sirup and one tablespoon of vinegar until a few drops harden in water and pour it over the freshly popped corn while it is hot. As soon as it is cool enough to handle, grease the hands and form into balls. This amount of sirup covers three quarts of pop corn.

Chocolate pop corn is delicious. Cook one cup of corn sirup for five minutes. Add two ounces of chocolate (two squares,) and stir until melted. Cook slowly until a soft ball is formed in water. Beat until thick. Have the popped corn in a greased dish. Pour the sirup over it and form into balls when cool enough to handle. This amount covers one and one-half quarts of pop corn.



The furnishings of the dainty dressing table are all made up of this same charming piece of cretonne

DIFFERENT SEASONINGS AND FLAVORINGS.

When you go to the cupboard and see salt and pepper, mustard, cinnamon, allspice, lemon and vanilla don't think of using them again and growing weary of the same old dishes. Instead try, for a change, any one of the following: Red pepper, white pepper, paprika, Mexican chili pepper, chili powder, curry powder, poultry seasoning, onion and celery salt, garlic seasoning, marjoram, mint, sage thyme, basil, parsley, tumeric, tarragon, savory, Spanish saffron, oregano and comino (Mexican spices used to prepare chili con carne,) bay leaves, pimiento, coriander, dill, fennel, cardamon, caraway, gumbo file, horse radish, ginger, cloves, mace, nutmeg, citron, cassia buds, coffee, cocoanut, macarroon powder, almond, banana, orange, pistachio, pineapple, peppermint, maple, spearmint, wintergreen, rose, raspberry, strawberry, cherry, peach, apricot, nectarine, violet and blackberry. And some of the last named, if used as substi lemon or vanilla, will make tha less cake taste good just becaus ness in flavor.

period. The snake refused all food offered it, and at last the natives came to the conclusion that anything that could go that long without food, must either be a god or have divine power.

In India, saffron, milk and sweetmeats are brought to the snake shrines. And when a native has sickness in his house or among his cattle, he sacrifices on Tuesday or Sunday a goat. That is if the nag is propitious and this is known by the shivering of the animal when cold water is poured on its back.

If so, the priest pronounces his blessing to the solicitous one by saying, "Bholo ho" or, "much good may it do you." Thus we see that among all nations the snake seems to fill the role both of beneficent and malevolent deity. An old manuscript says, "The snake alone of all animals without legs or wings or any of the usual appliances of locomotion still moves with singular celerity," and he might have added graces, for no one who has ever watched a snake slowly progressing over the ground with his head erect and his body following apparently without exertion, can fail to be struck with the peculiar beauty of the motion.

There is no jerk, no reflex motion, as in all other animals, even fishes, but a continual progression in curves. Their general form is full of elegance, their color varied, their eyes bright and piercing. Then, too, they can exist for an indefinite time without food or apparent hunger. He periodically casts his skin and as the ancients fabled, by that process renews his youth.

Add to this his longevity, though not so great as often supposed, is still sufficient to make the superstitious forget everything else in order to ascribe to them immortality. Though fear might seem sufficient to account for the prevalence of the worship, on looking closely at it we are struck either in the wilderness of Sivai, the groves of Epidaurus, or in the Samaritan huts, the snake is always the Agathodaemon, the bringer of health and good fortune, he is the teacher of wisdom and the oracle of future events.

It appears to us that as our civilization has progressed, our love for animals has waned. Notice the affection in which the cow is held by those that we call heathens. It is about time that we took a lesson from them and treated not only our cattle, but our domestic pets half humanely.

Heroism of the French Women.

The world will never know what France endured while she and England were being prepared for war, what France suffered when the news came to her of the martyrdom of Belgium, when she heard of her northern cities being destroyed and her art treasures being wrecked. In those months the news would come to a home that one boy had been killed, and then another, and sometimes a third one—and sometimes even the father. For I have seen in the French army fathers and their boys fighting together in the same regiment, and sometimes dying on the same day on the same battlefield.

One incident that came under my notice illustrates the heroic spirit of my people. One day my regiment was billeted in a small town. Our colonel asked us to give a parade for the few inhabitants of the place. The ceremony was over, and the soldiers stood at attention while the Marseillaise was being played—it was my privilege to carry the flag that day. Suddenly a woman of the place broke through the ranks, came to me and reaching for the fringe of the flag, held it lovingly, kissed it, and buried her face in its folds. The colonel, surprised, came and said, "What is it, mother?"

She handed him a letter, which contained a notice of the death of her fourth and last child—and she was a widow. And she said, "I have given all to France. The flag is my only love, but how proud I am of it."—[Lieut. Paul Perigord, of the French army, in Cartoons Magazine.

PROGRESS AND PRODUCTION

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 19, 1918.

Wool and mutton for Uncle Sam.

Does the "Flock on Every Farm" Mean Us?

A champion "flock" of Shropshires, consisting of a two-year-old ram, two yearling ewes, and two ewe lambs.

Will Sheep Pay Here?

CAN sheep profitably be kept on land valued at from $250 to $2500 an acre? Many Southern California ranchers, patriotically interested in the national "More Sheep" campaign, which has resulted in the establishment of great numbers of war flocks in other parts of the country, are asking this question.

Experienced sheep men answer the question with both a "yes" and a "no." There are farms without sheep in this part of the State that could readily and profitably carry a small bunch of breeding ewes. But obviously there is no place for sheep in the grove of a few acres, often unfenced, where all available ground is utilized for trees and irrigating facilities and where the land is bare during a great part of the year, after cover crops have been turned under. Nor could the intensive vegetable gardener find a place for sheep on his place.

On all such highly-specialized farms, of which there are so many in Southern California, the keeping of sheep, would be impracticable, if for no other reason, because of the necessity of buying nearly all the feed required, a consideration to be reckoned with at present high prices. The profit in sheep consists largely in their economical use of pasture and cheap foods, but it is an erroneous idea that they can live principally upon "salt and scenery." The sheep is, in reality, a heavy eater in proportion to its weight, and is not, as many people suppose, essentially a scavenger.

But even though the citrus and vegetable growers cannot be looked to for an increase in the sheep population, there are in Southern California, many farms, including high-priced lands, which could profitably number sheep among their sources of revenue. Dairy farms, deciduous fruit ranches, walnut groves, dry farms and mixed farms given over to a variety of purposes, can often, with profit, support sheep.

WHERE SHEEP WILL PAY.

On some of the dairy ranches, where ensilage and hay are put up, a place might readily be found for from fifteen to 100 breeding ewes, according to the size of the place, and the pasture available. The growing of grain crops would furnish not only more pasture, but the concentrates desired for conditioning the ewes and fattening the lambs.

There is no reason, it is asserted, why the keeping of sheep and dairy or beef cattle together should result in damage to the pastures. Range cattlemen in the days when the forage of the open country was a bone of bitter contention between them and the wool growers, were wont to say that sheep would ruin grass merely by passing over it. This old animosity, however, has largely been forgotten. Members of the Forestry Division of the United States Department of Agriculture declare that their experiments have shown that sheep, when properly handled, not only do not injure grass by grazing over it, but, because of their even distribution of manure, which is richer in fertilizing value per pound than that of any other animal, will actually improve the range or pasture after years of constant use.

Freighting wool to the railroad.

A contented farm flock.

It has been suggested that the raising of a few sheep may be the means of tiding some of the dairymen over the hard times brought about by this year's high feed prices, even justifying the purchase of a little more feed, if this is necessary.

On the diversified farm the advisability of keeping a small flock will naturally depend upon individual conditions. On many such farms the sheep could find their sustenance part of the time under the walnut or deciduous fruit trees and, after the cover crops had been plowed, sist on the alfalfa pasture and If grain were raised, the would make excellent fall and the stubble also could be must be used, however, in changes of feed, especially alfalfa, because of the danger and bloat. The secret service, and the agencies co-operating with it have accomplished wonders in running the American Huns to earth, but it will be very evident to anyone who thinks that they alone cannot meet the situation. The very nature of our population and governmental workings makes it comparatively easy for the traitorous curs to come and go as they will and correspondingly difficult to apprehend them. More of them can be detected by alert and patriotic citizens at large than the secret service can ever hope to reach. It is simply a question of seeing that no man seen doing anything or heard saying anything to arouse reasonable suspicion is permitted to escape an investigation.

Recent events throughout the country have shown that we cannot be too careful. In our midst everywhere are enemies who will stop at nothing to further the cause of the Hun. We are at war! Eternal vigilance is the price of safety, even though California with its smiling fields and prosperous cities is thousands of miles away from the lines in France!

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT SHEEP.

Sheep production in the United States has decreased fully 20 per cent. in the past fifteen years.

The annual imports of the United States have included over one-half the wool consumed in the country.

The mutton trade at the markets has doubled during the past ten years.

In the British Isles, with about four-fifths the area of California, 30,000,000 head of sheep are grown, most of them on cultivated farms.

The available ranges are stocked almost to the limit of their capacity; the country must look to the farmers for the needed increase.

Sheep can be raised with profit on high-priced land. Men in a position to know stand sponsor for the statement.

The University of California has issued a bulletin entitled "A Flock of Sheep on the Farm." Ask for Circular No. 184.

Southern California is better adapted to sheep raising than many of the Eastern States, where "war flocks" have been established. Stomach worms and foot-rot are practically unknown here.

No better encouragement can be given to sheep raising than the control of vicious, wandering dogs. Many States are enacting stringent "dog" legislation to protect and foster the sheep industry.

"SKILLED FARM LABOR."

The recent action of the War Department in providing for furloughs of farmers and skilled farm laborers in the national service as well as the exemption of skilled labor under the draft law, has resulted in some confusion as to exactly what persons were affected.

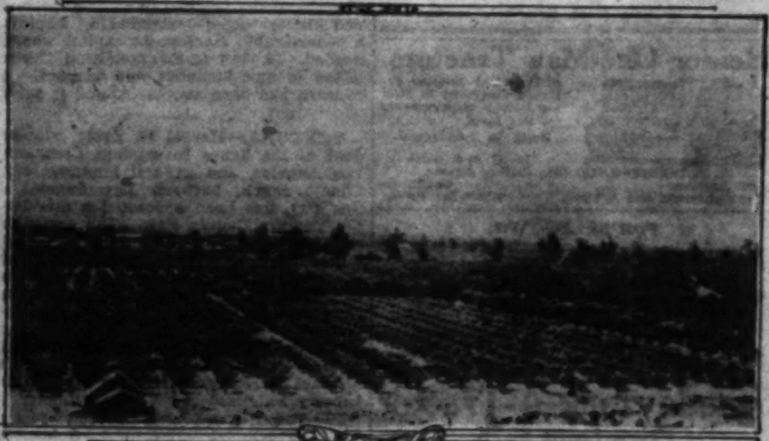
The Committee on Labor suggests that a comprehensive definition for "skilled farm laborers" is: A farm laborer who knows by training and experience the ordinary methods and practices employed in growing and harvesting the crops produced in the community in which he lives.

Complying with the request of the Farm Labor Division for a test by which fakes may be culled out from applicants for farm jobs, it is recommended by the committee that this be done by requiring answers to pertinent questions and that these questions be selected by agreement between the county farm bureau agent and the emergency labor man in the community concerned.

FINE FRUIT OUTLOOK IN THE BANNING-BEAUMONT DISTRICT.

BANNING.—One-eighth of the Southern California canned fruit pack was put up last season nearly 2500 feet above sea level, in the San Bernardino and San Jacinto mountains, at Banning. Lying at the summit of the San Gorgonio Pass in Riverside county, where the Lincoln highway and the Southern Pacific Railroad top the divide between the San Bernardino Valley and Colorado, the 7000 acres of deciduous fruit orchards in the adjacent Banning and Beaumont districts forms one of the most important growing areas of Southern California. And, inasmuch as a large part of the total acreage is yet to come into full bearing, the section may be said to be as yet only at the beginning of its development.

It is noteworthy that close as the Banning and Beaumont districts lie together, the character of the plantings differ radically. Beaumont's 3000 acres of deciduous fruit trees include the largest cherry and apple plantings, and one of the most important pear plantings south of the Tehachepi. In the district are over 2000 acres of apples, 450 acres of cherries, 275 acres of pears and 125 acres of peaches.



Deciduous orchards in Banning district.

At Banning are to be found the large almond and prune orchards, as well as a large acreage in apricots. The plantings are divided as follows: Almonds, 1250 acres; apricots, 1000 acres; prunes, 550 acres; peaches, 525 acres, and apples, 400 acres.

Orchards throughout the entire valley are in splendid shape this spring and, with the exception of apricots, which are light, prospects for all varieties of fruit appear to be excellent. Almonds in Banning and cherries in Beaumont promise bumper crops.

TRACTOR WIDELY USED.

In the Banning Valley the orchard tractor plays an important part in the working of the orchards, not only helping to solve the labor shortage, but also, by better and frequently more timely work, particularly during the spring rush, proving a big factor in larger crop production. The tractor has come to stay in the Banning orchards, and its use is increasing rapidly.

Banning and Beaumont orchards are well-tilled and pruned, and pests are efficiently kept down, with a resulting excellent grade of all kinds of fruit. The water supply is obtained from the Banning and Edgar canyons, where some of the earliest and most successful schemes for check damming and spreading over the boulder strewn gravel beds was carried out some years back under the supervision of W. E. Podley of Riverside, the pioneer of this valuable and important work in California. With a fifty-inch head available for forty-eight hours every twenty-five to thirty-five days during the irrigation season—for a ten-acre orchard—equivalent to one inch continuous flow per acre, the trees do not lack for water. Water in both districts is distributed on turn, or in regular rotation; furrow irrigation being used to spread it on the orchard.

HOME LABOR USED.

Last season the Banning cannery handled 1000 tons of fresh apricots and over 3000 tons of fresh peaches—2250 tons of freestones and 800 tons of clings—packing over 4,500,000 cans (191,000 cases) of fruit. Employing a maximum of 375 hands, over 2000 tons of fresh fruit were handled in twenty-two consecutive days last summer, averaging ninety-three tons of fruit daily. White help is used exclusively, about one-third of the workers being from the Beaumont and Banning districts. Many families come yearly from the Imperial Valley, escaping the summer heat there and in many instances enjoying a profitable vacation under ideal working conditions. The cannery maintains a model camp, providing a man to keep it in order, the only charge being a moderate one for water. The regular transient or floating help is not encouraged.

Last year the Banning almond crop was light, but all indications point to a bumper yield this season of between 300 and 400 tons. The first crop to bloom and last to be harvested, the almond finds ideal growing conditions in the valley, where there is the largest acreage of this nut to be found south of the Tehachepi.

The Banning prune is considered by the trade equal in quality to the Santa Clara, and last season over 500 tons of French prunes were dried and processed here with prospects for this season for a somewhat lighter output. As with the almond, the Banning acreage of prunes is the largest in Southern California.

Some sixty tons of apricots were dried last year, but the whole of this year's short crop will probably find its way to the cannery.

IMPERIAL VALLEY DETERMINED TO PRODUCE A RECORD CROP.

EL CENTRO.—The welding of farming interests representing an investment of $50,000,000 and the amalgamation of food-raising effort for the betterment of both method and product constitute the ambitious programme now being worked out by the people of Imperial Valley.

Although the Imperial section last year raised $38,000,000 worth of products on land assessed at $30,000,000, the farmers in the great fertile basin were not satisfied with their year's work. They are convinced that neither the returns from the soil nor from the markets were what they might have been. This year, by combining into associations, they hope to roll up a still mightier total for home and country.

Federal experts operating through the Imperial County Farm Bureau showed them defects in methods and in marketing. At the eleven farm centers more than 5000 farmers weighed the words of the Federal and State field agents, and considered them in connection with last year's experience.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPON DENTS. IN PARAGRAPHS.

PORTERVILLE.—For the first time since its completion, the Terra Bella irrigation district plant, built at a cost of more than $1,000,000, is now serving water to members of the district association along all of its main canals. Over 500 inches of water is being delivered to the users. All machinery has been completely tested out and is ready to answer to all demands. In view of the prospect for an ample supply of irrigation water, a number of large development projects will be put under way in the Deer Creek district, south of here, a large proportion of the land of which is served by the system.

BRAWLEY.—The first car of cantaloupes to move from the Imperial Valley will leave this city within a few days, according to local distributors. Pony crates have been going out by express for two weeks. Brawley will be the shipping center, as it is the center of the cantaloupe belt, which extends from Calexico to Niland, in the central and western parts of the valley. Railroad traffic heads promise sufficient cars for the rapid movement of the crop to eastern centers. There are about 10,900 acres, and the crop, it is expected, will be in excess of 6000 cars.

IMPERIAL.—Sixty bushels of wheat to the acre will be harvested by many ranchers in the northern part of the Imperial Valley this year, according to W. H. Best, who has 120 acres in Sonora wheat about ready for threshing. Mr. Best believes wheat a better crop than barley for Imperial Valley farmers. Many of those who raised wheat this year will pay for their land in one crop, it is believed.

EL CENTRO.—Fully 60 per cent. of the cotton crop this year will be "volunteer" cotton, that is, cotton grown from last year's stalks. The frosts of last winter were not heavy enough to kill the plants, and strong early growth has resulted. The stalks are cut about five inches from the roots. The cost of raising cotton is reduced from $6 to $8 per acre by this method.

SAN FERNANDO.—The first consignments of the 500,000 tomato plant contract which the boys of the agricultural department of the San Fernando High School have undertaken to fill has been delivered to ranchers of the locality. According to D. E. Clower, head of the agricultural work in the school, all plants raised on the school acreage by the boys will soon be disposed of. The boys of the school are manufacturing a small garden tractor with a seven-horse-power motorcycle engine for use on the school farm.

YUCAIPA.—The hay and grain crop of the valley is in the best possible condition as a result of the recent heavy fogs and light rains. The rains gave the growing grain the amount of moisture needed to insure a bountiful crop. From all indications, the crop will be one of the best of recent years and fair prices are expected by the farmers for the hay and grain. Practically all the available land in the valley has been put under cultivation, even to intercropping between the rows of apple trees.

VISALIA.—After operating here for the past four years, the Visalia Co-operative Poultry Association directors have voted to dissolve that organization. At the meeting, when plans for future work were considered, it was stated by the management that because of the increasing costs of materials and higher wages demanded by employees, a considerable increase in capital would be needed. In view of this condition, the resolution to quit business was adopted. The concern has been successful and is solvent.

VENTURA.—Harold H. Braly, vice-president of the Janss Investment Company of Los Angeles, and general manager of the Conejo ranch, between Los Angeles and this city, has been appointed a director of the Ventura County Fair. The agricultural exhibition will be held on dates to be determined later, as it is intended that it shall not conflict with the big Liberty Agricultural Fair to be held in Los Angeles next October. Mr. Braly left for the East recently to arrange for the Conejo ranch swine exhibit at the National Swine Show to be held at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and will also act as representative for the California Liberty Fair and the Ventury County Fair while away. The Conejo ranch has just sold five Duroc-Jersey gilts to A. Goldschmidt for a consideration stated to have been $475. The Janss Investment Company, owners of this ranch, announce that there is a heavy demand today for thoroughbred stock, and that practically all breeders, both in the East and in the West, are today oversold. The Conejo ranch is specializing exclusively in the raising of thoroughbred Hampshires and Duroc-Jersey swine.

CALIPATRIA.—To put into cultivation 3000 acres of land between New and Alamo rivers at the edge of Salton Sea, work will soon commence on a large dam in the Alamo for the North End Water Company. The company figures on a diversion of 350 feet, enough to water 30,000 acres.

BIG INCREASE IN BEAN ACREAGE.

SANTA ANA.—It is estimated that in Orange county no less than 65,000 acres altogether is being planted to beans this year. Limas predominate, with blackeye in the minority. There is an increase of fully 10,000 acres over last year's bean acreage in this county.

The increase is due largely to the fact that prospects for high prices are enticing and that many farmers are anxious to grow a war crop. To the south of Santa Ana on the Irvine ranch a total of 25,000 acres is being planted and around El Toro and San Juan Capistrano is 8500 acres more. To the southwest there are many hundreds of acres going to beans this year that last year grew sugar beets. All over the county beans are being grown between the rows of young orange, lemon and walnut trees. Wherever a farmer can find even a small space, he is more than likely to be planting beans.

It was estimated recently by W. C. Jerome, a director of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association, that Orange county this year will produce 750,000 bags of beans.

Bean growers are not asking for rain now. Lands have been prepared and a rain would mean that the land would have to be worked over again, weeds would start and planting would be delayed. Years of practical experience have given the average bean grower a kind of superstition about his planting. Some start planting on May 4 every year. Another may not start until May 8. A lot of them have some favorite day and from that day they do not budge.

MANY BOYS ENLIST FOR FARM SERVICE.

Officials of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau report that a large number of boys too young to enlist in the army and navy have joined the Boys' Working Reserve and volunteered their services for farm work in this section. The boys for the most part are enlisting through the principals of the high schools, and will be placed where they can do the most good and as rapidly as the call comes for them.

The Boys' Working Reserve is an organization of a semi-military nature, having appropriate insignia and regulations, and is sponsored by the government to help bridge over the national labor shortage. All patriotic boys not otherwise engaged in productive occupations are asked to enlist. The initial attempt at using boys in farm work last year was so satisfactory on the whole that great expectations are based on this year's appeal.

Farmers desiring help should make application to the County Farm Advisor at the Courthouse or to the Chief Deputy A. C. Minear, No. 451 North Hill street. At the request of the Federal government, boys working in well-settled districts where it is practicable to maintain camps will be in charge of trained camp Result—the formation of a cattlemen's association, a milk producers' association, a hog raisers' association and the beginning of an alfalfa producers' association, a honey producers' exchange and an egg marketing association.

Long staple cotton growers already have an exchange through which they procure seed, swap tillage ideas and market their crop. Short staple men will soon amalgamate for procuring the best from the soil, and from the markets for both seed and fiber.

It is believed that before the end of the year each branch of agriculture will be so thoroughly organized for mutual help that the value of the products of the great Imperial basin will be enhanced in a great measure.

The purposes of these co-operative bodies is primarily to better the product, than secure the best market for it. The University of California and various Federal field experts are aiding in this great work. Already hundreds of farmers are enrolled as members of the hog, cattle and dairying associations. The idea has gripped the tiller of the soil. He has seen its advantage and is enthusiastically taking it up.

The State experiment stations of every State have continuously sought by experiment to add to the knowledge of the action and feeding value of the ingredients of fertilizers, and by systems of pamphlet distribution they submit their findings for the farmers' consideration. This phase of the government work cannot be fairly classed as protective, but as nationally educative so that from it trained minds can draw valuable conclusions to sustain or establish principles in teaching elementary agriculture in schools and colleges.

Experience among farmers, from the market gardener and the fruit grower on through the grades of dairymen, broad vegetable and grain raisers, to the stockmen who combine almost all phases of agricultural production, has been that the real need of the farmer in the use of the commercial forms of plant food is reliable information on their use. To understand how to feed plant food to our plants it becomes necessary to have some clear knowledge of how plants feed. This we will say, calls for a knowledge of plant physiology. We do not need to frighten ourselves with the term, which only means the science or correct working of plant life. To understand the working of plants in obtaining food, the specialist on physiology takes consideration of all the vast flora of nature within his reach, even to a study of bacteria and all kinds of yeasts and microscopic growths.

In the production of the world's food through the processes we have named, agriculture and husbandry, only two great divisions of plants directly engage our attention. They are the plants which mature their produce (or useful fruitage) above ground, and those whose produce develops in the soil on the roots. It seems useless to glibly talk of phosphoric acid, potash and nitrates and their ultimate action on plants without knowing how to use them for sure results. The natural action of rootage of such agricultural plants as develop their produce on their aerial parts, is to reach down into the deep soil for water, which is the grand ingredient of plant growth. With the water thus obtained, the plant is enabled to expand aerial parts, and by absorbing carbonic acid from the air it is able to build its parts both in the air and in the soil. But it has been abundantly proven that to carry out its full destiny it must get more than the hydrogen and oxygen of the water and the carbon and oxygen of the carbonic acid gas. The plant must have substances comprised in the minerals of soil. With them it must have nitrogen from the air, after it has been converted to nitric acid through the action of bacteria, which only grow and work in the dark beneath the soil surface, and then are formed into plant food by being chemically combined with such soil mineral bases as soda, potash, magnesia and lime. The minerals required from the soil, while embracing a considerable list, are usually noted as phosphoric acid and potash, with lime rather apologetically thrown in.

Lime has not yet been substantially admitted in the circle of commercial fertilizers as a necessary plant food, perhaps because dictums laid down by "authorities" die slowly, but those engaged in the real business of husbandry are very surely coming to accept it as such. How then does the plant get these mineral foods and nitrates which must be carried up to its aerial parts? The answer is, by a set of roots or rootlets which reach out sidewise in the soil and from which again fine root hairs grow. The root hairs are the true mineral and nitrate food gatherers of the plant, as the stomach of the leaves are the aerial food absorbers through which the carbonic acid of the air is obtained. While it is true that plant roots, being natural absorbers of water, necessarily obtain limited supplies of such mineral food and nitrates as may happen to be sufficiently dissolved in the water they absorb, this faculty of root absorption is not their real food-obtaining machinery. As the plants develop and an increased water supply is required, the deep roots elongate and also put out spreaders. Also more roots are sent down both from the original main roots and from the lateral roots that spread out in the soil. A study of root systems has shown that the deep roots seldom have root hairs, or at any rate they seldom develop important quantities of these hairs. So we know from this that the plants do not seek their root gathering foods in the subsoil.

A Key to Root Feeding.

This word "subsoil" now gives us a key to the feeding roots. It is called subsoil because it is below the organized soil which we commonly call the loam. This loam is usually combined more or less with humus which is a result of decomposed vegetable and animal (bugs and worms) matter. As atmosphere is necessary to the decomposition of such matter, we find the loam contains air. Thus this aerated soil is the soil from which the plant must get its principal food supply, and it is in it that the feeding rootlets and root hairs develop. The greater the depth of the organized loam above the subsoil, the greater and deeper the development of feeding rootlets, because it offers wider pasturage for these rootlets. If the plants depended upon simple absorption of free liquids from the soil, we could not account for their obtaining food from perfectly drained loam in which no free water is found, yet we know that they feed freely in such loam. This so far refers particularly to plants that develop their produce in the air above ground, and while it is all applicable to the class of agricultural plants the useful product of which is rootage developed below the surface, there is a difference to be observed in feeding. The root plants, like potatoes, turnips, carrots, parsnips, beets, etc., develop their produce only in the depth of the loam, and while they send down roots for water, they do not develop any produce in the subsoil. For instance, the depth of the beet root for market is measured by the depth of loam in which it can feed by its fibrous lateral rootlets and not by the depth its roots reach into the subsoil for water.

In applying festilizers we must be guided by the depth of our loam, as the more thoroughly the full loam depth is supplied with them, the better and surer will be the result on the produce.

THE ORANGE APHIS.

For some unknown reason, say representatives of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, the various parasites which usually keep down the orange aphis appear to be on a vacation. eManwhile the aphis has increased until serious damage has been done in many groves. No one can forsee just when the parasites will appear and clean up the aphis. Those wishing to take the matter into their own hands should spray the trees with the following solution:

Blackleaf 40	¾ ounce
Soap	4 ounces
Water	4 gallons

Dissolve the soap in hot or boiling water; add the "blackleaf 40" and boil for a few minutes, after which add enough water to make four gallons of prepared spray.

HOW TO "START" THE TRACTOR AND HOW TO KEEP IT GOING.

A STORY is told of a Canadian farmer who allowed his tractor motor to run all night because he was afraid of losing time on an important job through not being able to start the machine in the morning. The yarn, no doubt, dates back to the time when internal-combustion engines had not reached their present state of development. It at least illustrates the troubles encountered by many early tractioneers.

California farmers, having never had to contend with the extreme cold weather of the east and north, have been spared some of the "starting" difficulties common to all gas engines a few years ago. Many local ranchers, however, undoubtedly recall with amusement a threshing scene, familiar in the old days, and maddening enough at the time. That was the starting of a big, unwieldy engine on a chilly morning by wrapping a rope several times around the fly-wheel, hitching a team to the loose end, and "spinning her."

Such methods, fortunately, are seldom necessary with the modern tractor. It is evident that the conditions necessary for easy startinng (unless the engine is out of adjustment) are merely the correct mixture of air and fuel, and a hot, sharp spark to explode this mixture. Both conditions have been largely attained by improved design; the first, by using a high-grade fuel from an auxiliary tank for starting and the adoption of better carburetor construction; the second, by the almost universal use of high tension and oscillating magnetos.

NEW DEVICES TRIED.

One tractor manufacturer, at least, has included an electric starter in the regular equipment of his machines, and it is not unlikely that other companies will adopt electrical starting devices. A Los Angeles inventor has installed on several local tractors, a compressed air starter which is said to be effective, especially on the larger engines. An air compressor is driven by the tractor engine and automatically cuts off when the pressure in the storage tank reaches a certain point. This tank, it is said, will hold enough compressed air to start the engine under the most difficult conditions. The air is driven out by the explosion and has no effect upon the mixture. Ordinarily, it is claimed, this machine will start the engine with the first injection of air.

Other starting devices have been adopted by different tractor manufacturers. One type in general use is the "impulse starter," a contrivance for spinning the magneto shaft at a high rate of speed while the motor is being turned over at a slow speed; this rapid movement produces a hot, "fat" spark for starting and continues until the engine has attained a speed of about 200 r.p.m., when the device is automatically thrown out of gear.

One of the largest types of tractors is equipped with an auxiliary engine, of one horse power, a complete power plant in itself, air-cooled and started with batteries. This little motor may be engaged with the fly-wheel of the big machine by means of a friction wheel and is capable of spinning its "big brother."

Other starting schemes include ratchet levers, a handle that is engaged in holes placed at intervals in the fly-wheel, and a locking device which holds the engine at the point where one of the cylinders is ready to fire. With this latter equipment, the starting cylinder is connected to a hand air pump, and sufficient pressure is pumped into the cylinder to start the engine when the electric spark is generated. The locking device, although of sufficient power to hold the engine against compression, releases when the explosion takes place.

SOME COMMON MISTAKES.

Flooding the engine with fuel, according to a prominent tractor engineer, is the cause of more failures to start than any other reason. He points out that if the first charge fails to explode, time and trouble may be saved by turning the motor over a few times until all the gas has been driven out. It should also be borne in mind, he says, that a hot engine requires only about half as much fuel for priming as a cold engine. There is, consequently, more danger of flooding a motor which is started the second time (as, for instance, in the afternoon after a stop for dinner.) The tendency of most tractor operators, it has been established, is to squirt as much priming fuel into the cylinders when the engine is warm as when it is cold, with the result that the mixture is made very rich and cannot explode.

Most tractor operators are familiar with the practice of heating the carburetor to facilitate starting in cold weather. However, comparatively few persons, it seems, understand the necessity of warming the manifold at the same time. The reason for this is readily seen when it is explained that the gasoline, although vaporized in the heated carburetor, will often recondense on the cold walls of the manifold.

Heating the fuel is a practice to be left entirely to the discretion of the operator, although one camparatively safe method is to place the priming can in hot water.

After priming, it is advisable to wait a short time before commencing to crank the engine, as the fuel must have time to vaporize; most tractor owners have had the experience of cranking furiously immediately after priming, with no results, and then, after resting a few moments, having the engine start readily at the first turn. This, it is explained, is due to the evaporation of the fuel in the meantime. However, a motor that is hot can be started immediately after priming.

THINGS TO REMEMBER.

Few unskilled operators understand the connection between starting troubles and the lubricating system of the engine. That there is a connection is

As a last resort, if it is impossible to buy aged ewes or even yearlings, the farmer can make a start with lambs, either by carrying them over until they are yearlings, depending upon their wool to pay their "keep," or by breeding them as lambs. Both practices are apt to involve loss and disappointment, however, for one inexperienced in the business.

Anyone who is considering the purchase of ewes for the 1919 lambing may well commence a study of the subject now and get in touch with possible sources of supply. Under present market conditions, it may be some time before ewes of the desired type and ages can be obtained.

GOOD SIRES PAY.

Having successfully embarked in the business, the farmer's most important step the second season will be the purchase of the ram or rams. It is sometimes difficult to see the wisdom of buying high-priced sires, but experience and observations have convinced me that any farmer-flockmaster who expects to stay in the business can well afford to spend at least $50 for a ram. Under farm conditions, one sire may be counted upon to serve 60 ewes, but he should have grain and the best of care.

Hundreds of rams are purchased every year by mail. By answering the advertisements of reliable breeders, the farm wool grower may readily make a deal, leaving to the breeder the selection of the sire. If there is a flock close at hand, personal selection is, of course, to be preferred.

By the use of good rams, the farmer will not only rapidly improve his flock, but will realize greater returns from his lambs and wool. It has been said that no other class of live stock may be "built up" so quickly as sheep. Common range ewes may be made the foundation for a block which will in a few years, closely approximate registered stuff.

TAKE LAUSON AGENCY.

The S. C. Carter Company, automobile machinists, at Nos. 767-769 San Pedro street, has taken over the agency for the Lauson tractor, the newest of the steel-farm horses to be introduced to California farmers. The Carter company, which has been engaged in business in Los Angeles for the past twelve years, will distribute the Lauson in this territory as representative of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, Pacific Coast distributors.

The Lauson is manufactured by the John Lauson Manufacturing Company of New Holstein, Wis., and has been in successful use in the Central West for the past three years. It was introduced to the Coast at the big tractor demonstration at Davis last month, where it attracted much attention. A feature of the tractor is its dustproof case, protecting all working parts of the machinery.

TO LARGER QUARTERS.

C. S. Anthony, local agent for the Avery tractor and Glide automobile, is moving into the larger building at No. 164 North Los Angeles street, across the street from the A. F. George Company and in the heart of "tractor row." Mr. Anthony has more display space in his new quarters and is better equipped to take care of his growing business.

EXPERT TO SPEAK.

One of the leading poultry authorities of the world, Edward Brown of England, will speak in the auditorium of the Exposition building in Exposition Park at 2 p.m., Friday, May 24. THE popularity of the Lauson 21-Jewel Kerosene Tractor is due to its unusual performance in the field. Whether plowing, thrashing or doing general farm work its heavy duty, four-cylinder, valve-in-head engine produces a steady flow of economical power with ample reserve to meet unusual conditions.

When on the job our 24 roller and ball bearings and enclosed cut gears, running in oil, insure against excessive wear and reduce friction to the minimum and is absolutely dust proof.

The Lauson Tractor is of medium weight, which, being evenly distributed, warrants perfect control. This makes possible operation on wet or plowed ground without packing of soil.

A demonstration will show you the ability of this Tractor to replace farm labor and increase your acreage capacity. It is five years ahead of other Tractors.

The three wool types.

The handling of the hundreds of small clips in the eastern States is said to be one of the greatest problems confronting the administration; to dispose of the large clips in the range States, which are naturally concentrated at a few central points is a comparatively easy matter, according to officials.

Sheep men, generally, are hoping that the government action will not result in causing a serious delay in the marketing of their wool. Having had heavy expenses during the past year, many of the wool growers are in need of the wool money to pay their bills and summer expenses.

"Flock on Every Farm"

tenance. She made her start fifteen years ago without any capital, raising a few pet lambs from which she secured her foundation stock. Her present holdings have been built up from this modest beginning without the addition of any capital other than what she could borrow on the strength of her property and business ability. Many women on eastern farms have become enthusiastic wool growers. There is many a farm boy also who has built up a neat fund of money and self-respect through the ownership of a few ewes.

Southern California conditions, of course, differ from those in Idaho, and it is not likely that the keeping of a small flock of sheep here will develop into an extensive range business. In fact, it is recommended that the novice make a small beginning, and then, after learning something about the business, refrain from expanding beyond the possibilities of his farm. However, the fact that farm women and boys have made a success with sheep elsewhere lends credence to the idea of looking to them as a means of increasing California's sheep population, now reduced, according to late statistics, to 2,250,000.

Inasmuch as the care of sheep, on a fenced farm, is largely a matter of protection, close observation and feeding (except at dipping, shearing and marking time,) a co-operative arrangement between the farmer and his family may result in finding a place for a small flock on a farm that might otherwise have none. By such an arrangement the busy rancher is relieved of the tedious part of the flock's care and the wife or boy of the heavy part. In the spring, when the farmer is pushing his field work, the ewes require the greatest attention (just prior to and during lambing,) and they can readily be handled during this period by anyone who is willing to give them close and painstaking attention.

MUCH TO LEARN.

Many novices in sheep raising, through a misconception of the nature and requirements of the sheep, have been disappointed in the results of their investment and labor. Men who have bred and fed sheep all their lives say that they never cease to learn something about the animals. Sheep require care, knowledge of their habits, clean water, protection from dampness, sufficient and palatable feed, and protection from dogs and wild animals. They are subject to a number of diseases and are the most difficult of domestic animals to treat, seldom recovering from severe sickness.

It is easy to figure enormous profits on paper, showing that each ewe, costing so much, will yield so much wool, worth such-and-such a price, and a lamb or two that will bring $10 or $15 on the market. But entering into the sheep business are so many factors usually overlooked by the theorists, that the publishing of such enthusiastic claims, through causing disappointment in results, has done much to discourage the keeping of farm flocks.

Southern California has many advantages in the way of climate and feeds which are not enjoyed by corn-belt and eastern States, and it is reasonable to expect that the beginner will realize some profit from the start. However, he must make an effort to learn something about sheep before attempting to raise them and then go about the business seriously.

No doubt many lovers of good stock, who have not had much to do with sheep, will learn to like them through experimenting and eventually develop into enthusiastic breeders. Although it is considered inadvisable for an inexperienced farmer to make the comparatively heavy investment required to get into the registered sheep breeding game, the profit and satisfaction in owning the best are very alluring, and if the present 'sheep-on-every-farm' movement results, finally, in the establishment of a few more pure-bred flocks in Southern California, the State will unquestionably be the better for it. Californians have been, for several years, heavy buyers of pure-breds in the East, and it is to be regretted that more of them have not found their way south of Tehachepi.

J. C. K.

WITH THE BREEDERS.

The Southern California Duroc-Jersey Breeders' Association held a meeting at the Janss Investment Company's office Wednesday, May 8, for the purpose of raising $250 special premium money for the Duroc-Jersey breed entries at the coming California Liberty Show. This association was formed last October and is doing great work for the Duroc-Jerseys in California. Mr. White of San Bernardino is president and Mr. Walker of Devore is secretary.

R. M. Allen of Bonita has started a splendid herd of Duroc-Jerseys. He says he has spared neither time nor money to get the best animals to be obtained.

Roy Dawson of Gardena is fitting an excellent Hampshire boar, as well as some very fine pigs, which he expects to show at the various fairs this fall.

Dr. Creamer of Owensmouth is fitting some excellent prospects for the fairs. His herd is now headed by the acquired Cherry Volunteer Second, brought from Ohio.

Messrs. Brant & Elliott of Owens are having Prof. Thompson, late of Cal., but now with the Kansas Experiment Station, purchase for them some Duroc-Jersey prospects in the East, they expect to show this fall.

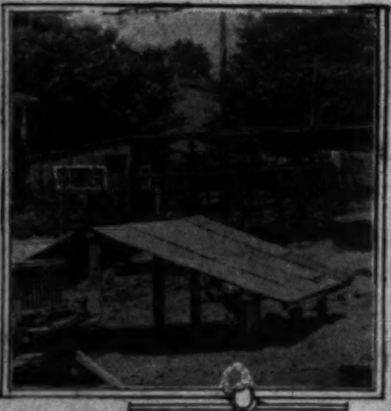
As occasion demands, this can be shifted to newly-spaded ground. For backlotters this serves the purpose very well.

Egg Production Not All.

Some time ago reference was made in these columns to the possible relation of the size of a bird to fecundity. It was observed in the series of egg-laying contests in Australia a few years ago that prolificness in a few generations seemed to reduce the size of the fowls. So pronounced was this that a standard size had to be introduced in order to check this reduction in weight. How long this would have continued does not matter, though we might have had a race of bantam Leghorn egg-layers, which, persistently bred, would eventually have "run out." All of which goes to show that other factors must be considered as well as the laying habit. It is our judgment that standard weights in breeds should be maintained, and that if this is done, the progeny of even good layers will maintain size. Many of our White Leghorn hens and pullets with good productiveness impress us as being rather small. There can be no ultimate profit in prolificness if weight, stamina and vigor are sacrificed. Give us the bird that has sufficient reserve power to go on the mat and hold its own from generation to generation without any reduction as to size, vigor and breeding qualities, even though the progeny will not register up in the 225-egg class in the laying contest.



Shade for fowls.

Handy and easily made contrivance for the poultry yard.

Potatoes for Poultry.

A correspondent writes for information touching the availability of potatoes as a poultry food. This tuber is fed some to poultry, but never to any great extent. In a raw state the potato is about 75 per cent. water, 2 per cent. of protein with a trace of fat, and 20 per cent. carbohydrates. The best way to utilize them for chicken feed is to cook with their skins, first washing carefully to remove all dirt. When boiled, pour off most of the water, when they may be mashed with bran or shorts, using as much as the moisture will take up, leaving the mass in a crumbly condition. The proportion of potatoes should be about 15 to 20 per cent. Being rather carbonaceous, they should be fed sparingly, but afford a good change of diet. Preferably they should be given during cold weather. It is hardly advisable to feed potatoes while corn is a liberal portion of the ration.

Contented Hens Layers.

But few people realize the importance of kindness with hens. Carelessness and rough handling are decidedly inimical to healthy egg production. To be sure, hens can be and are at times, very aggravating, but that in no way alters the facts. A threatening movement, loud talking, a moving of the arms, will often put every hen in the pen under a nervous fright, which at once stops egg laying. The presence of visitors, a strange dog, or any unfamiliar object is quite as objectionable. Often the owner appears in unfamiliar clothes, which may cause nervous tension. Changing quarters for fowl has pretty much the same effect. What birds require is a quiet and contented environment, where they can follow their natural bent without radical interruptions. More than one back yard flock is producing poor results from no other reason than disturbances and "loud" treatment. Only contented hens are the laying hens.

The use of self-feeders for all classes of animals is doing much to reduce labor costs. Hay racks and grain feeders, which may be filled once a week or once a month, mean a big saving in hauling and in man power.

The proverb, "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched," if followed universally, would put some people out of business.

Fowls differ in physical characteristics and temperament. A pen of birds may be fed on the same ration, but some will grow fat while others will barely hold their own. A wise owner will detect these differences and change conditions accordingly.

Hens with pale legs and beak are usually those that have been laying heavily.

PLANNING OF THE HUTCHES BIG ITEM IN RAISING OF RABBITS.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

IN RABBIT keeping, as in housekeeping, attention to small conveniences is of great value in assuring speed and thoroughness in the day's work. Well-planned hutches and yards, with handy feeding and cleaning arrangements, make possible the handling of a large number of rabbits in a short time devoted morning and evening to their care.

Where it is possible to have the floor of the entire rabbitry built of cement, the morning cleaning is made easier, though a hard earth floor serves very well. The idea of inclosing the whole plant with cat-proof fencing, overhead as well as on the sides, is practiced by a number of growers. In some cases wire netting is used for this purpose, which has the advantage of allowing plenty of sunshine. During the summer months quick growing vines or palm leaves fastened to the wire and laid on top furnish the desired shade. Lath has been employed by one local rabbitry in the same manner with very satisfactory results.

The arrangement of hutches in tiers, one above another, has many advantages. Both space and effort are conserved in this way. The slant roof of the lower hutch serves to shed the droppings from the open floor above, which is built of lath in many cases. The morning cleaning is thus simplified.

Care should be taken that the spaces between the laths or wooden strips used for the floor are not too wide. An added convenience in the building of these floors is to make them in interchangeable sections, two to each hutch. They can then be taken out and scalded and sunned at times, and can be reversed if they become worn or chewed in certain spots.

THE FEEDING RACKS.

Feeding racks built from wire netting are usually placed between two adjoining hutches when this plan of construction is followed. Forming a wedge-shaped trough with the end to the front open, alfalfa hay may be easily and quickly placed within reach of two hutches at a time by the attendant. A narrow board (which may be so arranged as to slip in or out from under the base of this rack in order to remove it for cleansing purposes) is often so placed in order to save the fine leaves which sift through and would otherwise be lost.

One rabbitry has combined this "conservation board" with a grain feeding trough by slightly tipping it and finishing the edge with a lath to prevent wasting of the grain. Probably a more convenient grain feeder, however, has been perfected by another local grower. It consists of a small, tin-covered contrivance fastened upright near the hay rack, in the front wall of the hutch. It swings on a pivot so that it can be instantly filled from outside, slipping back easily into place. Besides the convenience and simplicity of the arrangement, it is an economical feeder, practically eliminating waste.

An outside nest compartment opening on the hutch with a small hole, giving the doe the feeling of privacy which she craves by leaving the nest dark and detached, is another good feature which may be used on the end hutches of such tiers. These nests open on the outside by means of a hinged roof just as do nests in many poultry yards, and can be easily cleansed and cared for. Many other such ideas for convenience in caring for stock are being worked out by local growers, and add very material inducements for the beginner who has ambitions to make his rabbitry a paying side line. When he visits well-kept, systematized rabbit yards he realizes that they can be kept attractive as well as remunerative, with a reasonable investment of time and money.

KEEP THE GARDEN WELL CULTIVATED.

Garden crops will not give good results unless the soil is kept well cultivated. Cultivation is not intended primarily to kill weeds, although this is important, but to loosen the surface and let air into the soil so as to provide a more congenial environment for the roots of the plants.

Plants in soil which is too wet turn yellow and if not relieved by proper cultivation and drainage, languish and die. Too much water in the soil dilutes the soil solution, impedes the formation of nitrate, destroys desirable soil organisms and permits the development of undesirable ones.

Soil which has been too wet, if allowed to dry and bake, offers an environment as uncongenial for plants as when too wet. Either extreme therefore should be guarded against.

BREEDERS ORGANIZE.

H. A. Sanderson, secretary of the Southern California Commercial Giants Association, which meets on the evening of the third Monday of each month in The Times Building, recently made a trip to San Diego for the purpose of organizing the rabbit breeders there. With the authority of C. S. Gibson, secretary of the National Breeders' and Fanciers' Association, Mr. Sanderson issued to the San Diego growers a charter from that organization. At the meeting, which was held in the Chamber of Commerce Building under the leadership of James H. App and W. E. Mellinger, a board of directors was elected, which, in turn will select from its number a president and secretary. Mr. Sanderson made the speech of the evening, talking on co-operation and the value of associations for the individual breeders.

Tractors Are Backed by Two Generations of Tractor Builders

The BEST organization has been building tractors for two generations. First, the great Daniel Best round-wheel steamer; second, the round-wheel Best gas tractor; third, the tracklaying principle was adopted as the logical type for farm work. Hence the "Best" Tracklayer. That this was a wise move is demonstrated by the thousands of Best Tracklayers successfully engaged in farming and hauling throughout the world.

WILL SUPPLANT EIGHTY HORSES

Best Tracklayer Tractors are built in two models, the "40" and "75." They do the work of 20 and 40 horses respectively. It costs considerably less to purchase either one of these models than their equivalent in horse flesh. Best Tractors will work day and night and supplant 40 and 80 horses at a minimum expense for labor, fuel and upkeep.

MEN ARE SCARCE

Consider the saving in men, the saving in expense of upkeep, the saving on the original investment as compared with the horse, and last but not least do not forget the expense of housing and feeding these men and the inconvenience and drudgery for the woman of the house.

The Value of the Dwarf Tree on the Small Place.

Toy Orchards Pay.

BY M. V. HARTRANFT.

THE standard sized fruit tree is entitled to no place in the average home garden in my opinion. The garden trees of England, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium and Italy have been of the dwarf species for ages. In Corbett's "English Garden," published in 1829, we find him arguing thus:

"I do hope if any gentleman makes a garden he will never suffer it to be disfigured by the folly of a standard tree, which the more vigorous its growth the more mischievous its growth to the garden."

The century-old custom of espalier pruning, and the training to wall-climbing of fruit trees have not gained ground rapidly in America, where space has not been limited. With the rapid advance in Southern California of intensive acre-farming and gardening, these European methods of pruning and wall-training of fruit trees and the production of dwarf trees must become more generally understood. Horticultural writers in The Times have in years past urged nurserymen to add dwarf trees to their stocks, but until the public begins to demand them the nurserymen are hardly likely to carry on any campaign of education.

The fruit produced upon the dwarf trees is of the largest size and finest quality. Illustrated on this page are dwarf peach trees on a ranch near this city, which, though barely waist high, yield annually about thirty pounds of fine fruit. Considering size and quality no one would that it was grown upon dwarf trees.

FIT INTO THE GARDEN.

The size of the standard fruit tree in the home garden is out of all proportion to that of the vegetable plots adjoining; and frequently, by its shade, such a tree will prevent production all around it. In the same space occupied by a standard sized fruit tree, one may have as high as fifteen to thirty dwarf trees of as many varieties, each producing enough to supply family demands. Instead of one standard peach tree, producing a wasteful superabundance for a few days, one may easily have a border row of fifteen to twenty dwarf peach trees, of that many varieties, beginning with the early and ending with the late varieties, making one constant succession of peaches throughout the summer and autumn; red ones, white and yellow ones, freestone and cling.

Bearing dwarf peaches in a border row.

The pears, plums, apples and even citrus fruits are all developed in the dwarf species. The cherry tree, which does well in our foothill districts around Los Angeles, except for the depredation of the birds, may be grown upon dwarf stock and thereby easily covered and protected.

Dwarf trees do not necessarily have to be trained, and no more skill is required in growing them after you have obtained them from the nurseryman than in growing an ordinary standard tree. The trees are dwarfed by the art of the nurseryman in budding onto a dwarf root. After you plant them, you may study and accomplish all sorts of fancy pruning and training, or you may let them grow unshaped like an ordinary tree.

For the espalier form of pruning chicken wire fencing is the best in this climate, where the hot sun would do damage through reflection from a wall. The dwarf tree lends itself to home garden culture beautifully in every way. It is of easy access for cleaning from scale by home methods.

There are many notable gardens in Los Angeles where the dwarf trees have been introduced. Several eastern nurserymen handle dwarf trees and most varieties are allowed to be shipped into California, the exceptions being peaches, apricots, nectarines and citrus. The plums and pears, apples and cherries may all be imported from eastern nurseries by express, providing the stock is free from scale. The eastern nursery stock is generally ready for digging and shipping in April and may be shipped here and planted as long as it is in a dormant condition. The advance of our season has no bearing on the question; it all rests upon the condition of the stock.

For the maker of the home garden in Southern California the dwarf trees are a boon. These diminutive trees bear much earlier than the standard sized trees and this affords gardeners an opportunity to experiment in a multitude of varieties. The dwarfs work perfectly into the scheme of ornamental gardening.

The dwarf peach trees shown in the illustration were grown in a local nursery as an experiment and since coming into bearing have completely justified the expectations of the planter. Our nurserymen, I believe, would do well to go in for the dwarf stock for the lot, and our gardeners will want many of these little trees when they realize how practical in every way they are.

THE GREAT WAR. The stage appears fully set for resumption of Ludendorff's tradegy in Flanders and the third act is imminent. Allied commanders have made every preparation and appear extremely confident notwithstanding that it is known the Germans have nearly 2,000,000 men ready to strike. Blows are expected near Ypres and at Amiens. Both places are well defended and Ludendorff will have to sacrifice thousands of men to take either.

The influx of American troops is steadily increasing and our troops now hold the third rank in mileage of front with the prospect of taking an important part in stopping any German drive that may develop. Our National Army men are training back of the British front where they can be used if the need comes.

The Germans have been trying raids in many sectors. One launched last night against the Americans resulted in hand to hand fighting for a few minutes when the Germans were driven off with heavy losses without the Americans losing a man.

Ludendorff's preparations have been extensive. It is estimated he has enough men and guns to launch his attack over a fifty-mile front. He is expected to start two major actions; first, toward Ypres with the hope of reaching the Ypres plain the first day, and the other toward Amiens. Minor engagements are expected all along the line.

MUTINY AMONG HUN REGIMENTS.

Several Officers are Reported Slain at Wesenberg in Esthonia.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

MOSCOW, May 15.—Mutiny is reported among German regiments at Wesenberg, Esthonia.

Several officers have been killed, it is said.

The German high command immediately dispatched trustworthy troops to Wesenburg and arrested about 200 of the mutineers. Ten of them were condemned to death.

Another mutiny occurred in a German regiment at Dvinsk, which was supported by prisoners who had returned from the interior of Russia.

ON WEST FRONT

SUMMARY OF SITUATION.

Nearly three weeks have passed since the German offensive, begun on March 21, died down at its final active point in futile assaults on the Flanders front, says the Associated Press. Every indication, however, points to the probability that the coming week will witness its renewal.

The Allied staffs, so far as their opinion can be learned, appear convinced that the enemy has about completed his reorganization and readjustment of forces and that he is only awaiting weather suitable to his purposes to strike his new blow.

Fair weather is reported from the battle front, but apparently this is not to the Germans' liking. It is recalled that he was materially aided in his drive from St. Quentin in March by the foggy, misty conditions prevailing, during which enemy masses could be moved to the point selected for the heaviest stroke without coming under Allied aerial observation. German public opinion is being prepared by Chancellor Von Hertling and others for the imminence of renewed heavy fighting.

On the Allied side, confidence is expressed in the outcome, particularly with the Germans crippled in reserve power through their losses in the earlier attack, while the Allies have received notable reinforcements from the United States, which day by day are increasing the number of its men on the Franco-Belgian front. The total mileage of the front held by the American troops, indeed, is revealed to be the third greatest, the French standing first, the British second and the Americans exceeding the Belgian total.

While the rival forces are thus poised for the clash in the west, important developments appear to be impending in the Far East. German aggression in Russia has reached a point where the Entente press is clamoring for counter-measures, and some action of this nature is apparently about to be taken, at least so far as the safety of the peace of the Far East and probably of Siberian integrity are concerned.

The action, it is understood, is to be confined for the present to China and Japan, which, with Entente assent, are to co-operate in protecting Manchuria, with the possibility that the operations may be extended into Siberia as a more effective defensive measure.

On the water the only incident of note reported is the sinking of a British destroyer by a torpedo from a German submarine, two of the crew of the British vessel being killed.

MOSCOW (Sunday) May 12.—The advance upon Siberia of Gen. Semenoff, the Cossack anti-Bolshevik leader, is taking tangible form. His force numbers 3000 men, a third of whom are Russians and the rest, according to Bolshevik reports, are Japanese and Chinese.

PROTECTIVE MEASURES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Information reached the State Department today of the conclusion of an agreement between Japan and China for the protection of their common interests in the Far East against German aggression. Although giving few details, the reports to the department were said to make it clear that the agreement was only for the period of the war and was solely for protective purposes.

A joint defensive to counteract German aggression in Siberia is known to be contemplated, but information was lacking as to whether this would involve a movement in force into Siberia by Japanese and Chinese troops. As to the necessity for such action, the State Department is not informed, but it is assumed that because of their proximity to Siberia, Japan and China, with a much keener interest in that country than any other powers, doubtless were in better position to know the extent of German influence there and the necessity of curbing it by military force.

Regarding the agreement as of a purely defensive nature, the State Department does not believe it di-

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 18.—The Germans attempted a vigorous silent raid on one of the American combat troops within a strong point in a Luneville sector this morning, but were badly beaten.

The raid was a complete failure and cost the enemy considerable losses. None of the Americans are missing.

The fight was carried on with hand grenades, rifles and revolvers, and it was virtually hand-to-hand.

The Germans beat a hasty retreat after ten minutes, carrying virtually all their dead and wounded with them. One dead German, however, was left behind.

The scene of the encounter was about a mile and a half southwest of Bremenil.

LONDON, May 18. — Signatures are being invited in Ireland to a proposal that the Irish question be submitted for adjudication to a competent international tribunal, says a dispatch to the Times from Dublin.

Such a tribunal, adds the dispatch, might consist, for example, of the United States and the neutral powers of Europe.

SCHWAB TO VISIT EVERY SHIPYARD IN THE WEST.

Director-General Spurs Workers to New Efforts Wherever He Goes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—Charles M. Schwab, director-general of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, will visit the Pacific Coast within the next three weeks for a thorough inspection of every shipyard in the West. This was determined at a conference of the Shipping Board officials yesterday just before he left for Detroit to enthuse the shipyard workers in the Great Lakes district.

At present the itinerary of the director-general has not been completed, but the tentative plans are that he will go by way of Chicago and Duluth to Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. If for any reason his trip is delayed longer than the middle of June this plan may be reversed, but it is expected that he will return from Los Angeles by the gulf and visit the shipyards there and on the South Atlantic before his return to Washington.

Everywhere he goes he enthuses the men to the greatest possible activity and the work has speeded up with the greatest fervor and spontaneity. His offer of $10,000 to the men of the yard that has the greatest excess tonnage of production above its quota has spurred not only the men, but the owners. W. Averill Harriman, chairman of the Board of Merchants' Shipbuilding Corporation, has told the Bristol men that if they win the director-general's ten thousand they will win ten thousand of his money at the same time. The president of the International Shipbuilding Corporation, Charles A. Stone, has done the same thing with his men at Hog Island. John Carse has offered the same bonus to his men in the big submarine boat corporation at Newark, and each day sees new records going up.

In view of the fact that at the present time the Pacific Coast division leads all the other divisions of the Emergency Fleet Corporation in tonnage constructed, it is interesting to think what may happen if the director-general's money goes west of the Rockies. The Pacific Coast division, which includes Washington, Oregon and California, leads the North Atlantic division by a ratio of seven and three-quarters to five and one-half. Next come the Great Lakes and after them the Gulf States.

In a list of forty-seven shipbuilding plants all over the country the Los Angeles Shipbuilding Corporation stands twenty-seventh and the Long Beach Shipbuilding Corporation, thirty-fifth in the amount of construction turned out estimated in dead weight tonnage.

PICARDY NIGHT SKY FULL OF GERMAN "NERVES."

BY WILBUR FORREST.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN PICARDY, May 18.—If the American sector in Picardy can be an indication of the enemy's nerves along the entire battle line to the eastward, the enemy must act soon or become a nervous wreck. He is doing his best to turn the night into day over the actual lines, and he is occasionally hoisting his new red flares hundreds of feet in the air, while his airplanes drone loudly over the American back areas.

Tonight there is a quarter moon faintly illuminating a sky so full of stars that it would seem impossible to crowd another in. The front line is a semicircle of light as it winds down on one side of Montdidier and goes back on the other.

The back areas are in semi-darkness, like a theater audience watching a stage. Above this imaginary audience at least a dozen enemy planes are sending down the peculiar grinding noise of the German motor. The Allied anti-aircraft guns, getting annoyed at this intrusion, begin to send high explosives into the upper void which detonate with a noise like hitting an empty barrel with a clod of dirt and stabs the sky like bursting stars.

In the meantime the American artillery has ceased to fire, in order not to give away its positions to the lurking enemy birdmen. After a while the droning of the planes and the anti-aircraft fire grow fainter. Then the American gunners again turn loose their cannons on the enemy's rear, and on the villages and roads where his supply trains and men are crawling toward his front lines.

ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN.

The droning in the sky again tells the artillerymen that the nervous Boche is looking and listening again. The artillery ceases and the anti-aircraft guns take up the battle again, until the invisible enemy airplanes drone off through the stars to safer communities.

Occasionally you can hear enemy shells arriving in flocks at different points in our rear. Many of these flocks tonight have plowed up innocent wheat fields, because the nervous Boche obliterates with characteristic German high explosive hate.

Just outside the correspondent's dugout at midnight a French mocking bird is telling the world what he thinks of the war. Near-by flocks of shells only make him sing louder, and he has been mocking everything from droning enemy airplanes to canary birds for the past four hours.

Enemy airplanes bombed a large American hospital in the rear Thursday night. Hovering at low altitudes, every apparent effort was made to hit the main building.

When the bombs came dangerously near, the doctors and nurses removed the patients to trenches previously dug for such emergencies. There was no loss of life and no panic.

LONDON, May 18.—The brilliant operations of the navy against Ostend, following hard upon the glorious exploit of the same service on St. George's Bay, have been received by all the soldiers with feelings of admiration and have served to strengthen the links of mutual affection and esteem which in this war, as in South Africa, have so happily united the two services.

The work of our sea wardens around the coasts of the United Kingdom and in distant seas has unfortunately to be carried out under a veil of secrecy and it is only when dramatic events occur that the veil is lifted for a few hours and the navy is

DEFEAT GERMAN ARMY FINAL PHASE OF WAR.

PROBLEM TAXES RESOURCES OF ALLIES AND AMERICA, SAY EXPERTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—A high official and military authority today made the following statement on the military situation:

The war has entered upon its third phase. The first was the policy of the Allies to hold Germany on the western front while Russian armies should win the war. That policy failed.

The second was the idea of economic and military attrition, which was expected to bring success. That has not been altogether successful. Germany was to be and actually was cut off from practically all outside forces, certain materials became absolutely out of Germany's reach through the naval blockade and the rationing of neutrals.

With the falling down of Russia that policy became less ef-

GUNS ROAR A PRELUDE

Titanic Struggle is Soon to Start.

Huge Hosts Near Grips in Attempt of Ludendorff to Crush Allied Army.

Battle Stage Fully Set with All in Cast Instructed in Their Parts.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, May 18. — The stage is set for the third act of the great drama. All the characters in the mammoth production have rehearsed their parts. The first and second acts had late winter for a background; the third is set with a country bright with orchard blossoms and green hills and trees.

The stage may cover a fifty-mile front. Military men are agreed Ludendorff has sufficient men and guns to launch his attack over a fifty-mile front and it is quite probable that is to be his plan—two main attacks into which every effort will be put to drive wedges into the Allied line and minor attacks at intervals covering the rest of the front.

Nature heals wounds quickly and at this season, even No Man's Land lacks the sinister appearance which it has during the winter months. In many respects Ludendorff is like the master of a gigantic, three-ring, open-air circus. He has already snapped his whip and the aerial performers have begun their daring deeds.

AIR FEATS THRILL.

No circus audience has ever witnessed such thrilling feats, no acrobats have ever risked their lives in such a care-free way as these rival aviators are doing over thousands of square miles of Northern France.

As the young airmen fly over each other's lines, photographing every bit of the country and dropping on billets, ammunition dumps, transport trains, and railway stations, hundreds of thousands of human ants below continue to move back and forth each with his special part to play.

For the third act of the modern battle, titanic preparations are necessary. Thousands of horses and mules have to be fed every day. Hundreds of miles of roads and railways had to be built. Dozens of miles of water pipes had to be laid. Hundreds of miles of telephone wires had to be strung up. Hundreds of thousands of shells and thousands of tons of rations had to be moved forward. New field dressing stations had to be built. Observation posts had to be erected.

On both sides of the line the same feverish activity has gone on for days. Before Ludendorff could ring up the curtain he had to make plans as great as those necessary if Mayor Hylan should decide to move half the population of New York City across the Hudson in forty-eight hours.

The interval between the acts is longer than the acts themselves as the play proceeds toward the final curtain. New York stands applauding for hours as one division marches down Fifth avenue. Ludendorff will handle hundreds of divisions in the next act.

BIG GUNS RUMBLE.

With the air filled with the rival airmen, the orchestra of guns has suddenly become so loud that it seems as if they were trying to silence the thunder of a violent spring storm. Their rumble and

World in Last Conflict Between Liberty and Brutal Ferocity, Wilson's Message to France

Brotherhood of Arms.

PROUD TO FIGHT BESIDE FRANCE, SAYS PRESIDENT.

Americans Glad to Give Proof of Gratitude and Friendship, is Greeting to Ally as Big Offensive Looms.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

PARIS, May 18.—On the eve of the great offensive, says an official note issued here today, President Wilson, anxious to address a message to the French people, has asked one of his personal friends, James Kerney (director of the Franco-American Committee on Public Information,) to convey the following to them:

> The people of the United States are happy to find themselves in the brotherhood of arms with the people of France in a war in which every man who lives right ought to be proud to take part.
> For over 100 years the American people have desired this opportunity which befalls them today of giving the French people proof of their gratitude and friendship. There is added now in their souls deep and ardent admiration for the heroism and self-denial whereof the French people have given proof in this terrible and last conflict between liberty and brutal ferocity.
> American hearts are with the armies amidst the blood-stained battle fields of valiant France. Americans are your brothers in the great, holy common cause.

The beginning by the Germans of a formidable offensive by which they expect to achieve final success now depends only on weather conditions. The commander-in-chief, the French troops and their allies are waiting for the shock with the greatest confidence.

The Petit Parisien says the enemy has massed nearly all his best troops on the attacking front. Between the Belgian coast and the Oise, it states, 140 divisions (about 1,900,000 men) have been distributed, eighty-two on the front line, or for direct support, and the remainder behind the lines, to be used for augmenting the push at the principal point of attack.

This newspaper says the German plan is to threaten Amiens, cut the railroad between that point and Clermont, and break up the Allied forces whatever the cost may be.

Strategic.

UNIFY COMMAND OF AIR FORCES, NOW ALLIES' AIM.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, May 18.—The Echo de Paris says it learns that the question of the unity of tactical and strategical aims of the Allied aviation services was discussed at the recent meeting of the Supreme War Council at Versailles by the technical experts of the several nations represented.

From this it developed, adds the newspaper, that additional raids at present on German cities were not deemed advisable, as other efforts by the air forces were more necessary at this juncture, the view being that all the Allied aviation efforts should be centered upon the firing line and the territory behind the lines.

Heroism.

GIVE CANADIAN CAVALRY HONOR OF SAVING AMIENS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) May 18. (By the Canadian Press, Limited.)—Fighting every inch of ground, taking tremendous toll from the attacking Huns, sometimes with French Allies, acting often as infantrymen as well as horsemen," writes Roland Hill, the official war correspondent for the Canadian government, "the Canadian cavalry has since the beginning of the great German offensive on the western front covered itself with such glory as will live forever in British military history.

"Their capture of the big wood north of Moreuil and the charge of a squadron into a battery of German machine guns is, according to their comrades in the cavalry corps in a class with Balaclava. The whole operation is regarded as the most famous cavalry action of the war.

"Canada must be prepared to find many of her sons gone, but the price paid was not excessive. In addition to turning the tide of battle at various places in the forward areas they practically saved Amiens.

"Gen. Sir Henry Rawlinson, visiting the Canadian cavalry on April 30, addressed each unit in turn and told them that the two woods they had recaptured from the enemy, the Bois de Moreuil and Rifle wood, were the dominating features, the possession of which might at that time have been fatal to the defense of Amiens."

Military Factor.

AMERICANS RANK THIRD IN BATTLE-LINE MILEAGE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The American Expeditionary Force has become such a military factor on the western battle front, members of the Senate Military Committee were advised today at their weekly conference with Secretary Baker and the War Council, that they now rank third in the mileage held.

The French hold the most mileage, the British rank second and the Americans third, exceeding the mileage held by the Belgians.

The front-line forces of Gen. Pershing, the Senators were told, are divided among four sectors, all on what is known as the French front, but other American troops are at the front as well as behind the lines in training with both British and French forces.

The exact front mileage in charge of the American forces was disclosed to the committee, but was not made public for military reasons. The Senators, however, expressed great gratification at the extent of American front-line activity. One of the four American sectors, near Montdidier, was said to be of much activity and importance in the Allied plans.

The officers described in detail the aircraft situation at the American fronts. Reports on aircraft production in this country were said by Senators later still to be disappointing, without much improvement in the general situation.

Improvement in ordnance and other production was reported by the War Council.

American troops are being sent abroad with great rapidity. The transportation outlook was said to be promising although problems of supplying the American forces abroad are said to be increasing because of the rapidly mounting size of the American expeditions.

REGISTRATION OF YOUTHS IS SET FOR JUNE FIFTH.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—June 5 has been fixed as the date for registration of youths who have attained twenty-one years since the first army draft registration, June 5, last year. The resolution authorizing the new registration is awaiting the President's signature, but the Provost-Marshal-General's office virtually has completed preparations for carrying it into effect.

It is estimated that about 800,000 men available for military service will be found among the new registrants this year. During the year beginning June 5, it is planned to have quarterly registrations.

CALIFORNIA'S PART.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—Between 21,000 and 22,000 California youths who have attained their majority since June 5, 1917, will be required to register for the draft, Adjt.-Gen. J. J. Borree said today. The registration will be conducted by local exemption boards. Instructions were being sent today to the various boards.

In a letter sent to members of all local and district boards today, Gen. Borree called attention to the fact that California registered 300,000 men last year without cost to the Federal government and urged that the performance be duplicated.

The boards were urged to call for men and women volunteers to serve as registrars. Local boards having jurisdiction over large areas were instructed to establish as many registration booths in the district as was deemed necessary to insure a minimum of disturbance of man power by the registration.

Each board was instructed to survey its district, select registrars, assign them to registration booths and report to the Adjutant-General's office not later than May 25.

Registration cards and other necessary supplies were being shipped today and should reach the various boards by Tuesday, Gen. Borree said.

WAR OFFICE STATEMENTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, May 18.—Heavy artillery fighting last night between Givenchy and Robecq, on the southern side of the Flanders-salient, is reported by the War Office.

"Successful raids in which we took a number of prisoners and two machine guns were carried out this morning in daylight in the Morlancourt sector and south of Hulluch. The statement follows:

"There were violent bombardments at various points on the front north and south of the Avre.

"German raids near Massiges (Champagne) and north of Four de Paris (Argonne) were without results.

"Everywhere else the night was calm."

PARIS, May 18.—The official statement issued by the War Office tonight reads:

"Eastern theater, May 17.—There was feeble artillery activity east of the Vardar. On the rest of the front there were a number of patrol engagements in which the enemy was repulsed near Dobropolje and northeast of Monastir."

AMERICAN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Another official American communique from Gen. Pershing was made public today by the War Department.

Gen. Pershing transmitted details of the bringing down of two German planes by Capt. Peterson of the American army while aviators were waiting for a French general coming to confer decorations.

The text of the communique follows:

"Headquarters American Expeditionary Forces, May 16, 1918:

"Section A. In Lorraine patrolling was active and there was again increase of artillery fire. Otherwise, the day was quiet at points occupied by our troops.

"Section B. Particulars concerning bringing down hostile airplanes at about noon, May 15, previously reported when aviators were waiting for a French general who was coming to confer decorations, are as follows:

"While waiting, Capt. Peterson made an ascent and encountered two German planes and shot down both within one minute, firing sixty shots at first and fifteen at second. First plane burst into flames before hitting ground and wings of second were seen to crumple up when nearing earth. No definite information concerning third hostile plane reported brought down.

"It is now determined that our airplane reported yesterday as having accidentally fallen within our lines north of Toul was shot down, probably by hostile anti-aircraft guns."

WASHINGTON, May 18.—An official American communique from Gen. Pershing made public tonight by the War Department says yesterday's fighting on the American front was limited to reconnaissances and intermittently active artillery firing. Increased aerial activity, was reported north of Toul and Lorraine.

ITALIAN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, May 17.—The War Office communication issued today says:

"Effective artillery fighting has occurred along the portions of the front where the enemy was more active at Tonale, in the Val Lagarina, at Val Arsa, in the Asiago basin and along the Piave. The Italians dispersed hostile detachments, while Italian and British patrols had brisk encounters with enemy patrols on the Asiago plateau and other districts."

ROME, May 18.—A third attempt by the Austrians to recapture Monte Corno has failed, according to the official communication from general headquarters today.

"Two columns with machine guns and flame projectors, strongly supported by artillery," says the statement, "attacked Monte Corno, but they were compelled to retire in disorder. We captured two flame projectors and firmly held our positions."

The statement reads:

"On the western battle front weak artillery activity yesterday increased considerably before darkness set in. A strong harassing fire continued during the night. Great reconnoitering activity led to violent hand to hand fighting, especially in the district of Lassigny. On several occasions prisoners were brought in.

Landing of German Troops in Ireland to Accompany Outbreak.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, May 18. — Five hundred Sinn Feiners were arrested at various towns in Ireland today, according to a Dublin dispatch to the Evening News.

Documents of great importance in connection with an Irish conspiracy have fallen into the hands of the government through the arrest by coast guards of a man with certain evidence upon him.

DUBLIN, May 18.—The Irish Times today says the government has not acted a moment too soon, as all the signs pointed to another outbreak of armed violence possibly in connection with the landing of German troops on Irish shores.

BELFAST (Ireland) May 18.—A number of Sinn Feiners were arrested here late last night and removed to the military barracks. Among those arrested here are Joseph McGuinness, Sinn Fein member of Parliament for the southern division of County Longford; J. McGrath, Walter Scoles, John M. Centee, a Belfast Sinn Feiner who was sentenced to death in connection with the events at Dundalk during the rebellion of 1916, and Denes McCullough, another Sinn Feiner.

LEADERS ARRESTED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, May 18.—Prof. Edward de Valera, president of the Sinn Fein; Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein; Countess Markievicz, Dr. Dillon and William Cosgrove, Sinn Fein M. P. for Kilkenny, have been arrested, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Dublin.

Additional arrests in Ireland reported in a Times dispatch from Dublin include Dr. Hayes and Darrell Figgis.

Discovery of a German plot involving certain persons in Ireland was announced last night in Dublin by the issuance of a proclamation signed by Edward Shortt, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in the name of the Lord Lieutenant, Viscount French.

PLOT WITH HUNS.

The proclamation asserts that British subjects resident in Ireland have entered into treasonable communication with the German enemy, and calls for drastic measures to put down the German plot.

Voluntary recruiting is urged in order that compulsion may be avoided and that the Irish may assist in putting down the conspiracy.

Communication with Dublin is slow, but a dispatch to the Times says that a large number of persons already have been arrested in Dublin and other parts of Ireland.

The number of Irish in co-operation with the enemy is said to be very small. There have been various hints recently of German activity in the Sinn Fein ranks and there has been no full explanation of recent arrests, including that of a man who landed on the Irish coast from a German submarine in a collapsible boat.

POLICY CHANGED.

The reference to voluntary enlistment in the proclamation appears to confirm predictions that the government has changed its policy concerning conscription in Ireland owing to Nationalist and Sinn Fein opposition.

A report became current in Ireland Friday that the government contemplated launching a recruiting scheme on the lines of that formerly conducted by the Earl of Derby in England. It gained much prominence in Irish newspapers and was discussed widely. However, a Dublin dispatch to the Daily News says the report met only with ridicule. The dispatch adds:

"The atmosphere is completely unsuitable and it is doubtful if a single public man with real influence could be found to back the scheme."

Another report is to the effect that a number of prominent Irishmen have submitted to Premier Lloyd George a request to appoint Gen Sir Bryan Mahon, who has just relinquished the military command in Ireland, director of recruiting in Ireland. Gen. Mahon is popular with large classes of Irishmen with whom he is regarded as having very active sympathies, but whether the appointment would have practical results can only be speculated upon. According to one view the general could only succeed if the government gave Ireland a home rule Parliament.

"There have been no disturbances anywhere in the country, as far as is known here," says a Dublin dispatch to the Evening News. "Indeed, the most striking feature of the government's coup was the swiftness and thoroughness. All arrangements were carried through like clockwork, dumfounding the Sinn Feiners."

In no case, says the dispatch, was resistance offered to the police and soldiers who made the arrests. The Dublin officers of the Sinn Fein and the offices of the National Aid Fund were taken over by the military.

All the Sinn Fein members of Parliament have been arrested.

Dublin remains quiet, the correspondent adds, but there is a feeling of suppressed excitement.

OTHERS ARRESTED.

A later dispatch from Dublin adds to the list of those arrested the names of H. Mellow and half a dozen others who have not been identified here.

Prof. De Valera is president of the Sinn Fein. Mr. Griffith is vice-president, Mr. Cosgrave one of the treasurers, Mr. Figgis one of the secretaries and Dr. Dillon and the Countess Markievicz are members of the Executive Committee of the Sinn Fein organization.

Several of them were arrested or interned in connection with the Dublin revolt of two years ago, at Easter time. Oddly enough, today's events occur on the occasion of another festival of the church, Whitsuntide.

The men referred to as Dr. Dillon and Dr. Hayes are Dr. Thomas Dillon and Dr. Richard Hayes.

THE RINGLEADERS.

Prof. De Valera, William Cosgrave and Countess Markievicz all were arrested for the parts they played in the Sinn Fein revolt in Dublin in Easter week of 1916, when the short-lived Irish republic came into being. All were sentenced to death, but this was commuted later to life imprisonment. After several months in prison all were released.

Prof. De Valera was elected member of Parliament for East Clare last July, and in October, Premier Lloyd George announced in the House of Commons that De Valera was plotting to bring about a new Irish rebellion, a few days before De Valera was elected president of the Sinn Fein at Dublin. Since the passage of the Irish Conscription Bill, De Valera has been very active in working against it and has had many conferences with John Dillon.

William Cosgrave was elected member of Parliament for Kilkenny last August. In a speech several days later he said the Irish would fight German domination. On May 1, he was selected to accompany the Lord Mayor of Dublin on his proposed visit to the United States in connection with the anti-conscription campaign in Ireland.

COUNTESS IN 1916 REVOLT.

One of the most prominent figures in the Dublin revolt in 1916 was Countess Georgia Markievicz. She led a part of the Sinn Fein forces and was reported to have personally killed a guard in an effort to capture Dublin castle. She returned to Dublin last July. Last December 3, two boys were arrested while carrying high explosives from Scotland to Ireland. They were reported to be members of a Boy Scout organization headed by Countess Markievicz.

Arthur Griffith has aided the Sinn Fein by his pen and counsels more than by active leadership. He took no part in the fighting of Easter week, and at various times has been in conflict with De Valera, who is of a more fanatical type. De Valera was born in New York City of a Spanish father and an Irish mother.

STATUE STANDS, SAYS GOVERNOR.

Replica of "Signal of Peace" Broken by Sculptor Remains in Salt Lake.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SALT LAKE (Utah) May 18.—The plaster replica of Sculptor Cyrus E. Dallin's famous "Signal of Peace," the original of which is in Lincoln Park, Chicago, will remain in the center of the rotunda of Utah's Capitol despite the fact that Mr. Dallin did not like it, and showed his dislike yesterday by breaking parts of the famous figure in the presence of two State Supreme Court justices. The statue, disfigured by Mr. Dallin, will remain by order of Gov. Bamberger.

Gov. Bamberger today ordered the Capitol janitor to place the figure in its usual place in the rotunda and there it is to remain, with the right leg of the Indian figure reposing upon the pedestal, along with fragments of the smashed fetlock of the figure of the horse.

The Governor is quoted as saying that the statue will remain in the Capitol as long as he occupies the Governor's office.

BIG GUNS ROAR CALL TO ARMS.

roar are audible more than a hundred miles behind the lines.

Says Field Marshal Haig:

"There has been great artillery activity on both sides during the night in the Pacaut Wood sector north of Hinges. The hostile artillery has shown increased activity between Locon and Hinges and from the Nieppe Forest to Meteren."

Says Gen. Petain:

"In the course of the night there has been violent artillery bombardment in the region of Hailles."

Those two paragraphs mean that the orchestra is playing the final blasts just before the curtain goes up.

If correct deductions are drawn there will be simultaneous attacks on two battle fronts, one perhaps more powerful than the other. In other parts of the battlefield there may be diversions which may very possibly develop into major operations overshadowing in interest and importance the main attacks.

Last night's great gunfire was directed at the front covering Bethune. This is the southern hinge of the Armentieres salient. Despite terrific hammering the Givenchy positions have been held intact by the British. It is possible that the Germans will try to drive in a salient here and widen it as they have done several times successfully in this campaign.

Although it is particularly dangerous tactics, the young German officers with their highly-disciplined troops, seem to welcome an opportunity to show their initiative in this style of fighting.

The fact that the enemy's gunfire has been concentrated on the southern half of the battle front does not mean necessarily that he has selected that place for his main attack. But it is highly possible that converging attacks on St. Pol and Doullens might be made from the Bethune front and from the Arras-Albert front. If successful they would pinch off Arras and Vimy Ridge.

The bombardment at Hailles is in the sector nearest to the Paris-Amiens railway and at the closest point which the Germans have come to Amiens.

FIFTY-MILE FRONT.

In the opinion of military experts the enemy will be able to attack with a force a little inferior numerically to that used on March 21. Ludendorff has the men and guns to use over a fifty-mile front if he so desires. The longer he delays the more troops he can use in the west.

This will prove a long, anxious summer of fighting with men the controlling factor in the final result. Time is with the Entente but it is half-neutral, half-Ally. No sparring tactics will bring a decision. The belligerents must come to grips and this they will certainly do very soon.

I think that Ludendorff will try for quick success at Ypres first because of the moral effect of a victory there. He will try to reach the Ypres plain in the first day of his next drive.

BRITISH SUCCESSFUL IN TURK OPERATIONS.

OBJECTS IN PALESTINE AND MESOPOTAMIA LARGELY REALIZED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, May 17.—Recent British operations in Palestine and Mesopotamia are regarded as entirely satisfactory by the British General Staff. The main object of Gen. Allenby's operations in Palestine have been largely realized. His object was not merely to occupy a large territory east of the Jordan, but to draw Turkish troops from the south and so ease the situation for the Arabs.

This has been done to a very marked extent and the Arabs have taken full advantage of the opportunity by raiding the Hedjas Railway at various points until now the entire railway is virtually out of commission. The German troops still in the south have lost their artery of supplies and are living on dates and whatever else they can obtain locally.

In Mesopotamia, Gen. Marshall's operations have been equally successful, although the British columns are competing against nature, as well as against the Turks, whose policy of running away increases the difficulty. The Turks have long been planning a great offensive toward Persia and the Caspian Sea and Gen. Marshall's object is to interfere as much as possible with that plan. He has been successful in diverting a considerable number of Turkish units from the enterprise.

Father of Condemned Murderer Asks for Executive Clemency.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SALT LAKE CITY, May 18.—The fate of Howard H. de Weese, sentenced to be shot next Friday for the murder of his wife, Fanny Fishler de Weese, will be decided next Tuesday morning, it was announced late today at the conclusion of a meeting of the State Board of Pardons, which listened to an appeal of commutation of sentence to life imprisonment.

Dal de Weese, father of the condemned man, wealthy Colorado orchardist and collector of wild animal specimens for the Smithsonian Institution, pleaded with the board for the life of his son. De Weese's attorneys also offered pleas and introduced testimony and affidavits as to the former good character of the condemned man.

Today's appeal by the father was the first step in behalf of the son since he was first charged with the murder.

Explosion Wrecks Pittsburgh Plant.

Wires Down, Aid is Obtained by Courier Sent to Town Four Miles Away.

Cause of Accident and Total of Dead not Known and may Never Be.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH, May 18.—Probably two hundred men were killed today when an explosion of T. N. T. demolished the plant of the Aetna Chemical Company at Oakdale, on the Panhandle Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, sixteen miles from here.

Five hundred workmen were startled at noon by a report not much louder than the crack of a pistol. It came from the soda house, but they knew its deadly import and as one man they rushed for the nearest exit. Before they could gain the open the very air seemed to burst into flame, the earth heaved and rocked, and with a roar that was heard for miles, the long factory buildings were hurled high into the air, carrying with them ponderous equipment and scores of men. A great cloud of dust and smoke settled over the scene and through its deadly fumes torn and mangled forms dropped to the earth, many dead, but others to meet their end in the flaming debris.

DEAD ESTIMATED.

The number of dead had not been determined tonight and it is possible that it may not be known for days, if, indeed, it ever will be known. State and county authorities agreed that it would reach 200.

Many of the injured, some of whom were found half a mile from the remnants of the factory, were brought to Pittsburgh hospitals by special trains and in ambulances, all of them so badly hurt that in only a comparatively few instances were physicians able to hold out any hope for their recovery. The property loss was estimated at $1,500,000.

Immediately after the second explosion the mass of broken beams and twisted timbers broke out in a great blaze, while the highly inflammable chemicals used in the manufacture of T.N.T. and T.N.A. added ample fuel to the flames. Blast after blast followed as the heat reached the tanks, each one scattering the burning embers and endangering property in the entire community. Noxious gases spread over the valley and surrounding hills, making perilous the work of rescue.

COURIER GETS AID.

Telephone and telegraph wires were wrecked by the explosion and the tracks of the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad (the Panhandle Route) were blocked by the falling buildings. An employee hastened to Carnegie, four miles distant, where wreck and relief trains were made up and hurried to Oakdale, while every hospital in Pittsburgh sent ambulances with nurses and doctors. Company guards, at the direction of State constabulary, surrounded the burning ruins, and were later reinforced by deputy sheriffs and deputy coroners.

For a time it seems as though it will be impossible to reach the wounded because of the heat, the constantly widening zone of gases and the danger from explosion. But the nurses and doctors, aided by the officers, made their way as best they could.

One young nurse, Miss Mary Aschelman of New Philadelphia, O., a member of the staff of St. John's Hospital, Pittsburgh, who was among the first to answer the call for help, was perhaps fatally injured. Other rescuers were caught near a little stream into which acid and oil had poured. It exploded as they crossed and a number were thought to have perished.

Sheriff William S. Haddock almost lost his life during one of the late explosions. A heavy piece of steel, blown from the wreckage, passed close to him and the force of the blast threw him to the ground. He was badly bruised, but continued his work.

BLAST STOPS FIRE.

Each succeeding explosion reduced the blazing pile as embers and chemicals were widely scattered. Soon after 6 o'clock an explosion, louder and more powerful than any since noon, swept away the remnants of the fire and practically cleared the blackened space. Many bodies were consumed in the flames, the authorities declared, while parts of others were so tossed about it will be impossible to identify such portions as might eventually be found.

Among the dead, Coroner Samuel C. Jamison found, was Samuel Diehl, district superintendent of the Heidelberg plant of the Aetna Company, while John B. Johnston, superintendent of the Oakdale plant, was among the badly injured.

RED CROSS HEROINES.

At the stations of various communities for fifteen miles on either side of Oakdale were assembled women, Red Cross workers, on their way to Pittsburgh to participate in a mammoth parade.

The thought was inspired that the Red Cross workers were needed at Oakdale more than at Pittsburgh. Abandoning all thoughts of parade the women flocked to the afflicted area by automobile and by trolley, ready for any sacrifice or service.

CHECKERBOARD C ON THE GREAT C

Germany's Ambition is America—The Ca

BY HARRY CARR.

LARGE bodies of German cavalry are being marched to the west front. It is reported that every other kind of military train is ordered sidetracked to make way for these mounted troops.

This fact certainly gives a broad hint of what the Germans are hoping to do in the great battle about to begin.

It should never be forgotten that this is not an ordinary battle with an ordinary objective. It is not a blind, man-killing expedition. It is undertaken for the special and specific purpose of interfering with the reinforcement of the Allied line by American troops.

By sweeping the British entirely out of Picardy and Flanders the Germans hope to make it difficult, or even impossible, for the Americans to find a landing place from which to find their way to the battle line. Coupled with this land offensive we have every reason to anticipate that the Germans will make an energetic attempt to sink the transports carrying American troops across the sea.

In short, this terrific offensive, although directed against the French and English, has for its real objective the heading off of the Americans en route to reinforce the line.

The German preparations are being carried out with a deadly sort of deliberation.

DEADLY DELIBERATION.

The Germans got their lesson at the Marne, where they tried to hurry and so lost the battle.

The moving of a modern army is a super-problem. In the days of Napoleon, and even later, the advancing army lived off the country to a great extent. This is no longer possible. The armies have to be supplied in every particular from the distant bases in the rear.

When an army goes forward it is as though an immense city were suddenly moved with all its freight depots, railroad lines and telephone systems.

Even the Germans, with their forty years of intensive study, did not thoroughly realize this. Consequently at the Marne they ran away from their supplies.

Since then every German offensive campaign has been characterized by a deliberateness.

I saw the Germans in circumstances which help me to visualize their present movements. When they were closing in on the defenses of Warsaw they went forward with the steady, unhurried progress of a military tank. The artillery blasted a way for the infantry. The infantry stepped forward into the breach, then waited grimly for the artillery to move up again, meanwhile giving time for the transportation system to adapt itself to the constantly changing conditions.

In the recent offensive, however, the Germans found themselves in a paradoxical situation. They needed both speed and deliberation at the same time.

They avoided the dangers which their haste at the Marne brought them; but they suffered from not being able to pursue the shattered British battalions with enough fury. After having broken the line at St. Quentin, the military exigencies of the situation demanded that they keep on the tail of the British army without allowing them a minute in which to pause and reform their lines. This they were not able to do.

In another battle they intend to be better able to follow up their advantages. Hence the cavalry.

Cavalry has two distinct functions in war. It begins and ends battles. It feels out the enemy and gives the commander information as to the foe's position and strength. Cavalry fights are mainly for the purpose of driving off the enemy cavalry, thus making it more difficult for the enemy to obtain correct military information.

The other function of cavalry is to pursue and break up a retreating foe.

First comes the artillery, silencing the enemy batteries and blasting a way for the infantry to advance. Then comes the infantry bearing the main burden of the fighting. When the infantry has broken through the enemy's defenses, the cavalry sweeps in and destroys the enemy in his flight.

If Germany is hurrying such enormous bodies of cavalry in from the Rumanian front that the military railroads are choked with the troop trains, as reported, which of these errands has the Kaiser's cavalry in mind?

It may be either or both.

There is no question that the fighting on the west front has reverted, for the time being at least, into a warfare of movement. Many of the conditions of open warfare have been brought back.

It is quite conceivable that the is quite conceivable that the Germans are intending once again to use cavalry for the purpose of reconnoitering the positions of the Allies.

The Germans have lost very heavily in aircraft since the beginning of the offensive. There is a distinct possibility that the Kaiser may be embarrassed by a shortage of air scouts.

Even in the face of the marvelous development of air work, both English and German experts have frequently expressed the opinion that when the fighting comes back to the open, cavalry will be a necessary adjunct to supplement the air scouts.

Trench warfare was fortress warfare. In this work the aircraft was entirely satisfactory. In detecting the movement of mobile troops, it is doubtful if airplanes will be so valuable. I have heard it stated that an entire division of mobile troops has been successfully concealed from the eyes of airmen.

The opinion of many military experts is that the scouting in open warfare will be done by a close cooperation of airships and horsemen. The aircraft will report the fact that troops are moving within the enemy lines, but it will be up to the horsemen to ascertain, as of old, just what the movement means and what its purpose may be.

This is a phase of the fighting that will be welcomed by the Britishers, whose cavalry has been their pride and glory.

TO TEST RIVAL THEORIES.

If it were possible to disengage our feelings from the coming fray, a great clash of cavalry on the plains of Picardy, where so many mounted battles took place when knighthood was in flower, would be of absorbing interest. Two great theories of cavalry fighting will be put to the final test.

As a general thing, army experts in all nations follow pretty much the same views and the same line of thought. When it comes to cavalry, however, the theories diverge with violence.

German and British cavalrymen have entirely different ideas about fighting.

The British follow the American idea to a great extent. During the Civil War, Gen. Sheridan, being an infantryman by training and a great cavalry leader by persuasion, changed the whole theory of cavalry fighting. He armed his men with carbines; taught them to shoot; and to dismount from their horses and fight on foot when the fracas began.

His work was so remarkably successful that the English were won over to it. Consequently, the training of a British cavalryman is very much that of an American cavalryman.

The Germans cling to the arme blanche. That is to say, they prefer to ride down the enemy with lances rather than to shoot at them at long range with firearms.

Of course the German cavalry is also armed with carbines; but they place their greatest reliance in the lance.

Pursuing these rival theories, it naturally follows that the Germans ride very close together and at a furious pace—all bunched up, the men in front being carried on a whirlwind of momentum by the pressure of the men behind.

The Britisher charges usually at a trot, relying upon the individual prowess of the men rather than upon the weight of the whole.

In brief, the German cavalry is intended to be a thunderbolt hurled in one compact mass of steel. The British charge is a collection of sturdy fighters getting there in a hurry.

The British cavalrymen are good shots with carbine or revolver. The German cavalrymen are notoriously bad marksmen.

I once had a heated discussion with an old German cavalry colonel who said. "Either cavalrymen are cavalrymen, or they are not cavalrymen. If they are going to jump off and fight like infantrymen with guns, then all you want of horses is to get them there quick. In that case, why don't you use auto trucks and get them there still quicker and not pretend they are cavalry?"

TO DO OR DIE.

I have talked about this to many American cavalry officers. Some of them inclined to his theory; some to the other.

My impression of the purpose of the big cavalry movement, however, is that it hasn't much to do with scouting.

I think that the Germans are staking a great deal on the outcome of this battle. If they can again break up the Allied formations, they intend to pursue the retreat with horsemen and thus endeavor to rush the German front through to Paris or to the channel ports or wherever their immediate objective may be. With the Uhlans they hope to literally ride the Allies off the war map.

The rumored activity of the German sea fleet at Kiel may be read in somewhat the same terms.

The German submarine campaign has undoubtedly been a failure.

THE GERMAN FLEET.

The whole future of the German empire depends upon the ability of the Kaiser's sea forces to stop or sink the transports bringing the American troops to the battle front in France.

If we can keep on making good all the Allied losses, the case is hopeless for Germany. Napoleon stated as a great military principle that, while a superiority of numbers may be overcome by expert generalship in a single battle, the side with the greatest numbers wins the war. As long as the sea lanes between America and the continent are kept clear, there is almost no limit to the man power of the Allies. The German power, on the other hand, is distinctly limited.

Almost any sacrifice to interrupt communication between America and France would be worth while to Germany.

There is another feature to this naval situation. The mutinies at Kiel and the more recent rebellions at Pola demonstrate the fact that men cannot be kept inactive and in good military trim at the same time. Unless they give those pent-up sailors at Kiel and Pola something to do, there is likely to be very serious internal trouble for the Central Powers.

Although I have never been able to make myself believe that the German fleet would come out of the rat hole at Kiel, it is not beyond the range of possibility it will do so. If the German warships have any intention of ever coming out, now is the appropriate time.

It is inconceivable that the German fleet coming out of Kiel could escape annihilation. At the same time, there is this way of looking at it: If Germany loses the war the fleet will probably be forfeited. She might as well do something with it. If, by coming out, she could destroy the American transports, she could easily afford to lose her entire fleet in so doing. It is a matter of time with Germany. If she can keep the Americans out of it, she might be able to beat the French and English. To keep the Americans out of it this summer is worth anything that Germany may have to pay to accomplish it.

There is general recognition on both sides that this is the decisive battle. I think the crash about to occur will be of a character even more savage and determined than the first phase of the big drive.

AUSTRIA IS TOTTERING.

Should it fail, it seems clear to me that the subsequent decline of German power will be very rapid.

Austro-Hungarian affairs are seething. The dual monarchy is in the condition of a bomb just fizzing before the explosion.

The recent so-called "consolidation" was in reality the answer of Germany to a cry for help from Emperor Charles. Whether the Central Powers win or lose the war, Austria is done for forever. She has spoken her piece. The curtain is going down. It is the last of a drama of black treachery. Austria's record smells to heaven. It is time she was snuffed out.

It is nonsense for the Germans to say that this crisis in Austria has not affected the German Empire.

Both Saxony and Bavaria are closer in thought to Austria than to Prussia.

Another thing:

I think most Americans have failed to realize the full significance of the "confessions" of Prince Lichnowsky, the former German Ambassador to London.

Those revelations have blown skyhigh the propaganda upon which the rulers of Germany concentrated all their strength; namely, that Germany was fighting a fight of defense against ruthless enemies surrounding her. That the war was forced upon Germany by England was the chief article of the faith of the German people.

Without going into a long exposition, it is clear that the sudden blazing out of the truth from a source that they must believe cannot but have a most dangerous effect upon the German people. Prince Lichnowsky has handed Germany the most telling blow received from any source since the war began. He has started a sore that is going to keep on eating.

Upon evidence that they cannot deny or disbelieve it has been borne in upon the German people that they have been swindled into a war.

Without undue optimism, I think we can feel confident as to the outcome of the war.

END IS SURE.

No matter how this approaching battle turns out, the end is certain.

If I were the Kaiser I would be more worried about the Red Cross parade yesterday than I would about the Allied soldiers. From the first, it has been clear that, in the final analysis, victory in this war will go to the civilian population that is gamest and can stand the gaff the longest. The women who marched in the parade yesterday were assurance that our soldiers are to be backed up by people at home who are game to go through with it to the end, no matter how long it lasts: no matter what the sacrifices that may be called for.

This has an application more direct than may appear on the surface.

An important part of the Kaiser's campaign to keep the American boys away from the front is to be fought in the United States. While the subs try to sink the transports at sea, we must expect a renewed activity on the part of the Kaiser's secret army in our midst.

THE ENEMY AT HOME.

Only those on the inside know what difficulties of German interference our government has had to face in its war preparations. If we knew all that has happened; knew of all the monkey wrenches that have been thrown into the machinery by sneaking hands, we would come to the conclusion that the War Department has done a good job.

Within the next few weeks the German effort to interfere with the departure of our troops will be redoubled. This effort will be directed partly toward creating Mexican disturbances to divert American troops bound for the European front. But there will also be a renewed effort to interfere with military work in the factories.

In blocking this campaign, we can each do our limit. To the humblest of us may come an opportunity to put in a good lick for Uncle Sam by keeping our ears open.

Just remember that a distinct and important part of the Kaiser's campaign to keep our men from the battle line will be fought right here in Los Angeles.

And you are a sentinel in the front-line trenches.

And Los Angeles is notoriously a center of pro-German activity.

FOOD ECONOMY URGED ON ALL.

Elimination of Waste Held Duty of People.

Luxuries to be Restricted by State Agents.

Violations of Rules to Bring Swift Retrubution.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—Home economics, applied particularly in the kitchen, will prove a profitable and popular study with housewives this summer. The cook who needs unlimited supplies from the baker, grocer, butcher, etc., will be handicapped, from present indications around the headquarters of the Food Administration. Those who direct the nation's food supplies are preparing to devote strenuous efforts to food conservation and their efforts are certain to be reflected in the dining-rooms of restaurants, hotels and homes.

Pressure is to be put upon the elimination of waste. Luxuries are to be restricted as much as possible and the economical cook will soon rank with the nation's heroes as contributor to the country's welfare.

No drastic action is planned. There is no sudden stoppage of supplies in sight, according to the food officials. But, wherever there appears an opportunity to conserve by cutting off luxuries that will be little missed after once gone, that will be done.

While no one rates sugar as a luxury, many of its uses can well be considered as unnecessary. There will be sufficient sugar for all necessary purposes. The Food Administration is authority for that promise, but the misuse of sugar will not be allowed, and the Food Administration reserves the right to declare when the sweetening is misused. As an example of the scientific method pursued in regulating the food supply, sugar will be allowed for use in manufacture of ice cream, but not in sweetened water ices, nor in sherbets. The ruling is that ice cream is somewhat of a necessity, containing much food value, while the sherbets and ices lack both food value and virtue of being necessary from any point of view.

The various forms of manufactured food products are to be surveyed in a manner similar to that of sugar, it has been announced. In every case where possible, savings are to be made. In few cases will the public notice the restriction, except, maybe, in wheat.

Wheat is such a vital necessity to the fighting forces that civilians will not be considered until the fighting man is fed. That means, say the officials, that foods containing wheat may be scarcer than ever and all rules affecting the supply will be enforced to the letter.

Reported wholesale violations of the wheat rules in Oakland, Berkeley, San Jose, San Diego and other cities have caused Food Administrator Merritt to send an assistant to those cities to form juries of bakers and grocers whose duties it will be to try all violators. Restaurants have been the worst offenders. Bread is to be served only when asked and then limited to two ounces to each patron. That rule has been repeatedly violated and Mr. Merritt asserts the violators are to be punished when found.

The procedure will be similar to the San Francisco cases where three restaurants were forced to close their doors for several days and place signs in front fully explaining the cause of the closure. Most offenses consisted in serving wheat bread free without order of the patron.

Food Administrator Merritt gave Los Angeles a clean bill in this respect. Restaurants in Los Angeles come nearer to complying with all regulations than any other large city of the State, he declared.

PLANE BLAZES HIGH IN SKY, CADET IS KILLED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WICHITA FALLS (Tex.) May 18.—His machine bursting into flames 1000 feet in the air, while flying as one of a formation of five, Jerome T. Van Aucken, cadet, met death at Callfield this morning when the plane crashed to earth on the flying field.

Van Aucken's home was at Saginaw, Mich. He was 23 years old.

Dangerous.

LONG BEACH POLICE BAG ENEMY, BELIEF.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, May 18.—Frank Milewski, born in Berlin, a graduate of Heidelberg University and former lieutenant in the German army, was arrested here today, believed by officials of the American Protective League to be a dangerous German agent. Milewski was about to board a train leaving for the north as he was apprehended.

Officials working on the case here believe the catch is one of the most important made in the Southland, and that startling disclosures concerning pro-German activities in this section of the country will follow a complete checking-up of the visitations to this city of former members of the Kaiser's legions.

Federal agents in Los Angeles have been interested in Milewski's activities for some time, it was stated by the local police, so late today he was turned over to the government authorities of that city.

BALLARD HONORED.

Lynn W. Ballard, secretary of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce and vice-president of the California Association of Commercial Secretaries, was today elected president of the State organization at the annual election of officers at the close of the two-days' convention this afternoon.

Other officers elected for the coming year were A. S. Dudley, assistant secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, secretary-treasurer; Frank B. Durkee of Chico, first vice-president; Charles H. Roberts of San Francisco, second vice-president; Miss Alta D. Marshall, third vice-president.

Members of the advisory council elected were Joseph T. Brooks of San Jose, retiring president, chairman; Joseph E. Caine, Oakland; W. H. Chase, Redding; H. E. Patterson, Fresno; William Tompkins, San Diego; J. C. Metzer, Santa Ana; A. E. Isham, Redlands.

It was decided to hold the next annual convention in Monterey, probably some time next January, the exact date to be decided later by the members of the advisory council.

Alleged to have posed as the owner of a rich gold-producing mine in Colorado, Edward Carr, 19 years old, said to have earned the reputation of being "the best sport" and the "freest spender" along the pike, secured his money from a series of bold burglaries committed recently in the city, according to the police.

Carr is said to have confessed to a number of burglary jobs that have baffled the police during the past week. He was arrested by the night watchman of an industrial establishment and when searched in the City Jail is said to have yielded incriminating keys and loot. The youth is said to have admitted that he broke into the bathhouse bowling alley six times during the last ten days, each time securing large amounts of gum, cigars and cash.

BAKER FAILS TO DOFF "TIN DERBY" TO FLAG.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—Mr. Baker, Secretary of War, confessed today, that he was the center of an unintentional scandal.

It appears that while in France, he was photographed reviewing troops, just as the colors were coming up. The officers beside him had just come to attention as the camera clicked, and the Secretary had not a chance to doff his "tin derby."

"This is indeed a scandal and I'm hearing from it by every mail," he said, adding that had the picture been snapped a moment later as the colors came abreast of him, it would have found him showing proper respect to the emblem. Another picture some time late shows him saluting the flag, but the officers with him had overlooked it.

MAY LET SOLDIERS VOTE.

States Devising Plan Which Can be Worked will Have Permission.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The question of taking the soldier vote in France has been reopened by the War Department, with the hope that some way may be evolved to take it which would not interfere with military efficiency of the army.

Secretary Baker indicated that any State devising a practical and workable way of collecting its soldier votes would be permitted to do so.

"The question of having the soldiers vote is a difficult one," the Secretary said, "but everybody is anxious to have it done if possible. You know, with the soldiers in this country we made a rule that wherever a State had provided the machinery for taking the vote we would help all we could to facilitate the operation of that machinery. The War Department obviously cannot take the responsibility of taking, collecting and returning the votes.

"If it is possible for us to work out a plan by which we can facilitate the States' doing it through their own agencies — agencies of their own creation — we would be very happy to do it. If States provide machinery which is practicable and can be worked we will do our utmost to enable them to work it. If some plans are practicable and some impracticable we will not punish those States whose plans are practicable because of the impracticability of others.

"If it is possible to work out a plan it will apply to the American expeditionary force."

WEATHER ELSEWHERE.

Hot West Wind Adds to Chicago's Worry, and Red Cross Paraders Swelter in Heat.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—Great things expected of the weather man and his little shower with which he promised to lower the summer temperatures that have prevailed in place of the long-deferred spring, failed to materialize today. Instead, the record for the year was sent another degree upward, and Red Cross paraders and parade spectators alike sweltered. At 3:30 p.m. the thermometer registered 84 deg. and, with the aid of a hot west wind, the sun made the discomfort unanimous. The half-holiday was welcomed by crowds, which thronged the parks for the first time this year.

Temperatures generally yesterday, as reported to the Los Angeles office of the United States Weather Bureau, were as follows:

FRENCH MAIL SYSTEM FOR AMERICAN FORCES

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 18.—A general order issued today establishes for the American Expeditionary Forces a military postal express service similar to the French system. It is hoped the result will be a material improvement in the delivery of mail to the American troops.

Under the Adjutant-General's office, Lieut.-Col. Thorndyke D. Howe will direct the service, receiving all mail for the American forces and supervising its distribution, as well as attending to the collection of outgoing mail. The director is authorized to establish his own regulations in regard to the size and weight of packages. He will have close relations with the Allied postal authorities. A central military postoffice will be established at the headquarters of the supply service, where mail will be received and whence it will be delivered by orderlies.

German Socialist Says World Coalition will Make War Mockery.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Pessimistic reflections upon the future for Germany by Socialist Deputy David, writing in the Schwaebische Tagwacht, are quoted in an official dispatch today from Geneva.

"If Germany does not succeed when peace is concluded in dissolving the world coalition the war will be lost for her," the Deputy says, "for in this case one could not call it a veritable peace. It will only be an armistice whose burdens caused by armaments will bring us to a state of total exhaustion. We cannot forever hold the entire world under domination.

"The situation of our country is most serious, in spite of the successes we have won and those we shall obtain in the future. It is impossible to be mistaken when one coolly considers face to face the resources which the adversaries have at their disposal. A peace dictated by the military has been concluded in the east and we are already beginning to feel the effects of it."

Fire Stops Railroad Traffic.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

OAKLAND, May 18.—A fire in the plant of the United Iron Works in the manufacturing district here yesterday caused estimated damage of $300,000, interfered with the traffic of two transcontinental railroad lines for two hours and for a while threatened several large gas tanks and manufacturing plants.

RICKENBACHER'S ESCAPE NARROW

American Flyer in Collision with Foe.

Battles Three Enemy Planes, Bags One.

Our Patrols Active Along the Toul Sector.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, May 17.—Lieut. Edward Rickenbacher yesterday encountered three enemy airplanes along the sector northwest of Toul and brought down one of them, himself narrowly escaping. His machine collided with a German plane, sending him spinning downward, but he was able to regain control of his craft.

One of the German airmen, approaching the lieutenant, misjudged his distance.

"I saw his mistake and tried to get out of his way by turning upward," said Lieut. Rickenbacher, "but I was not fast enough. The tail of his machine scraped my top wing, ripping it. The German's tail was carried away.

LUCK SAVES HIM.

"The force of the collision sent us both toward the earth in spinning nose dives. After dropping 1000 meters I managed to straighten out my machine, but the Boche dashed down completely out of control until he was just over the trees. There he wobbled for a second and then took another dive into the field back of the edge of the forest. It was just pure luck that his machine was damaged more badly than mine."

A German airplane bearing French markings was discovered today flying over the lines northwest of Toul. American aviators tried to intercept him, but he made his escape. The incident shows what cunning and deceit American airmen have to deal with and what caution they have to display in dealing with a supposed friend.

American patrols were very active on the Toul sector last night and today, but did not establish contact with the enemy. The artillery firing on this sector has fallen off to almost nothing. It is just the opposite on the Luneville sector, where the German guns are most active, apparently retaliating for recent heavy American bombardments.

BALLOON ESCAPES.

An enemy observation balloon opposite Toul broke away late yesterday after its two occupants had parachuted from it and it floated two kilometers inside our lines. Our aviators were called out, but by the time they reached the locality the balloon had risen and floated back toward Germany. American airmen chased the craft twelve kilometers until it went up so high that it was impracticable to pursue it farther.

An American pursuit airplane was seen to get beyond control a short distance behind the American lines northwest of Toul today and to crash to the ground from a height of 3000 meters. It was one of two machines returning from a patrol over the enemy lines. How the accident happened is not known.

OREGON PRIMARIES.

McNary, Incumbent, Seems to be Republican Choice for Senator.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.), May 18.—Scattering returns from all parts of Oregon on yesterday's primary election seemed to assure the nomination of Charles L. McNary, incumbent, for United States Senator on the Republican ticket, and the renomination of Gov. Withycombe. Former Gov. West apparently was nominated by the Democrats for United States Senator, and Walter M. Pierce for Governor.

For the Republican nomination for the short term as United States Senator, B. F. Mulkey was in the lead and Ralph Williams was named Republican National Committeeman.

HAWAII DRY IN WAR IF PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18. — The Senate bill prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicants in the Territory of Hawaii during the war was passed today by the House, 237 to 30, and now goes to the President.

A motion by Representative Stafford of Wisconsin, authorizing a referendum at any general election, was defeated.

BEAT GERMAN ARMY OR LOSE.

fective, although it is still impossible for Germany and her allies to obtain many very essential commodities, and the final results of the policy depend very much upon how well Germany's needs may be supplied from Russia, which can give her some but not all things she needs.

THIRD PHASE.

We are now in the third phase of the war, in which the problem is the defeat of the German army. In this it should be known that American effort alone, or not backed up by the maximum effort of the Allies, cannot win the war. It requires the very greatest effort the combined strength and resources of the Allies, plus the assistance of the United States can make.

We and the Allies expect to get control of the air and to dominate the U-boat situation, but the real problem is not in the air nor in the sea, but is the way in which the German army can be beaten. The German armies have obtained the initiative by their spring offensive in such a way that the United States and the Allies face an enemy dominating the field and have not the opportunity of an initiative themselves, but must meet the German attacks, being of necessity thus committed to a policy without a broad selection being possible for us. The western front must be defended, and we are absolutely committed to that task.

In January last, Sir Auckland Geddes stated that Great Britain had 7,500,000 combatant troops. He probably erred in saying they all were combatant troops. They were credited from the following sources: England, 4,530,000; Scotland, 620,000; Wales, 280,000; Ireland, 170,000; colonies, 900,000; India, Africa and other possessions, 1,000,000.

MILLION IN FRANCE.

One million British soldiers were in France at the beginning of the German drive. England was, therefore, not using her troops in France, nor is it known where they were. The point is that the war cannot be won while the Allies are waiting and conserving their forces until the United States can throw decisive forces into the contest. The Allies appear now to be following the policy of letting the Germans exhaust themselves, so that the counter offensive, whenever it is launched, may not cost so disastrously.

But the question is, how hard are the Germans going to make their next drive, which they are preparing? Will they risk everything, stake victory or defeat on one battle, one terrific effort to separate the British and French armies? The answer to that question depends upon how critical and desperate the situation in Germany is. The Germans know, we do not.

ITALY WEAKENED.

There is little prospect of Italy being able this year to recover the position she won last year in her splendid advance against the Austrians. When Cadorna was pushing ahead England would not give encouragement or assistance, but it seemed possible then, and no less now, that had the Italians received support in their magnificent effort, Austria-Hungary would have been reduced to the position that Russia was later, and completely eliminated from the war, Germany thus being deprived of her strongest support, the Mittel-Europa scheme blasted by the cutting of the line of communications between Germany and the Balkans and Turkey, and Serbia and Rumania rescued.

The Italians believe today that had they received support Austria would have been put out of the war. Now it will be very hard for the Italians to recover the positions and the only possibility of it would appear to be through a collapse of an Austro-Hungary offensive, followed up by the Italians, but whether Italy possesses sufficient material, munitions and guns to conduct a sustained counter-offensive, immediately following the blow the Austrian army is expected to deliver, is problematical.

It was believed here today that the recent offensive operations of the Italian army, which carried the Italians into Austrian positions at most difficult points of the front, have inspired the whole Italian nation to believe that the Austrian blow will be broken, and that the Italian army will follow up the enemy setback with a notable victory, in which much of the lost territory will be recovered.

TROOPS MOVE FAST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—With every indication pointing to the early resumption of the German drive in France, officials here feel that all that could be done to bring American aid to the Allied armies has been done. They await the outcome with the same supreme confidence that Germany's offensive power finally will be repulsed as do the French and British leaders.

American troops are shoulder to shoulder with the French and British in Picardy, while in Flanders American units are training close behind the battle lines, ready to go in immediately if necessary. In both places the number of troops is being increased at a rate not hoped for only a few months ago and in the two American sectors farther south the lines are being strengthened and extended daily.

With more than 500,000 men overseas the United States forces are occupying their full share of the fighting line. It was learned officially today that the actual frontage held is third in extent at this time, having exceeded the length of the Belgian sector when American troops came into line with the French in Picardy.

Officials here believe that the German high command is so heavily committed to the Picardy and Flanders sectors in its offensive plans that no serious effort elsewhere along the front is to be expected. It therefore appears certain that when the new blow is struck Americans will share in increasing numbers from month to month in the German defeat.

Meanwhile, events are moving swiftly on this side to back up the army now abroad with a steady and increasing flow of men and equipment.

There appears to be little doubt now that the American forces abroad will pass the million mark by mid-summer, although official statements were lacking. The rate at which troops are being sent overseas is rising from week to week. Figures may not be published under the rules of voluntary censorship, but Secretary Baker's recent statement that 500,000 had been dispatched is regarded as already out of date.

SHORTAGE OF THRONES; WHAT'S KAISER TO DO?

SCRAMBLE ON AMONG PRINCES FOR NEW CROWNS IN SEIZED LANDS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, May 18.—The Berlin newspapers gave indications that the prospect of new thrones in the east for German princes has stirred German court circles as seldom, if ever, before. The Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts says that agents from the court are traveling hither and thither in efforts to make propaganda for or against the various families to which the honors might fall.

This scramble for thrones, Vorwaerts fears, may endanger German unity. It therefore urges, probably in a spirit of irony, that a compromise be effected by filling the thrones with Turkish princes.

"If Prussia is enlarged," it comments, "something must also be found somewhere for Bavaria, while Saxony, Wuertemburg and other states will also want something and there are only six thrones to distribute among twenty-two dynasties."

HE CAN'T DO MUCH FOR GERMANY IN PRISON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—Johannes H. Munn, a German-born machinist, was ordered interned today for the duration of the war as a dangerous enemy alien, having said, it is stated, that "He could be of more use to Germany in this country than elsewhere."

Munn completed a three months' term in the Yolo County Jail at Woodland Tuesday, but has been held there since, the authorities said, because threats had been made to lynch him when he was liberated. He was imprisoned on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Army officials rejected Munn when he attempted to enlist at Spokane in the aviation section, it is said.

LOCKS HANDCUFFS ON SELF; PRISONER FREE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 18. — Sheriff of Mendon, O.—he was a little too excited to give his name—walked into a local police station today with his wrists imprisoned in his own handcuffs while a prisoner walked free at his side.

"I was on the train with this prisoner, whom I got in Oklahoma and I wanted to show him these handcuffs won't come off without the key and I left the key in my raincoat and somebody 'lifted' it, and I was right, the danged things won't come off," explained the elderly Sheriff.

The police directed him to a place where files are sold.

KILLS HIMSELF.

Despondent because of ill-health, B. D. Golling, 29 years old, a conductor for the Los Angeles Railway, committed suicide at his home, No. 5349 Fifth avenue, yesterday afternoon by inhaling gas. The body was found by Officers Littell and Luth, who broke in the door of the man's home and found him lying on the bed, late last night. The body was taken to the mortuary of E. A. Moses.

CONFIDENCE IN MONEY TO INFLUENCE MARKET

TRADING IN WALL STREET DEPENDS UPON FOREIGN SITUATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 18. — Greater confidence in the outcome of the war, improving crop and trade conditions and the more harmonious relations between the Federal government and financial and industrial interests accounted very largely for the substantial advances in securities this week, to the accompaniment of very heavy daily dealings.

Even at the reversals which marked some of the more active issues in the later trading, the average of prices was the highest of the year, here and there showing new maximums for almost two years.

The upswing would have inspired a more hopeful feeling among investors had it been less restricted. Students of economic conditions expressed the belief that a market such as that of the past week more than discounted the most favorable development for months to come.

It was universally recognized that the course of the market during the remaining weeks of the spring season will be influenced mainly by money which promises to be reasonably easy, barring some unexpected change in the foreign situation.

J. FRANCIS HARMON, WAR VETERAN, DEAD.

J. Francis Harmon, Civil War veteran, who conducted a general merchandise store at Vermont avenue and Jefferson street for twelve years, died Friday at No. 1028 West Thirty-fifth place, where he lived with his son, William H. Harmon.

Before the war Mr. Harmon published the Oberlin News. He became a quartermaster sergeant in Co. C of the Seventh Ohio, and afterward was postmaster and druggist. The funeral services will be conducted Monday from the parlors of Draper & Dellenbaugh, with Stanton Post, G.A.R., in charge. Interment will be in Rosedale.

FLORENCE STONE SUES.

Actress Reported to Have Brought Action for Divorce in Minneapolis.

Florence Stone Ferris, well-known Los Angeles actress, was reported yesterday to have filed suit for divorce from Dick Ferris. The grounds for the suit are said to be nonsupport and desertion, the action being taken in Minneapolis.

This is not the first time that the marital troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Ferris have reached the courts, it having been reported on several occasions that action for separation was contemplated. Mrs. Ferris, who is better known on the stage as Florence Stone, could not be reached at the Alexandria last night.

MAJ. J. P. MITCHEL HERE.

Former Mayor of New York Hopes to See Aviation Service in France Soon.

John Purroy Mitchel, former Mayor of New York City, who recently was commissioned a major in the Aviation Corps at North Island, paid his first visit to Los Angeles yesterday since joining the colors.

Accompanied by his wife, Maj. Mitchel will spend a few days here. At the Alexandria last night he stated that aviation was much more exciting, interesting and satisfying that merely being Mayor of the largest city. He added that he hoped to see active service in France before many months.

Strike to Aid Germany was Proposed to Haywood.

Correspondence Introduced at Chicago Trial.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 18.—War against the American government by the Industrial Workers of the World in retaliation for a declaration of war against Germany was proposed in correspondence between James E. Slovick and William D. Haywood, according to evidence introduced at the trial of 112 leaders of the organization today by Claude R. Porter, special prosecutor.

When the final break with Germany seemed imminent, Slovick, secretary of the Marine Transport Workers, proposed a general strike as one means of combatting America's war programme, and asserted that the organization would become the haven for Germans, Austrians and other Central Powers aliens as well as pacifists and conscientious objectors.

A proposal that Industrial Workers of the World link their forces with revolutionary parties in other countries and extend its sphere so far as to challenge the power of the governments of the entire world, was made by the Italian revolutionist, John Baldazzi, soon after America entered the war.

The proposal, addressed by Baldazzi to his chief, William D. Haywood, was read into the records today by Claude R. Porter, special government prosecutor.

GATHERING OF CROPS MOST ESSENTIAL, SAYS GOVERNOR IN PROCLAMATION.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—A proclamation calling on the people of the State "to turn aside from their regular occupations, unless they are engaged in essential war work, give up their vacations and offer themselves to the farmers of the State for the gathering of crops," was issued today by Gov. Stephens.

"The gathering of crops in California during the approaching harvest season is a matter of such concern to which the State must immediately direct its attention," the proclamation said.

Information received by the State Labor Committee appointed by Gov. Stephens to assist in solving the farm labor problem indicated a shortage of 12,000 or more men in the harvest fields, it was said at the Governor's office.

"The particular purpose of this proclamation is to urge every available person to enroll to the end that our solemn obligation to give our maximum to the world's supply of food be fulfilled," he said.

Proceeds to Help Soldiers Who are Disabled.

Guillaume Sandoz and Mme Marie Lantes, official representatives in this country of the French committee of which President Poincare is head, for the aid of Les Invalides No. 2, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday afternoon and will make the Hotel Alexandria their headquarters. They bring with them unique official war films, photographed directly in color, which will be exhibited to raise money for the provision of 300,000 French soldiers, who, while not directly wounded in battle, have lost their health through three years in the trenches. These men are victims of such complaints as tuberculosis, shell-shock, inflammatory rheumatism and insanity, and they and their families are practically destitute, since they are not eligible for war pensions.

Speaking at the Alexandria yesterday, through Mlle. Camille de Borde des Forest, their interpreter, they said that they were officially required to avoid expressions of opinion on the war, religion or politics, but they had no hesitation in saying that the hard-pressed line on the western front will hold.

A WOMAN MAJOR.

Mme. Lantes is the wife of a French officer and herself held the rank of major in charge of an ambulance corps through fourteen months of warfare on the Marne. M. Sandoz was, before the war, a prominent music publisher, but both he and Mme. Lantes now devote their entire services to this cause under direct appointment from M. TO CUT SHORE LEAVE.

Coast Steamship Companies Ask Twenty-five-Day Limit for Special Cases.

To prevent loafing on the part of sailors ashore, Pacific Coast steamship companies have made application to Washington asking that the twenty-five-day limit be placed on exemptions from military duty granted on navigation grounds. This law is now operative at Atlantic ports and has done much to stop the shortage of sailors.

Shipping men assert there is not so much a shortage of sailors as there is a shortage of seamen who are willing to work. High wages now being paid give the seamen so much money that they leave the ships and remain ashore until the accumulated wages are spent.

The twenty-five-day law calls for the arrest of any sailor subject to military duty who cannot show a discharge less than twenty-five days old. If he cannot show this and prove his intention of going to sea within this limit, he is subject to draft.

WOMEN CONDUCTORS O.K

Federal Official Says There is no Objection to Employing Them in Los Angeles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—Mrs. E. J. Richards, head of the women's section of the United States Labor Department employment office, has written the Los Angeles Street Railway, in response to a letter from that company, that she can see no objection to the employment of women as conductors. She believes that conditions such as prevail in New York, where the employment of women conductors was found undesirable on some lines, do not exist in Los Angeles.

George Baker Anderson of the public relations department of the Los Angeles Street Railway Company said last night that he had written Mrs. Richards, not for permission, but only for all information she had as to how the employment of women on street railways was working out, in case such a step would be found necessary in Los Angeles. Mr. Anderson says that while the employment of women on the street railway lines here is always a possibility as the war goes on, the supply of men has improved so that the company has, for the present at least, plenty of men.

PAPER FROM SAWDUST ENGLISH EXPERIMENT.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 5. — Experiments in making paper from sawdust which were undertaken in 1810, have been revived.

Certain difficulties connected with conversion of sawdust into wood pulp have been overcome, and, as the supply of sawdust is unlimited, it is hoped to remove part of the difficulty of finding an adequate supply of news print paper. The Paper Controller is assisting and a mill has been started in Scotland to turn out 200 tons of paper a week from sawdust.

The process will shortly be extended to other mills, it is announced.

JAPAN ERECTS STATUE OF TOWNSEND HARRIS.

TOKIO, April 16.—Roland S. Morris, the American Ambassador, and a number of prominent Japanese were present yesterday at the laying of the corner stone of a bronze statue which will be erected at Kanagawa, near Tokio, in memory of Townsend Harris, the first American Minister to Japan. The ceremony was held on the grounds of the famous Buddhist Honganji Temple, where was signed the first treaty of commerce between Japan and the United States.

The statue will be erected as the result of the efforts of Gombei Nakamura, a merchant of Yokohama, at whose father's home Mr. Harris stayed when he first came to Japan. Mr. Nakamura's idea met with the warm support of Viscount Kentaro Kaneko, president of the America's Friends Association and of the American-Japan Association. The site of the statue is under the giant camphor tree where Mr. Harris planted the Stars and Stripes.

IN WRITING TO "HIM" ABROAD OMIT A.E.F.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 25.—The British postal authorities have warned the British public against using the abbreviation "A.E.F." on letters addressed to men in the American Army, owing to the likelihood of such letters getting missent to the Australian forces.

"The Postmaster-General strongly advises the public, when writing either to Americans or Australians, to write the address in full," says an official warning placarded in all postoffices in Great Britain.

DRIFT EIGHTY HOURS AT SEA ON OVERTURNED SEAPLANE.

Ensign and Companion, Starving and Thirsty, Cling to Machine as Ships Go Past; Collapse at Rescue.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Ensign E. A. Stone, United States Naval Reserves of Norfolk, Va., given up for drowned in the English Channel last month, has safely arrived in London. With a companion, Stone clung for eighty hours without food or drink to the under side of a seaplane pontoon before he was saved.

Ensign Stone tells a thrilling story of how he and a companion, Sub-Lieut. Eric Moore, of the royal naval air service, drifted on the seas from a Saturday morning until a Tuesday night before reaching safety. His account follows:

"I left our station in a British seaplane as pilot with Sub-Lieut. Eric Moore of the royal naval air service as observer at 9 a.m. Our duty was to convoy patrols. When two hours out, having met our ships coming from the westward, we thought we sighted a periscope ahead and turned off in pursuit. We lost our course. Our engine dropped dead and forced us to land on the surface of a rough sea.

RELEASED PIGEONS.

"We had no kite nor radio to call for assistance so we released our two carrier pigeons. We tied a message with our position and the word, 'sinking' on each. The first flew straight off and reached home. But the other would not budge until Moore threw our navigation clock at him which probably upset him so that he failed us.

"Heavy seas smashed our tail planes, which kept settling. I saw that they were pulling the machine down by the rear, turning her over. We tore the tail fabric to lessen the impact of the waves. The tail flat was smashed and its box filled with water. This increased the downward leverage and rode her perpendicularly in the air. At 2:30 p.m. we capsized, climbing up the nose and over the top, to the under side of the pontoons. Our emergency ration had been in the observer's seat at the back, but we had been so busy trying to repair the motor and save ourselves from turning over that we did not remember this until too late. When I crawled aft for food, Moore saw that I was only helping the machine to capsize. He yelled to me to come back and I did just in time to save myself from being carried down with the tail and drowned.

FASTED FOUR DAYS.

"From then on for nearly four days, until picked up by a trawler, we were continually soaked and lashed by seas and with nothing to eat or drink. We had nothing to cling to, and so to keep from being washed overboard, we got on the same pontoon and hugged our arms about one another's bodies for the whole time. We suffered from thirst. I had a craving for canned peaches. Twice a drizzle came on, wetting the pontoon. We turned on our stomachs and lapped up the moisture, but the paint came off with salt and nauseated us.

"Our limbs grew numb. From time to time the wreckage from torpedoed ships would pass. Once two full biscuit tins came close enough to swim for, but by then in our weakened state, we knew that we would drown if we tried to get them. We did haul in a third tin and broke it open. It was filled with tobacco.

"Every day we saw convoys in the distance and vainly waved our handkerchiefs. We realized how easy it was for a submarine out there to escape being spotted. On Sunday night we spied a masthead light and shouted. The ship heard and began to circle us. We saw her port light. She showed red. She headed straight toward us until within a hundred yards. Then, when the crew were visible on the deck of the vessel, she suddenly put out her lights and turned away. 'She thinks we are Huns,' said Moore. 'I hope she does,' said I. 'Then they'll send patrol boats out to get us. We couldn't be worse off if we were Germans.'

SIGHT SEAPLANE.

"But no rescue came. On Monday afternoon a seaplane appeared from the east. It was flying only 800 feet overhead, aiming down the channel. It seemed impossible that she couldn't sight us, for the air was perfectly clear. But she passed straight above without making any signal, flew two miles beyond and came back on her course.

"Our spirits fell. We had been afraid of two things; being picked up by neutral ships and interned, or captured by an enemy submarine. Now we even hoped that the enemy—that anything—would get us to end it all.

"We sighted a trawler about 6 p.m. on Tuesday. She had been chasing a submarine. We waved at her for half an hour before she changed her course. We were both too weak to stand up and signal. We could not rise on our knees. Moore's hands were too swollen to hold a handkerchief, but I had kept my gloves on and was able to do so. The trawler moved warily around us, but finally threw life preservers at the end of a line. I yelled that we were too weak to grasp it. She finally hove to, lowered a boat and lifted us aboard. Then we collapsed.

ASKED FOR DRINK.

"I remember asking for a drink and getting water. The skipper would let us take only sips, but he left a bottle alongside me and I drained it. He gave us biscuits, but we could not chew or swallow them. I asked for peaches and it almost seemed that my dreams of them had come true when he shoved things between my teeth. We felt no pain until our clothing was ripped off and blood rushed into swollen legs and arms. Moore lost six toes from gangrene in the hospital. My feet turned black, but decay did not set in.

"Every machine from the seaplane base and those from a station on the French coast had searched continually for us after the blue pigeon had homed, as did all the patrols and destroyers in the area."

Ensign Stone enlisted as a seaman and was trained in aviation. On last December 11 he was detached from the naval air station at Hampton Roads, Va., and ordered to France for duty, arriving there last January 21. In February he was directed to report to the commander of the United States naval forces, London, for patrol duty in England.

Stone's mother, Mrs. Clara Stone, resides at the Redgate apartments, Norfolk, Va.

GERMANS MUST PAY GREATEST TAX EVER.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM, April 25.—For the first time since the war began, Germany is attempting to help pay the expenses of war by new taxation. The new finance programme calls for new German taxes to yield over $800,000,000. This new burden is described by the German Finance Minister as "the price of victory."

New taxes on beer, wine and spirits, tea, coffee and cocoa are to yield $450,000,000, while postal and telegraph increases are estimated to return $85,000,000. There are also to be increases in stamp duties.

These taxes, which are said by the newspapers to be "only a beginning," are the greatest in amount ever asked from German taxpayers. The Finance Minister describes the taxes as "mainly aimed against only the richer classes."

OLIVE DRAB FOR SOLDIERS' HOME.

Veterans at Sawtelle to Trade Blue Uniforms for Khaki.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—Olive-drab uniforms will supplant the blue apparel worn by the guests at the veteran soldiers' home at Yountville, Cal., as soon as the change can be effected, it was announced today by the superintendent. The change will be made because the veterans have expressed a desire that they be allowed to don clothes of the same cloth and color as members of the American army, and because of an increasing difficulty in obtaining blue cloth. It is expected that the change will be made at Sawtelle Soldiers' Home in California after it is inaugurated at the Napa Institution.

JAPAN PLANS TO BLOCK HUN.

rectly concerns the United States and consequently it involves no change in the policy of the department in the treatment of the Far Eastern question. That policy, it is said, properly might be subject to revision if in the future Japan and China should find it necessary or advisable to call upon the United States or the Entente Allies for military or other substantial assistance in carrying out their plans.

PRESENT STATUS.

As the matter now stands, there is not the slightest disposition to question the motives that impel the two eastern nations to join hands to protect themselves from any danger which they may foresee.

Practical difficulty in the combination of Japanese and Chinese interests is suggested in diplomatic circles here through the disaffection in Southern China. But it is said that this is founded entirely upon the ambitions of Chinese leaders without any relation to the situation in Siberia.

For some time negotiations have been in progress at Peking and Tokio looking to the co-operation of those two nations in that direction. Japan, under her treaty with England and also under the conditions, self-imposed, when she joined the Entente Allies, felt herself chargeable with maintaining the security of the Far East. When German influence first began to manifest itself in Siberia the Japanese government conceived a plan of military occupation of some portions of Siberia, including the port of Vladivostok and a zone along the Siberian railway certainly as far west as Lake Baikal and possibly to the Ural Mountains.

Preliminary inquiries directed to the Entente Powers, however, developed a divergence of views as to the wisdom of a single-handed movement of that kind by Japan. There was no disposition to question Japan's sincerity, but doubt was expressed as to the actual existence of imminent danger from German aggression in that far-off quarter of the world while the United States government feared that the effect upon the Russian people of Japan's invasion of Siberia would be misunderstood and that the Russians in their fear of permanent Japanese occupation would be thrown into the arms of Germany. Therefore it was announced that the project had been, if not abandoned, at least indefinitely postponed in execution.

Meanwhile the activities of Gen. Semenoff, the Cossack leader of the anti-Bolshevik party in Siberia, had resulted in practically a state of war on the border between Siberia and Manchuria, forces from both sides passing without hindrance across the line and throwing the country into disorder.

It was known that some German and Austrian prisoners of war were fighting with the Bolshevik elements, though there is wide difference of opinion as to their number. The Chinese government promply employed what military force it had in guarding Upper Manchuria, but it was apparent that the task was beyond the powers of Chinese troops unaided by trained veterans.

Therefore Japan, mindful of her obligations to maintain peace in the East, has come to the aid of China, as it is stated in official circles here today.

JAPAN AIDS CHINA.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE AND A. P.]

TOKIO, Tuesday, May 14 (delayed.)—Premier Terauchi, in an address today, declared that peace in the Far East only would be served by promoting intimacy between Japan and China, in which latter country Japan desired a speedy termination of the internal disorders.

The Premier gave warning of the danger of rumors calculated to estrange the friendly relations of Japan with China, America and other nations. He announced his determination likewise to continue as Premier as long as he enjoyed the confidence of the Emperor.

DR. D. E. FOSTER
Painless Dental Expert

The correct use of Analgesia in modern dentistry has eliminated for the patient all sensations of pain. Properly administered the patient is spared all the disagreeable sensations of the dental chair—eliminating the fear which is causing so many people to constantly neglect their teeth.

My 10 years of experience as one of the leading dentists of this community, coupled with my broad experience as dental surgeon of the United States Army has given me a thorough knowledge of the many diseases and disorders of the human mouth.

I have devoted years of study to perfect the highest grade of proficiency in positively painless methods, realizing that only through the entire elimination of pain could satisfactory dental work be accomplished.

In the course of my career I have had the opportunity to successfully perform some of the most intricate dental operations known to dental science. I list among my patients many of the most prominent and exacting people of Southern California.

The fact that I have been continually practicing in this city for the past 10 years; the fact that I have always been recognized as one of the leading ethical dentists and the fact that I have today one of the finest practices in the west should convince you that I will satisfactorily meet your dental needs.

To everyone within earshot of this message, I can truthfully state that in my offices all dental work is now

Without Pain.

"Your work is very satisfactory"

Dr. D. E. Foster,
Orpheum Theater Bldg., City.

The painless dental work that was done on my jaws in your office has been so entirely satisfactory in every respect that I cannot too highly recommend you to anyone in need of dental services.

Yours very truly,
A. MORRIS,
Harvey News Service, Los Angeles.

Mr. Morris is the local manager of the Harvey News Service for the Santa Fe Railroad Coast Lines.

"I am pleased with your dental work"

Dr. D. E. Foster,
Orpheum Theater Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

During the past 16 years the dental work you have done on my jaws and for my family has been entirely satisfactory. We have found your methods PAINLESS, your work permanent and your prices very reasonable.

Through our long associations as Commissioned Officers in the Philippines during the Spanish-American War I had the opportunity to become well enough acquainted with you to take pleasure in recommending your work to anyone needing dental services.

Yours very truly,
C. C. FAW,
Second Lieutenant Philippine Scouts (1902)
2117½ Seventh Ave., Los Angeles.

Dr. Foster Is One of the Nation's Best Known Experts In Treating PYORRHEA

Pyorrhea has been called the "White Plague" of the mouth. It is the most dreaded and obstinate disease known to dental science because it is so mild in its action and effect until the mouth is so badly infected that cure is sometimes impossible.

It is estimated that fully 75% of the people 30 years of age or more, have Pyorrhea in some form or other. In its early stages Pyorrhea can be detected only by an expert.

Thousands of People Have PYORRHEA and Don't Know It.

I have spent a great many years in the exhaustive study and successful treatment of Pyorrhea. I know the disease and its action from every angle, and I can detect it instantly.

Pyorrhea is a disease of the gums and teeth attended by sore, receding and tender gums, followed by loosening and loss of the teeth. Taken in its early stages it is inexpensive to treat.

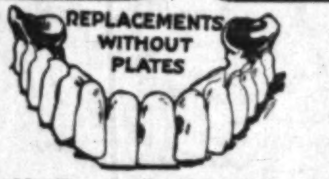
Satisfy yourself that you have no Pyorrhea by visiting this office for examination. I make no charge for Pyorrhea examination.

Note the Thickness of the FOSTER CROWN
(Heavy Solid Cusp)

Ordinary Crown
Foster Crown

I have developed what is known to dental profession as the "Foster Solid Cusp Crown," which is guaranteed to last a lifetime.

In the illustration above you will note the thick, solid, substantial cusp as compared to the thin crown used by the great majority of dentists. Both may look the same from the outside but the Foster crown carries the guarantee.



Full Set of Teeth as Good as Nature's Own, Without Plates

If a few teeth remain in the jaw I can give you a full set of teeth without the use of plates. These replacements cannot be detected from natural teeth and can be used just as effectively as Nature's own. Of course, if all the teeth are gone or decayed, plates are necessary.

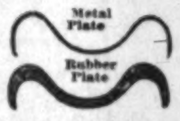
A Word About Prices

I have been practicing dentistry in Los Angeles for the past 10 years. My former offices were in the W. P. Story Building and I believe that I have one of the largest personal followings of any dentist in the city. My large successful practice is due entirely to the fact that my work has always been satisfactory and to the fact that I NEVER overcharge a patient.

You will find my prices are very reasonable; my work entirely satisfactory and high class in every respect.

NATURAL PLATES

Dr. Foster's Superior Thin Metal Plates



In the small cross sectional diagram above notice the difference between the Foster Thin Metal Plate and the ordinary thick rubber plate.

A thin metal plate does away with the whistling sound so disagreeable to people who wear the old-fashioned thick rubber plate. The thin metal plates are cleaner, more sanitary and comfortable, they last a lifetime and can be made as shown in the above illustration, to fill out the face, eliminating lines, wrinkles and hollows to make the facial expression at least ten years younger.

I have perfected one of the very finest light weight thin metal plates that always gives entire satisfaction.

Steel Hulls Totaling 36,000 Tons Take to Water.

Keel Plates for New Vessels Laid Immediately.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OAKLAND, May 18.—The hulls of four big steel vessels slid smoothly from the ways in three shipyards within a space of forty minutes here tonight, adding 36,000 tons to the cargo space of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

The first and largest launched was the 11,800-ton Volunteer, sent from the ways at the yards of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation at 8 o'clock sharp. The Volunteer is one of the largest vessels built on this Coast.

At 8:20 p.m., in the yards of the Moore Shipbuilding Company, the 9400-ton Fresno took the water, followed twenty minutes later by the Oshawa, of the same size. The keel plate for a new vessel had been laid in each slip before the launched hulls had come to rest

Meanwhile, at 8:30 p.m., the Governor John Lind had been successfully launched by the D. J. Hanlon Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company.

The four launchings, aggregating more than 36,000 tons, establish what is thought to be a record of a quadruple launching since the government assumed control of shipyards.

At the Moore yards, which set a record March 14 by launching three vessels in forty minutes, Mrs. W. F. Toomey, wife of the Mayor of Fresno, christened the Fresno, and the Oshawa was christened by Mrs. Daniel W. Carmichael, wife of the president of the Sacramento City Commission. The Governor John Lind was christened by Miss Marie Hanlon, daughter of the concern's president.

A large number of Fresno residents were present at the launching of the vessel named after their city. They made the trip from Fresno in fifty automobiles and after a reception at the Hotel Oakland paraded to the Moore yards.

NAVY SEEKS SUPPLIES.

Looks to Southern California for Large Amount of Its Dairy Requirements.

The United States government is looking to California to supply a large proportion of the commissary needs of the navy, according to S. C. Thompson of the live-stock division of the Bureau of Agriculture, who is at the Clark.

"I have been sent out by Washington to make a survey of the dairy situation in California in order that the government may know exactly what can be expected of this State in furnishing the butter needed in the navy," he said last night. "It is the desire of the government that the contracts be let in such a way that it will not hurt the local trade or cause a sudden shortage in any district. I have been most favorably impressed with the dairy situation as I have found it in Southern California."

LINDA VISTA FAIR.

Next Friday will be a special poultry day at the Linda Vista district fair, in West Pasadena. Dr. Edward Brown, an authority on poultry in England, and who has written four books on this subject, will speak on "Poultry." Other speakers will be Prof. James Dougherty, head of the poultry department of the agricultural college at the State University; A. A. Peters of the Department of Agriculture bureau of animal industry, and Prof. Houser of the Department of Agriculture.

WOMEN'S BOND SALES LARGE.

Over Fifteen Million of the Third Liberty Issue to Their Credit.

Mrs. E. R. Brainerd, State chairman of the California Women's Liberty Loan Committee, reports that the women's organizations have the sale of $15,192,000 of bonds to their credit, as testified by the official auditors. These figures do not include approximate reports, nor bonds sold by women through the men's committees. In such cases as the city and county teachers, the labor unions, the department stores and business houses, where the totals go through the men's accounts, the women's portions have been ignored in the statement given. These added would bring the total for the women to over $20,000,000, Mrs. Brainerd says.

The State chairman has received congratulatory messages from Washington and from Mrs. A. S. Baldwin, Federal chairman of Woman's Liberty Loan work of San Francisco. Mrs. Baldwin had declared that a $6,000,000 total would be creditable, and Mrs. Brainerd's figures are nearly three times that expected.

AMERICANS PUT ON HIGH PLANE.

seen under a strong light in the performance of its duties.

We take the work of Sir Roger Kayes to be typical of the spirit and enterprise of the whole navy, and we all know that whether the leader is Beatty, Kayes, Tyrwhitt or another, our sea affairs are in good hands, and that when the Germans face the open sea they will learn something.

But another interesting thought occurs to those who have followed the war's course, namely, that in no other great campaign have the relations between the services been more intimate and in no other has their co-operation been more effective and more continuous.

Now there enters into this war a fresh element, namely the co-operation of our navy and army with those of our Allies. An English king once said that it was the custom of England to command at sea, and while the French now command on land, it is almost true the English command upon their own element, or, at all events, are mainly responsible for the operation in which they supply the principal force.

ER— THANKS, COLONEL!

When the United States came into the war they quickly added to our naval strength and have most generously and freely accepted the principle of more or less unified direction. Their naval aid will be more and more important and appreciated as time goes on and American shipyards pour out more of the stream of anti-submarine craft now under construction.

Have we appreciated, as highly as we should, the really wonderful sacrifice of self-esteem and national feeling that the United States has displayed in aligning herself under the English command at sea and the French on land? It is wonderful.

Here, for example, is the American army in France and yet there is no army. Divisions are handed over to be used as Gen. Foch pleases. We can learn from the communiques where some of these divisions are, and we note that they are divided and are acting on widely separated sectors.

New drafts come in as promised, to make up our weakened British divisions, and except the newest divisions under training, I doubt if Gen. Pershing has much left to command. He must be experiencing great difficulties in the administration and supplying of troops so much split up, and I think that the cheerful sacrifice of national sentiment which all this unselfishness entails almost exceeds the limits of anything that could have been expected from a young and proud nation like America. It is really very fine, indeed, it is magnificent.

We may also note that the American casualties are not published in England, though they are in the United States. This precludes our people from appreciating the fact that the Americans are paying their toll in blood in the war.

OUR PRESIDENT.

I put down the main credit for the really most unselfish and useful action of America, in a military sense, to President Wilson. He has a single-track mind without sidings, and he keeps the track toward his journey, and with utter disregard for other matters. The absorption of President Wilson in the big things of this war alone, and the idealism which inspires all his words and actions, I regard as the greatest moral and political force on the side of the grand alliance. A sense of realities he can obtain from those now with him who have gained experience of the camps and court in Europe, but his real strength is what is by some counted a weakness—his concentration upon great principles and high moral standards, to the exclusion of all subordinate matters which occupy smaller minds.

He may make mistakes, for all men do. He may be wrong about Japan. He may see liberty marching through Russia when it is only chaos. He may be misinformed about distant affairs. But his power of detachment and concentration of purpose on things that matter, make him a very real force, and not only a force but the earthly providence of our alliance and the chief master of its destinies.

After these nurses and the workers in supply-rooms and auxiliaries had marched past, Rear-Admiral Carry T. Grayson, the President's personal physician, advised him that after a long march and more than an hour spent standing to review the parade, he had better rest. Soon afterward the President entered his car and, driving up the avenue to Eightieth street, where the last of the marchers had not yet had a chance to fall in line, reviewed the parade from his machine.

On the way he passed ambulances and army transports, detachments of sailors and soldiers, Boy and Girl Scouts, and still more bands of women and girls. Several of these "companies," notwithstanding many hours of standing in the sun before the march began, were singing blithely as they strode briskly down the avenue.

Floats, showing model Red Cross workrooms, with women at the knitting machines or rolling bandages, brought cheers from the crowd. Another feature was a company of women workers who carried wands with socks which they had knitted drawn over the ends.

Brooklyn and Bronx had their processions and it was estimated that in each nearly 25,000 persons marched.

SACRAMENTO HAS PARADE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18. — The American Red Cross war fund drive was inaugurated here today with a parade in which women and girls predominated among the marchers. A Marine Crops band and a company of the "sea and land fighters" from Mare Island navy yard headed the parade.

A large company of Red Cross nurses and hundreds of mothers and wives were in the parade.

An aero squadron from Mather Field, near here, also participated. Gov. Stephens and Adjt.-Gen. Borree were among the marchers.

MADERA COUNTY FIRST OVER TOP.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MADERA, May 18.—Madera county exceeded its quota of $8000 in the Red Cross drive before the drive opened today, according to a telegram sent to President Wilson by the chairman of the Red Cross Fund Committee. The telegram was:

"Honorable Woodrow Wilson, President American Red Cross, Washington, D. C.:

"The county of Madera and city of Madera have exceeded their quota in the second Red Cross war fund drive today at noon. The people of Madera refuse to wait until after the drive opens to give their money and are only repeating their wonderful record in the Liberty Loan, when we were the first county in the United States to go 'over the top.' Our quota was $8000 and there is actually on hand now $8100, from 2410 subscribers.

"The county population is 11,000 and its area 1,500,000 acres.

SEND TROOPS ENOUGH TO WIN, PRESIDENT'S PLEA.

Wilson Introduced to Red Cross Audience as Spokesman of the World.

000 men in France. Why limit it to that number?

"Every ship shall go on every voyage with every man and all the supplies it can carry."

STAND BY RUSSIA.

The crowd arose when he said, "I am here to stand by Russia as well as France."

The President said he had tested the Teutonic nations and found them insincere.

For the first time in history, said the President, the world has seen an unselfish war.

"I cannot fight for a selfish purpose, but I am proud to fight for mankind," he said.

Nothing, said the President, in 100 years, has knitted the nation together as has the war.

"It also," said he, "is knitting the world together."

Against autocracy are lined up the free governments representing the greater part of the population of the civilized world, he said.

Illustrating how the war is knitting the world together, the President referred to the great number of Italians fighting to preserve Italy who have lived in America.

DUTY OF NATION.

The duty that faces the nation, said he, is for people to serve each other. No man, said he, should make a fortune out of the war. Such a fortune would be a badge of dishonor and would constitute a badge of dishonor to whoever such a fortune was transmitted.

Liberal giving to the Red Cross, the President said, is every man's duty.

"This is the war that will save the world. The war is being fought that the world may be a better place to live in," he added.

"In giving to the Red Cross a man is giving to himself."

One of the damning things against the Germans, he said, is that they have not respected the Red Cross.

The cross, he said, is an emblem of Christianity. The organization is aiding in bringing the American people together into one great intimate family.

Only where people are free do they realize their dependence upon one another, he said.

ENJOY OWN STORY.

The President told with evident enjoyment the story of the Indian who, when asked what the war was about, said it was to make "the whole damn world safe for the Democratic party."

The President concluded by declaring he summoned the American people to say how unanimously they are ready to sustain the hearts of the world by contributions to the Red Cross.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

The President's speech, in full, follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Fellow-countrymen: I should be very sorry to think that Mr. Davison in any degree curtailed his exceedingly interesting speech for fear that he was postponing mine, because I am sure you listened with the same intimate intent with which I listened to the extraordinarily vivid account he gave of the things which he had realized because he had come into contact with them on the other side of the waters.

"We compass them with our imagination; he compassed them in his personal experience, and I am not come here tonight to review for you the work of the Red Cross; I am not competent to do so because I have not had the time or the opportunity to follow it in detail. I have come here simply to say a few words to you as to what it all seems to me to mean, and it means a great deal.

"There are two duties with which we are face to face. The first duty is to win the war, and the second duty, that goes hand-in-hand with it, is to win it greatly and worthily, showing the real quality of our power not only, but the real quality of our purpose and of ourselves.

OUR FIRST DUTY.

"Of course, the first duty, the duty that we must keep in the foreground of our thought until it is accomplished, is to win the war. I have heard gentlemen recently say that we must get 5,000,000 men ready. Why limit it to 5,000,000?

"I have asked the Congress of the United States to name no limit because the Congress intends, I am sure, as we all intend, that every ship that can carry men or supplies shall go laden upon every voyage with every man and every supply she can carry.

"And, we are not to be diverted from the grim purpose of winning the war by any insincere approaches upon the subject of peace. I can say with a clear conscience that I have tested those intimations and have found them insincere. I now recognize them for what they are, an opportunity to have a free hand, particularly in the east, to carry out purposes of conquest and exploitation.

"Every proposal with regard to accommodation in the west, involves a reservation with regard to the east. Now, so far as I am concerned, I intend to stand by Russia as well as France."

"GOD BLESS YOU."

A voice from the audience interrupted with:

"God bless you."

"The helpless and the friendless ones that need friends and succor; and if any man in Germany thinks we are going to sacrifice anybody for our own sake, I tell them now they are mistaken.

"For the glory of this war, my fellow-citizens, in so far as we are concerned, is that it is, perhaps for the first time in history, an unselfish war. I could not be proud to fight for a selfish purpose, but I can be proud to fight for mankind. If they wish peace let them come forward through accredited representatives and lay their terms on the table. We have laid ours and they know what they are.

"But, behind all this grim purpose, my friends, lies the opportunity to demonstrate not only force which will be demonstrated to the utmost, but the opportunity to demonstrate character, and it is that opportunity that we have most conspicuously in the work of the Red Cross. Not that our men in arms do not represent our character, for they do, and it is a character which those who see and recognize, appreciate and admire. But their duty is the duty of force. The duty of the Red Cross is the duty of mercy and succor and friendship.

UNITES NATION.

"Have you formed a picture in your imagination of what this war is doing for us and for the world? In my own mind I am convinced that not a hundred years of peace could have knitted this nation together as this single year of war has knitted it together; and better even than that, if possible, it is knitting the world together.

"Look at the picture. In the center of the scene four nations engaged the world, and at every point of vantage showing that they are seeking selfish aggrandizement; and, against them, twenty-three governments representing the greater part of the population of the world drawn together into a new sense of community of interest, a new sense of community of purpose, a new sense of unity of life.

"The Secretary of War told me an interesting incident the other day. He said when he was in Italy a member of the Italian government was explaining to him the many reasons why Italy felt near to the United States.

" 'If you want to try an interesting experiment go up to any one of these troop trains and ask in English how many of them have been in America and see what happens.'

MANY FROM AMERICA.

"He tried the experiment. He went up to a troop train and said, 'How many of you boys have been in America?' and he said it seemed to him as if half of them sprang up: 'Me from San Francisco; me from New York; all over.'

"There was part of the heart of America in the Italian army. People that had been knitted to us by association, who knew us, who had lived amongst us, who had worked shoulder to shoulder with us, and now friends of America, were fighting for their native Italy.

"Friendship is the only cement that will ever hold the world together. And this intimate contact of the Red Cross with the peoples who are suffering the terrors and deprivations of this war is going to be one of the greatest instrumentalities of friendship that the world ever knew, and the center of the heart of it all, if we sustain it properly, will be this land that we so dearly love.

"My friends, a great day of duty has come, and duty finds a man's soul as no kind of work can ever find it.

DUTY OF ALL.

"May I say this? The duty that faces us all now is to serve one another, and no man can afford to make a fortune out of this war. There are men amongst us who have forgotten that, if they ever saw it. Some of you are old enough—I am old enough—to remember men who made fortunes out of the Civil War, and you know how they were regarded by their fellow-citizens. That was a war to save one country—this is a war to save the world.

"And your relation to the Red Cross is one of the relations which will relieve you of the stigma. You can't give anything to the government of the United States. It won't accept it. There is a law of Congress against accepting even services without pay. The only thing that the government will accept is a loan, and duties performed; but it is a great deal better to give than to lend or to pay, and your great channel for giving is the American Red Cross.

"Down in your hearts you can't take very much satisfaction, in the last analysis, in lending money to the government of the United States, because the interest which you draw will burn your pockets; it is a commercial transaction and some men have even dared to cavil at the rate of interest, not knowing the incidental commentary that reflects upon their attitudes.

"GIVE FROM SOUL."

"But when you give, something of your heart, something of your soul, something of yourself goes with the gift, particularly when it is given in such form that it never can come back by way of direct benefit to yourself. You know there is the old cynical definition of gratitude, as 'the lively expectation of favors to come.'

"Well, there is no expectation of favors to come in this kind of giving. These things are bestowed in order that the world may be a fitter place to live in; that men may be succored; that homes may be restored; that suffering may be relieved; that the face of the earth may have the blight of destruction taken away from it, and that wherever force goes there shall go mercy and helpfulness.

"And when you give, give absolutely all that you can spare, and don't consider yourself liberal in the giving. If you give with self-adulation, you are not giving at all—you are giving to your own vanity; but if you give until it hurts, then your heart blood goes into it.

"And think what we have here. We call it the American Red Cross, but it is merely a branch of the great international organization, which is not only recognized by the statutes of each of the civilized governments of the world, but it is recognized by international agreement and treaty as the recognized and accepted instrumentality of mercy and succor. And one of the deepest stains that rests upon the reputation of the German army is that they have not respected the Red Cross.

CHRISTIANITY'S EMBLEM.

"That goes to the root of the matter. They have not respected the instrumentality they themselves participated in setting up as the thing which no man was to touch, because it was the expression of common humanity. We are members, by being members of the American Red Cross, of a great fraternity and comradeship which extends all over the world, and this cross which these ladies bore today is an emblem of Christianity itself.

"It fills my imagination, ladies and gentlemen, to think of the women all over this country who are busy tonight and busy every night and every day doing the work of the Red Cross, busy with a great eagerness to find out the most serviceable thing to do, busy with forgetfulness of all the old frivolities of their social relationships, ready to curtail the duties of the household, in order that they may contribute to this common work that all their hearts are engaged in, and in doing which their hearts became acquainted with each other.

"When you think of this you realize how the people of the United States are being drawn together into a great intimate family whose heart is being used for the service of the soldiers not only but for the service of civilians where they suffer and are lost in a maze of distresses and distractions.

SERVANTS OF LIBERTY.

"And you have, then, this noble picture of justice and mercy as the two servants of liberty. For only where men are free do they think the thoughts of sympathy; only where they are free are they mutually helpful; only where they are free do they realize thier dependance upon one another and their comradeship in a common interest and common necessity.

"I heard a story told the other day that was ridiculous, but it is worth repeating, because it contains the germ of truth. An Indian was enlisted in the army. He returned to the reservation on a furlough. He was asked what he thought of it. He said: 'No much good; too much salute; not much shoot.' Then he was asked: 'Are you going back?' 'Yes.'

" 'Well, do you know what you are fighting for?'

" 'Yes, me know; fighting to make whole damn world Democratic party.'

"He had evidently misunderstood some innocent sentence of my own. But after all, although there is no party purpose in it, he got it right as far as the word 'party' to make the whole world democratic in the sense of community of interest and of purpose, and if you ladies and gentlemen could read some of the touching dispatches which come through official channels, for even through these official channels there come voices of humanity that are infinitely pathetic if you could catch some of those voices that speak the utter longing of oppressed and helpless peoples all over the world to hear something like the Battle Hymn of the Republic, to hear the feet of the great hosts of liberty going to set them free, to set their minds free, set their lives free, set their children free, you would know what comes into the heart of those who are trying to contribute all the brains and power they have to this great enterprise of liberty.

"I summon you to the comradeship; I summon you in this next week to say how much and how sincerely and how unanimously you sustain the heart of this world."

Just Once! Try Dodson's Liver Tone! Take No Calomel! Listen To Me!

If bilious, constipated, headachy or sick, I guarantee relief without taking dangerous calomel which sickens and salivates.

Stop using calomel! It makes you sick. Don't lose a day's work. If you feel lazy, sluggish, bilious or constipated, listen to me!

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are "all knocked-out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful tonight, and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning, I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep the entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

In the glorious work of the Red Cross, the women of the land have set the pace.

They have given up their sons, husbands and brothers, and have worked day and night for others, as well as for their own kin who are "over there" or in the camps.

Now we all have a broader outlook and are working for humanity.

The things that a short while ago seemed to be "sacrifice," have taken on a new aspect, and the giving of money, up to the full quota asked for the Red Cross, imposes no "sacrifice." It is a pleasure.

By following the pace the women have set, we have learned to be cheerful givers.

We hear that the women of Southern California have earned first place in Red Cross work among the cities of the Nation. Congratulations may not be in order, but such praiseworthy work is deserving of comment.

Certificates are not required in selling to licensed wholesalers, retailers or bakers, even though they use sugar in the manufacture of other products, because the use of sugar by such dealers will be controlled directly by license regulation.

Certificates are not required in sales to individual consumers, or in sales to unlicensed retailers of sugar not engaged in a manufacturing business.

ICE CREAM SAVED.

A telegram was received yesterday from the State Food Administration stating that, beginning tomorrow, sugar for water ices and sherbets will be prohibited. This action does not include ice cream, which has been placed on the essential list of food products in order that there may be a full consumption of milk and cream.

Certificates will be in seven denominations, namely, 50, 100, 500, 1000, 5000, 10,000 and 60,000-pound lots. The buyer must sign on the back of every certificate his name before using them. The certificate plan will be in effect at least until July 1. What action will be taken after that date will depend on the vessel tonnage procurable to move sugar from Cuba in July and August.

Every seller of sugar must cancel all certificates of sugar received and send them to the local Food Administration office within a month of receipt. Trading in and counterfeiting certificates will be carefully checked up and prosecutions will follow.

Any manufacturer of a less-essential product using sweetened condensed milk will not have charged against him the sugar contained in the milk. Contracts for the supply of army and navy cantonments, which require an additional amount of sugar and any increase in population must not be considered a reason for changing the rules or increasing the percentages allotted to any manufacturer.

HOME CANNERS EXEMPT.

Home canners who sell their preserves are not considered manufacturers, and do not come under, at present, the new certificate plan.

The idea which the Food Administration desires to work out is the conservation of sugar and to stop abnormal increases in the manufacture of soft drinks and confectionery. The object of the entire plan is that sugar be conserved in order to give all the sugar necessary to manufacturers using it in preserving the fruits of the coming harvests and at the same time not give to the man who has disobeyed the regulations an amount of sugar that would give him an advantage over his competitors.

speakers were Guerney

the Red Cross, and Os-
Mr. Lawler spoke most upon America's position and the causes which brought about her entry in the great conflict. Mr. Newlin gave some interesting details of the work of the Los Angeles chapter of the Red Cross.

He showed that whole Los Angeles chapter has received but $190,000 in the last four drives for the Red Cross, and it has expended almost $700,000 for material with which to work, and the equipment of two base hospitals.

He told of the great work being accomplished by the Red Cross shop and the salvage department, and said that while these had each originated in Los Angeles, both had been adopted nationally.

The Red Cross shops, at Eighth and Alvarado streets, said Mr. Newlin, require in all their departments about 300 people, whose services are donated, and in seven months they have turned in more than $87,000.

The salvage department in the last year has turned in to the chapter $30,000 derived from waste materials, and this has been used for surgical dressings, hospital garments, sweaters, etc. The chapter has provided 1,750,000 surgical dressings, 150,000 hospital garments and 1,000,000 knitted garments.

As to salaries, Mr. Newlin said that there were reports in circulation as to the large amount of money used in this way. He stated that the work of the chapter required about 1000 people, and that in the fifteen months of its activities it has administered more than $700,000 of cash and over $600,000 of products, with a salary roll of less than $500 a month—that these were salaries paid for services that could not be secured by donations.

Judge Fuller has been a subscriber to The Times ever since his arrival here and he is therefore as agile in mind as Silas Judd is in his legs. Judge Fuller proved the truth of this statement in his speech, which was a combination of eloquence and wit.

Speaking of the world war he said: "Germany has reintroduced from the dark ages poison gas and liquid fire to kill with torture; she has attacked hospitals, hospital ships, nurses, doctors, surgeons and wounded soldiers alike; she has burned undefended villages, churches and schools; she has murdered in cold blood in darkness of night, on stormy seas, noncombatants, passengers, women and children; she has persecuted, raped and abused her victims. But, my friends, as true as there is a God in heaven, history will repeat itself and American arms will crush the Kaiser, if it takes every drop of American blood and every dollar of American treasure to do it."

TOMATO GROWERS APPEAL TO MERRITT.

ASSERT THAT CALIFORNIA PACKING CORPORATION IS ACTING UNFAIRLY.

The California Tomato Growers' Association has filed a complaint with State Food Commissioner Merritt at San Francisco against the California Packing Corporation, charging the latter with violating certain Federal food regulations. It is alleged that the packing corporation has solicited members of the tomato growers' body, asking them to sign contracts for the delivery of their tomatoes during 1918, although they knew of prior contracts the growers had for the sale of their crops.

This, it is held, is in violation of a Federal food regulation, which states that "no licensee shall attempt a contract with any grower of food products for food covering which there is a contract in existence."

The Tomato Growers' Association asserts that the officers of the canning corporation "think they can destroy the tomato growers' body and then deal with the individual grower, giving him any price they see fit."

SCHUBERT CLUB TO GIVE "RAMONA."

TWO PERFORMANCES WILL BE STAGED AT SAN GABRIEL MISSION THIS WEEK.

The Schubert Club will produce at the San Gabriel Mission Playhouse, next Friday night and Saturday afternoon, the play founded on the story of Ramona. Among those taking part in the programme will be a male quartette, pupils of Mr. Constantino, from the California Temple of Arts. These singers come from various walks of life.

Keaumuku Lewis, tenor, a native Hawaiian, has recently returned to Los Angeles from Florida, where he had a position as soloist in one of the noted resorts. He will sing the incidental solo work. George Sailor also is the possessor of a fine tenor voice and has only shortly taken up his studies in the vocal field. He has aroused much interest in his work, and his friends predict a bright future for him.

Harry L. Porter, who has recently made his debut at San Diego, where he appeared on the programme with Mr. Constantino, both in solos and in the trio from "Faust," was a short time ago a machinist. Mr. Porter now has in his repertoire four grand operas and many individual solos. Both Mr. Porter and Mr. Lewis will appear in a concert for the benefit of the soldiers at Fort MacArthur on May 26.

MOOSE TREASURER HELD.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—Louis A. Eaton, secretary and treasurer of San Francisco lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, for the past eight years, was held today to answer to a charge of felony embezzlement, following the discovery of a $4100 shortage in the books of the order on examination by an accountant.

Walter McGovern, attorney for the lodge, who swore to the warrant for Eaton's arrest, asserted that Eaton confessed to officials of the order a few days before.

As War Aid.

CITY ATTORNEY FOR ECONOMY.

Returns from Conference on Our Improvements.

Sounds Note of Warning as to Expenditures.

Gives Assurance Los Angeles will be Patriotic.

City Attorney Albert Lee Stephens returned from San Francisco at noon yesterday, after a hurried conference with members of the State Railroad Commission and the subcommittee of the Capital Issues Committee regarding the proposed improvements in Los Angeles. No definite agreement was reached as to the Second-street tunnel, the paving of West First stree nor the opening of Broadway from Tenth to Pico streets and the opening of Hill street and other projects.

After he has compiled the data secured, the City Attorney will make a detailed report to the City Council and will also make recommendations. His report will be conservative and he will emphasize the facts as presented to him by the officials in the Bay City regarding the necessity to conserve in every way possible. He will also show the City Council that all unnecessary improvements must be abandoned and that only those improvements which it can be shown are imperative in order not to impede the normal growth of this city are to be allowed.

There was a note of warning sounded by the City Attorney regarding any lavish expenditures. He declared, however, that Los Angeles is not to be guided by the programme of any other municipality, but, rather, her patriotism will be the guide in all of her expenditures and that he will not recommend anything which in his opinion would in any way tend to impede the prosecution of the war.

THE POWER MATTER.

While outlining his report, Howard Robertson, president of the Board of Public Service Commissioners, listened attentively to every word. It was shown conclusively by the City Attorney that no money will be available for paralleling, nor for some of the improvements proposed by the bureau of power and light. No encouragement was given President Robertson whereby any of the proposed projects in connection with the local power war can be put over at this time.

James K. Lynch, vice-chairman of the subcommittee of the Capital Issues Committee, told the City Attorney that the principal bond houses of the United States will not consider any bonds that are not approved by the committee.

"Emphasis was laid on the fact that only necessary improvements will be considered favorably by the government," said City Attorney Stephens. "It also was plainly shown that only improvements in keeping with a state of war are to be sanctioned. It might mean, however, that the Southern Pacific might be taken off Alameda street now that the government has taken over the railroads and that new terminals may be ordered for Los Angeles.

PERRIN STILL SICK.

"When I endeavored to take up matters with the Capital Issues Committee I found that the chairman of the subcommittee, John Perrin, was still ill in the hospital.

"I, therefore, turned to James K. Lynch, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco and vice-chairman of the subcommittee of the Capital Issues Committee. Joseph Sartori, a member of the committee, was also there.

"These men told me the government is putting great stress on doing things now. They also said that unnecessary work positively will not be undertaken, adding that the big bonding establishments of this country will not purchase nor deal in bond issues that are not approved by the Capital Issues Committee at Washington.

SAN FRANCISCO CUT.

"One significant instance was pointed out to me whereby San Francisco had recommended an improvement of $3,000,000 for school bonds. The subcommittee cut this improvement to $1,500,000 and the Washington authorities cut this still further to $435,000. That was given as an instance of what we might expect when the people of Los Angeles decide to spend amounts which the government deems too great during this time of vast war expenditures.

"There is a possibility that the $160,000 for the proposed military road to the Los Angeles Harbor will be approved, but unless we show that the proposed improvements are a present necessity, we cannot get the appropriations approved. I showed the authorities the attitude of the people of Los Angeles on bond issues and the difficulty in getting petitions signed. They told me that paving has practically been cut out in the smaller cities. It was my pleasure to show them that Los Angeles is not measuring her patriotism on the basis of any other city's expenditures, but that we will go to the limit to help our nation in the successful conduct of this great war."

ASKS DAMAGES.

Caught and killed beneath a falling crane at the Torrance plant of the Llewellyn Iron Works, Mrs. Agnes McLain, the mother of Walter McLain, asks $25,000 damages in a suit against the works filed yesterday. The accident to Mr. McLain happened August 24, last.

Annexation Plan.

FORT MACARTHUR SOON MAY BE PART OF CITY.

PLANS for the annexation of approximately 2300 acres lying west of the present city limits, between Wilmington and White's Point, are now in the hands of the government and a bond issue is expected to be floated shortly for a water system and the territory taken into Los Angeles.

The land has a population of about 250 persons, who are almost all in favor of annexation, chiefly because of the poor water supply they are now getting. The entire district, which includes Fort MacArthur, the Dodson, Sepulveda and Burkhart ranches, will then secure an adequate supply of water.

It is estimated that the cost of water improvements in the new territory will amount to $100 an acre, or about $230,000 altogether. To meet this expense, a bond issue will be floated as soon as the consent of the government is secured. The northerly limits will be opposite E street, Wilmington, the west city limits to be extended to the Vanderlip ranch and the south city limits to extend to White's Point.

Tragic Sequel.

VON BACHELLE KILLS HIMSELF.

Alleged Insulter of the Flag Takes Poison.

Wife Divorced Day Before Finds Body.

Citizens had Threatened Tar and Feathers.

Richard von Bachelle, Hollywood druggist, divorced by his wife the day before and accused in court of making insulting remarks about the American flag, yesterday sought and found death as the way out of his matrimonial misfortunes and the stigma cast upon him in the eyes of the community. He drank a strong poison in his home at No. 1747 North Bronson avenue, and was found dead by his former wife, Mrs. Vera von Bachelle, less than an hour after threats against him were made by a number of persons at his place of business.

Von Bachelle did not leave a note nor any token by which to explain his act or tell of the causes that prompted it. The woman who but the day before was his wife, heard him remark that he intended to "end it all." An hour later she found the lifeless body stretched across the bed, with a bottle containing cyanide near by.

MEN ASK FOR HIM.

Yesterday morning, shortly after the drug store of which he was reported to be the owner, was opened, a group of citizens entered the place and asked for Von Bachelle. R. N. Islieb, who was in charge at the time, replied that the man was not in.

"He'd better not be in," one of the men in the group said, adding there was a coat of tar and feathers and a good thrashing in store for the alleged flag insulter, according to Mr. Islieb. The men did not leave their names, the clerk said.

"I asked them who they were, and they replied, 'We're American citizens.' I do not remember how many there were, but it must have been more than five," the clerk stated.

Immediately after the men left, Von Bachelle received a telephone call, presumably from his employee, the police say. Whether he received other messages, the officers did not learn. It was several minutes later that the druggist made his remark about ending it all.

"OUGHT TO BE SHOT."

In Superior Judge Jackson's court on Friday, Mrs. Von Bachelle, suing her husband for divorce, testified that her husband said, when the American flag was thrown on the screen in a moving-picture theater, "Why should I applaud every time that rag is shown?"

"If he said those things, he ought to be shot," Judge Jackson remarked when the testimony was introduced.

Mrs. Von Bachelle, who, pending the divorce proceedings, was occupying one-half of the house, was making preparations yesterday to move her belongings. At the time the man committed suicide, she was in the garden.

The body was removed to the parlors of J. D. Farris & Son.

SHOT BY OFFICERS AND BY OWN GUN.

MECHANIC ARRESTED, AFTER A BATTLE, ON FAILURE TO PROVIDE WARRANT.

Because he refused to surrender to deputy sheriffs, who attempted to take him into custody on a failure to provide warrant, John J. Lawson, a mechanic, was shot twice yesterday afternoon, once by the officers and once by his own gun, at No. 1313 Garfield avenue, South Pasadena.

Lawson was informed on Friday that Deputy Sheriffs Bright and Carson had a warrant for his arrest. He armed himself, the officers say, and threatened to shoot the first officer who tried to take him into custody. Bright and Carson called at his home at midnight Friday and the man fired twice at them.

The two men returned to the Sheriff's office for shotguns and reinforcements and then hurried back to Lawson's home. He had left. Late yesterday afternoon Lawson's employer telephoned the Sheriff's office that he had returned and Deputies Fox, Anderson, Sweesey and Couts went to South Pasadena and asked the man to surrender.

Lawson's reply was a bullet from his revolver. One of the deputies fired at the man's right arm with a shotgun. Lawson dropped his arm, and his gun fell to the ground beside his right foot, exploding and sending a bullet through the foot. The wounded man is now in the County Hospital.

Two years ago, when he was served with a similar warrant, charging non-support of his wife and children, Lawson fought desperately for half an hour with two deputies before he could be arrested.

RAGS AND TATTERS.

Hard Times Ball of City Hall War Savers is a Mighty Tacky-Looking Affair.

Three thousand people attended the hard-times ball given last night at Shrine Auditorium under the auspices of the War Savings Society of the employees of City Hall. All of the dancers wore rags and tatters and old clothes of every description, and all finally took part in a grand march past the judges who awarded prizes as follows: Men, first prize, John Fry; second, W. C. Boston; third, A. F. Schwartz; fourth, A. H. Thompson; fifth, S. Wolfe. Ladies, first, Mrs. Johnson; second, Miss Goldsmith; third, Mrs. Chrisman; Fourth, Mrs. Justice Frederickson, fifth, Mrs. Neighbor. The first prizes were $50 worth of Thrift Stamps, and other prizes smaller amounts in stamps. Councilman Ralph Criswell was chairman of the evening and Bert L. Farmer, president of the City Council, was floor manager assisted by the film stars, Wallace Reid and Billy Mason.

BIG ELIGIBLE LIST FOR POSTAL CLERKS.

The United States Civil Service Commission desires to call attention to the recent advertisements in certain local newspapers, indicating that examinations are to be held in the near future for women clerks in the Los Angeles postoffice.

These advertisements are misleading and untrue since no examinations are contemplated to be held for any such positions until next year. There is a large eligible list at the present time, from which such appointments as may be necessary can be made.

NEWPORT PLANS DRIVE.

Elaborate Programme Arranged for Red Cross Campaign Starting Tomorrow.

The city of Newport, Orange county, has arranged an elaborate programme for the Red Cross drive opening tomorrow. There will be flower booths at Balboa and Newport, accompanied by pleasure rides in a power launch around Newport Bay. This will be followed in the evening by a war picture to be shown at the Balboa Theater, when addresses will be made by J. Robinson Hall, an aviator who has seen service and won his laurels on the battle front of Flanders, and also by Harry William Elliott, an attorney of Los Angeles, who is assisting the Red Cross drive.

On Thursday night a meeting will be held, at which Rabbi Hecht of Los Angeles is scheduled to be the principal speaker.

PARADE AT SAN DIEGO.

Thousands of Soldiers and Sailors Take Part in Big Pageant for Red Cross.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, May 18.—Thousands of soldiers and sailors, Red Cross nurses in their snowy uniforms and blue capes lined with scarlet, and many civilians paraded today for the opening of the Red Cross drive in the greatest parade ever given here. Artillery, infantry, ammunition and sanitary trains, sailors and numerous floats of children, who are doing their bit for the Red Cross, drew repeated applause from the crowds that lined the sidewalks.

The big ball in Liberty Auditorium tonight was the first event the proceeds of which are devoted to the Red Cross drive. The great hall was packed and society women from San Diego, Coronado and all over the country acted as hostesses. Ted Shawn and Denishawn girls gave a beautiful dance, the last before Mr. Shawn leaves for the fourth officer's training school.

CHILD ON BICYCLE KILLED BY TRAIN.

While riding his bicycle last night, 5-year-old Earl Williams of No. 1673 East Thirty-seventh street swerved in front of a southbound Santa Ana train of the Pacific Electric at Thirty-eighth street and Long Beach boulevard and was instantly killed when the heavy cars crushed him. The remains were taken to Pierce Bros.' mortuary.

According to witnesses, little Earl attempted suddenly to cross the private way of the Pacific Electric, miscalculating the distance between himself and the heavy train, which was in charge of Motorman Graves and Conductor W. A. Wilson.

ACT TO CHECK TITLE SHARKS.

Unscrupulous Street Contractors Also Hit by the Works Board.

The Board of Public Works yesterday adopted a drastic plan for dealing with unscrupulous street contractors, bond brokers and tax title sharks who victimize small property owners in the collection of assessments. It was decided that contracts will be declared forfeited whenever such action is possible.

Mrs. Ellen McClay, a widow, complained that she had been sued for an assessment of $1.67. She did not object to paying that, but said costs of $35 had been added to the bill and that half a dozen other persons in her vicinity had the same complaint.

President Handley of the board said such practices must cease and unless they do the board will not grant another extension of time to a contractor who is guilty of taking advantage of the poor property owners.

B'NAI B'RITH LODGE TO BUY AMBULANCE.

BIG ENTERTAINMENT WILL BE GIVEN FOR BENEFIT OF THE RED CROSS.

Rapid progress is being made for the mammoth Red Cross entertainment to be given by Los Angeles Lodge, No. 487, I.O.B.B., and the Ladies' Auxiliary to purchase an ambulance. The committee who have charge are working day and night and are encouraged by the prompt response in the purchase of tickets. Maurice Salzman, the chairman, is visiting every leading Jewish organization nightly, outlining the object of the entertainment, and has enlisted the services of hundreds in the sale of tickets.

Mrs. J. D. Stodel, Miss Gussie Cohn, Mrs. W. W. Bearman and Mrs. H. H. Harris, who represent the Ladies' Auxiliary, have accomplished much in the distribution of tickets and the general arrangements. Applications to assist in the programme are coming in voluntarily from noted screen and stage artists, and a number of musical celebrities will participate. Among those who will appear are Leopold Godowsky, pianist; Gregor Cherniavsky, violin virtuoso; Ruth St. Denis and her company in dances; George Beban in an original sketch, and Toto, the clown.

It has been suggested that the boxes be auctioned off, in which case one of the stage's most accomplished actresses will be the auctioneer. A special meeting will be held tomorrow night in office 904 Van Nuys Building to complete the programme.

VETERAN VOLUNTEERS.

Suggestion that Older Men be Used Commended by Government Officer.

Maj. William N. Monroe, who founded Monrovia and was the guest of honor at that city's thirty-third birthday celebration, has received a letter from Maj.-Gen. J. McI. Carter, U.S.N.A., commending Maj. Monroe's suggestion that the government utilize the services of the older men of the country as guards of munitions plants, thus releasing men of draft age for service overseas. Maj. Munroe suggested authority to organize such a force, but Gen. Carter stated that there is no authority under law for organizing these men, but says the problem will soon be solved.

Maj. Monroe was a cavalry officer during the Civil War. Like other veterans he is anxious for service, and Gen. Carter's letter gives the suggestion that the government is considering ways and means of enabling such men to serve their country at home.

STEAMERS CALL HERE.

Japanese Vessels in South American Service will Stop at This Harbor.

D. F. Robertson, local agent of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, returned from San Francisco yesterday and announced that all steamers of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha on the South American service will call at Los Angeles Harbor en route to and from South America and Japan.

The steamship Seiyo Maru, which has been turned over to the United States government, has been replaced by the Nippon Maru, for many years operating from San Francisco to the Orient. The Nippon Maru will accommodate 105 first-class passengers and a large number of second and third-class passengers.

The following Angelenos have already booked to leave by the Nippon Maru on June 26, en route to Mexican, Panama, Peru and Chilean ports: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Raby, Mrs. G. E. Decker, Miss Louise Decker, Mrs. H. W. Burkhardt, Harold Burkhardt and others.

PATENT HAS HISTORY.

Document Filed Here Bears Signature of One of Nation's Earlier Presidents.

An interesting historical document was filed with County Recorder Logan yesterday. This was a patent on 160 acres of land near Chariton, Iowa, bearing the signature of Franklin Pierce, a former President of the United States. The patent was dated May 20, 1856.

The patent was filed for the purpose of making a record, in case it was lost on its trip back East. It was granted originally on an assignment from Andreas Louis Hellraig, a veteran of the Florida war. The document is owned by J. A. Sheepy of No. 3725 Princeton avenue.

For Defense.

TELLS NEED OF BEING READY.

Civil War Veteran Advocates Universal Training.

Flays Pacifists, Pro-Germans and Bolshivikists.

City Club Warned of Peril of Peace Propaganda.

Brig.-Gen. Charles A. Woodruff, U.S.A., retired, chief of commissary under former President Taft, who is now speaking under the auspices of the National Council of Defense, flayed the pacifists, Bolshevikists and pro-Germans in a forceful address before the City Club yesterday. Though well advanced in years, the Civil War veteran showed the fire and zeal of a much more youthful man and sent his words home with a punch as he declared in favor of universal military training.

Two of Gen. Woodruff's sons are now on the front in France—Col. Woodruff of the Tenth Engineers, U.S.A., who is in charge of 15,000 men in the forestry department of Northern France, and Lieut. Woodruff of the Twentieth Engineers. Brig.-Gen. Woodruff arrived in the Philippines on the same transport which carried Gen. Harrison Gray Otis away from the islands.

The speaker yesterday was introduced by Russell H. Ballard, vice-president of the local Council of Defense. He launched into his theme in a way that brought his hearers to their feet as he declared the "foundation of the National Council of Defense is patriotism without politics.

"We aim at universal military training and we also intend to try to abolish German propaganda against the United States. Sometimes I feel that many of our men and women refuse to believe the truths because they do not like them. Some of you are Masons and some of you Christians, but I tell you the truths of the awful German atrocities are as firmly established as the verities of Christianity and Masonry.

"The honor of our wives and mothers and daughters is at stake, and it behooves us to sacrifice our lives if necessary because we know what happened to the women of Belgium, Poland, France and Russia. The pacifists and pro-Germans also know this, yet they still insist on peace. The vanquished have no rights and the conquered, if conquered by the Germans, have nothing left but dishonor. Your property—yea, our virtue, will be handed over to the Huns if Germany is victorious, but she never can be if we rise in our might and fight with every drop of our blood.

"We want universal training that every man may be ready when the time comes and next year our Legislature will pass that bill for universal military training in our high schools, which is really aimed at the weak-kneed Socialistic boards of education in some of our cities where much work for our national defense must be done."

TO REVIVE INTEREST IN MOVING PICTURES.

BIG PRODUCERS MEET WITH THEATER OPERATORS TO DISCUSS CONDITIONS.

Testimony given yesterday at a meeting of the motion-picture exhibitors of Los Angeles that the business has dropped from 30 to 50 per cent. during the last two months, that children especially have not attended picture theaters, with the consequent drop in attendance of parents.

It was stated that this condition exists not only in Los Angeles, but is rapidly spreading all over the country. President MacDonald, of the Theater Owners' Association, declared thirty-two theaters have been closed in Los Angeles.

The meeting was attended by the big producers of the country. Jesse Lasky, Samuel Goldfish, Thomas Ince, Frank Garbutt, D. W. Griffith, (represented) all announced they are ready to help the local exhibitors in bringing back the interest that had been shown by children. Mr. Goldfish believed that the matter was more of a local condition at this time, and urged the exhibitors to come to the producers for any active assistance they might need.

Chairman J. A. Quinn of the Advertising and Publicity Committee, pointed to the fact that President Wilson has said: "The moving picture is helping win the war;" that public information comes to a great extent from the weekly news reels and gazettes of the various producers, that the Public Information Bureau in Washington relies heavily upon the moving-picture screens of the country to bring before the people the activities of the army and navy, etc.

Thomas Ince offered the plan of making special trailers for the houses, telling that the picture theater is the most wholesome amusement and relaxation, and urging the people not to forget the many things done by the producers, actors, picture theater owners and exhibitors in behalf of the Liberty Loan and Red Cross.

The will of Mary Crimmins, who died in this city on May 15, disposing of an estate valued at $150,000, and the petition of Dr. Ernest A. Bryant to be appointed administrator of the property, were filed in the Probate Court yesterday. The annual income of the real property is estimated at $15,000.

Philip P. Crimmins of County Kerry, Ireland, receives the real estate on Spring street; Mrs. Delia C. Leary of Newton, Mass., is bequeathed $300 a month during her lifetime and at her death the allowance goes to her daughter, Annie E. Leary; Annie E. Leary also receives the home place and all its contents; Mary K. Kenealy of Los Angeles is bequeathed $5000, and a similar amount is willed to the Los Angeles Orphan Asylum in memory of a brother, John Crimmins.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS MAY BE SENT HERE.

BILL IN SENATE WILL APPROPRIATE LARGE SUM FOR REHABILITATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 18.—Los Angeles and Southern California may be benefited greatly from a bill that will be introduced in the Senate by Senator Hoke Smith for the rehabilitation of American soldiers wounded in the present war. The bill carries heavy appropriations for the teaching and rebuilding of wounded Americans. If the bill becomes a law, as it probably will, as there seems to be no opposition, the wonderful climatic advantage of California may be utilized in this rebuilding process.

In Canada great success has resulted from this work and much of the physical rebuilding has been done in Vancouver and the health-giving sections of British Columbia. In fact, men who are fit to travel as soon as they reach Halifax are sent at once to the Far West. Some similar arrangements can be made for sending our soldiers to the sunshine and tonic air of Southern California and it is possible that the Federal Board for Vocational Instruction, which will have charge of this new work, can be induced to locate the agricultural, horticultural and manual work divisions of their educational system in Southern California.

The plan is this: When the wounded soldiers are first returned here, they are to be given a long vacation and then are to be fitted with artificial legs or arms, if needed, in these hospitals where the artificial aids are adjusted. The soldiers become expert in using their new arms or legs and then their education begins in their old occupations. The men are returned to it if they can possibly make a success of it, and, if not, they are taught a new occupation wherein they are certain to succeed. It is in this rebuilding process to make useful and happy citizens of blinded, shell-shocked and otherwise wounded American soldiers, that California, it is believed, can be paramount in usefulness. It is stated that if the claims of the Southland in agriculture, horticulture, climate and health-restoring qualities are forcefully presented to the vocational board, much of the proposed work can be concentrated south of the Tehachepi.

MRS. GARFIELD LEFT NO WILL AT DEATH.

ESTATE OF WIDOW OF PRESIDENT IS WORTH ABOUT TWELVE THOUSAND.

A petition was filed in the Probate Court yesterday by Joseph Rudolph, brother of Lucretia R. Garfield, widow of President Garfield, for appointment as administrator of the estate. No will was presented with the petition.

Mrs. Garfield died on March 13 at her home in Pasadena, where she had been living for a number of years. She was a former resident of Lake county, Ohio, and the value of her estate is said to be $12,000. Her holdings consist of one $1000 3½ per cent. government bond and what is known as lot No. 1 of the Buena Vista tract, in Pasadena.

The children of the decedent are given as Henry A. Garfield of Williamstown, Mass., at present National Fuel Administrator; James R. Garfield of Mentor, the old Garfield home in Lake county, Ohio, a former member of the Ohio Senate and of President Roosevelt's Cabinet; Mary Stanley Brown of Two Gardens, Long Island, N. Y.; Irving McDowell Garfield of Boston, where he is a practicing lawyer, and Abram G. Garfield, a lawyer of Cleveland, O.

As the widow of a President of the United States, Mrs. Garfield was in receipt of a Congressional pension of $5000 a year, but this is not an asset of her estate. She was the only widow in the United States in receipt of such a pension. Mrs. Grover Cleveland forfeiting her pension when she married several years ago.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER ON WAY BACK EAST.

SAWYER, WITH ALIASES HAD ADVENTURES ALSO AT LONG BEACH.

Ernest Sawyer, with alleged aliases of Grank Goodwin, William Ellis and Henry A. Eaves, who was ordered into the custody of Sheriff Cline, on an order made by Superior Judge Craig on Friday, when Sawyer could not be found, is now in the custody of Officer Mullen of the New York police force, where he is wanted on a charge of embezzling $3000, and they are speeding to the East.

Sawyer had been released on a bond of $2500 by Justice Summerfield, and immediately went to Long Beach, and his fountain pen being in good working order, soon had the town full of his checks, it is said. He bought an automobile, on which he paid $500, with one of these bits of paper, and contracted for a home, on which he paid $300 also with one of his well-known checks, it is alleged by officers. Sawyer then hired a lad to drive him to Bakersfield. When the two reached Saugus, the boy became suspicious. An investigation was instituted, and when Sawyer reached Bakersfield he was arrested.

Detective Mullen, who had reached Los Angeles, went there immediately, and yesterday passed through this city with his prisoner.

When Sawyer was arrested here on the charge of being a fugitive from justice on the New York warrant, he expressed a desire to be returned to the penitentiary at Lawton, Va., where he still owes twelve years' imprisonment, following his conviction for forgery, it is said.

According to the information given out by his attorney, Guy Eddy, Sawyer is wanted in a dozen cities on charges involving embezzlement, forgery, and other acts.

An investigation probably will be made as to the value of the bond furnished in behalf of Sawyer. The signatures to the undertaking were those of A. W. Cropp and A. J. Sneed.

REED-SUTHERLAND WEDDING SURPRISE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, May 18.—Coming as a distinct surprise was the wedding last evening of Miss Lucile Reed, daughter of the late A. L. Reed and Mrs. Anna Reed, to Sergt. William G. Sutherland, son of Mrs. D. G. Sutherland. Sergt. Sutherland has been in training in the Officers' Reserve Corps for some months, being stationed at Honolulu. His company has just reached San Francisco, en route to Camp Gordon, Ga., and Sergt. Sutherland obtained a leave of absence for ten days to visit here. The leave was hoped for, but almost unexpected, and the wedding was arranged quickly. It is the intention for Mrs. Sutherland to accompany her husband to Camp Gordon on the expiration of his leave.

The wedding was attended by about sixty of the close friends of the contracting parties. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. E. Day of Plymouth Congregational Church. The bride is a graduate of Pomona and of Columbia University, and has been for some years a teacher in the Whittier High School, severing her connection with the school yesterday. The Reeds are a pioneer family of this city, having come here in the early days with that other pioneer, Simon J. Murphy.

MESA LANDS ASSUME SHARE IN OBLIGATION.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EL CENTRO, May 18.—That the east mesa lands must assume their share of the indebtedness of Imperial Valley if they are included in the irrigation district and watered by the proposed all-American canal was stated definitely by members of the board in session here.

Mark Rose and other promoters of the settlement of the mesa lands insisted that it was unfair to place the tax upon them, but the alternative of remaining dry forced the projectors of the irrigation plan to accept the views of the directors. It is proposed also to tax the mesa lands for their share of the building of the canal, which may cost $16,000,000.

POMONA, May 18.—The meeting of the Los Angeles county Sunday-school convention, held in Pomona Thursday and Friday, was featured by a resolution, commending in strong terms the war work of President Wilson, the American Red Cross Society, the Y.M.C.A. and the Salvation Army, and the splendid accomplishments they were performing for the boys over there.

The meeting, which came to a close last night, was one of the greatest in the history of the organization. There were 971 delegates registered during the convention, representing all but two of the thirty-four districts in the county.

GRUESOME FIND CLEARS UP CLOUGH MYSTERY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, May 18.—Mystery surrounding the disappearance of W. O. Clough, one of the picturesque characters of this portion of the valley since pioneer days, has been solved by Dan Alles and his brother, Adam, who have returned from a trip into the upper Sierras, with the word that the bleached bones of the old miner were found lying beside a hidden trail, far above his cabin in the foothills. The remains were identified by certain articles of wearing apparel.

According to a calendar in Clough's cabin, which had been marked day by day, he left his home in November of last year. It is supposed he went too far for his strength and perished in the snows.

EL CENTRO, May 18.—Imperial county proposes to raise its Red Cross quota of $26,000 in one day, Monday. El Centro, Brawley, Calexico, Holtville and Imperial will stage special street entertainments this evening, and on Monday citizens committees will comb the valley, calling upon all men with an income for at least $5 each.

In El Centro, the city firemen and lodge of Elks will have charge of a "forty-nine camp," which will feature all sorts of gambling games, with "near beer" on ice as the drink of the evening. A street dance will conclude the evening's fun.

CANTU CASTOR BEANS FOR LIBERTY MOTORS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CALEXICO, May 18.—Gov. Esteban Cantu, ruler of the northern district of Lower California, will help produce castor oil for United States Liberty motors. He has signed a contract with the California Castor Bean Association to grow twenty-five acres of the beans on his ranch below the international line. William P. Hall, valley representative of the association, secured the signature of Gov. Cantu.

Aside from a desire to increase America's stock of lubricating oil—for the Governor is decidedly not pro-German—he believes that a new industry may be developed in his domain. He has agreed to sell the harvest of beans on the twenty acres to the association.

TRAINLOAD OF LAMBS SENT FROM IMPERIAL.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EL CENTRO, May 18.—What is probably the first trainload of lambs sent from the Imperial Valley to Kansas City moved out of this city this week. The lambs were sent eastward instead of westward to take advantage of a better market.

There were 3600 lambs, average age, six months, average weight seventy-five pounds, in twenty-four cars; value about $60,000. The owners of the lambs, mostly East Side farmers, expect to get between 20 and 21 cents per pound for them. R. E. Baker, J. H. Shaw and J. Harris, all of Holtville, accompanied the lambs.

OFFICE OF CONSTABLE MUCHLY-SOUGHT PLACE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FERNANDO, May 18.—By unanimous vote the City Council has recommended A. C. Patton, the man who passed the highest of any candidate in the civil service examination for the job, for appointment as Constable.

A petition is being circulated by prominent citizens asking the appointment of Frank Holliday for the position, and J. E. Street, the present Marshal, who did not take the civil service examination, is asking in another petition to be retained as Marshal.

Sheriff Cline is said to have been advised by the District Attorney that the combining of the offices of Constable and Marshal is unconstitutional.

SEED FOR 30 ACRES; PLANT FOR RED CROSS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CALIPATRIA, May 18.—W. L. Stites has opened up another practical source of revenue for the Calipatria Red Cross. He has donated two sacks of prime milo maize seed. This seed will be put in the ground by ranchers, and the crop, in turn, donated to the Red Cross. It is believed that the seed will sow thirty acres, which may net the Red Cross $2000 from two sacks of seed and the labor of patriotic farmers.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, May 18. — Clarence Stem, son of Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Stem, who were connected with the Ventura Methodist Episcopal Church until recently, died at the naval hospital in Boston a few days ago.

At the time of his enlistment young Stem was a student at the University of California, being one of the first to answer the call and the fifth from this county to yield his life for his country. Pneumonia, following a previous operation, was the cause of death.

A TOUCH OF SPANISH.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, May 18.—California supervisors who will be entertained in Orange county next Friday will be given a touch of Spanish life as it was in the early days of California and many of them will perhaps attend a Spanish barbecue for the first time. Two fine fat steers will be barbecued under direction of John Forster of San Juan Capistrano and there will be real "hot stuff" dishes, but the serving of tortillas as first planned cannot be done under present food rules, so this feature had to be abandoned.

GROWING CASTOR BEANS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CALIPATRIA, May 18.—Harry H. Clark, chairman of the Imperial Valley Committee on Castor Bean Growing, believes that there will be 3500 acres devoted to raising castor beans in the valley this year. He is making preparations for the growing of a vast acreage near this city. The farmers near Calipatria are going to be practical patriots and try out the beans. It is believed they will grow to perfection in the northern section of the valley.

GALA MILITARY DAY AT POMONA COLLEGE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CLAREMONT (Cal.) May 18.—The long-expected inspection of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Pomona College has taken place and the report of the inspecting officer has been very gratifying to the college authorities. Uniforms have come for most of the men and the two companies of the R.O.T.C. at the college entertained yesterday squads from twelve high schools scattered throughout Southern California, one squad coming from as far as Santa Barbara.

The competition was the occasion for a military gala day with patriotic rallies and discussions upon the various work of the high schools and of high school students as that work bears upon the war. These discussions were lead by Principal C. A. Hollingshead of Santa Barbara High School, Principal Merton E. Hill of Chaffey Union High School, Ontario, and Mr. Edward Shattuck, president of the student body of the Los Angeles High School. There was also an interscholastic declamation contest in which twenty-one high schools were represented.

The winners of the squad competition in class A represented Hollywood High School. The winners of the squad competition in class B represented South Pasadena High School. Individual honors in class A went to Cadet Major William Roper, from Hollywood High School, and Dale Smith, from Santa Barbara High School. The winners of the declamation contest were Carroll Nye from Covina High School, first place; E. Durwood Baker, from Citrus Union High School, second place, and Clarence Ralston, from Glendale High School, third place.

The R.O.T.C. drill followed the contests.

ONE SON DEAD, TWO MORE SERIOUSLY ILL; POISONED.

Family of Rev. Rudnick, Patriotic League Worker, Stricken.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, May 18.—Has the loyalty of the Rev. E. J. Rudnick, local Lutheran pastor and one of the leaders of the Orange County Lutheran Patriotic League, brought down upon him the enmity of pro-Germans, who stop not even at child murder? That is the question people are asking here tonight as the result of the death of Rev. Rudnick's son, Robert, aged 3, and the critical illness of his two other sons, Arthur, aged 2, and Martin, aged 5, from an acute poisoning of a mysterious character, thought to be arsenic.

The three boys have been ill several days, and at first it was thought they had eaten too heartily of loquats. A post-mortem examination, however, on the body of Robert, who died yesterday, disclosed the fact that the intestines and bowels were in a "terrible condition," according to the physician, from the worst case of poisoning he had ever seen. The effects indicated arsenic poisoning.

The children did not suffer great pain, but lay in a sort of stupor. Rev. and Mrs. Rudnick are almost prostrated.

Little Arthur was reported near death today, but the older boy was said to be slightly improved.

SELF-DEFENSE IS THE YOUNG SLAYER'S PLEA.

EVIDENCE INDICATES COCHRANE THREATENED THE LIFE OF TAYLOR.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FILLMORE, May 18.—William Taylor, the 17-year-old boy who is charged with the murder of James Cochrane at a mountain cabin in the Sespe, was certified to the Juvenile Court at his preliminary hearing yesterday, on motion of his attorneys.

In his statement of the case Attorney Earl Gardner indicated that self-defense will be Taylor's plea, by saying that, while the report was spread broadcast through the county upon the return of the officers from the Hot Springs that the defendant had confessed to the murder, the evidence shows that he had killed the deceased after the deceased had made threats against the defendant's life, and that the defendant had merely "beat him to it."

The boy's mother testified to his age, in support of the motion to transfer the matter to the juvenile court.

Fisher of Los Angeles. High School boys, who have decorated the hall for the occasion, will act as ushers. The programme will close with the Salute to the Flag.

BELGIAN DESCRIBES BRUSSELS INVASION.

VIOLINIST, WITNESS TO INFLUX OF TEUTONS, TELLS GRAPHIC STORY.

People who have not actually seen the devastation wrought by the heavy German guns among the cities and towns of Belgium, can scarcely realize the horrors of the Hun invasion, acording to M. and Mme. Edward Deru, who were in Brussels at the time of the German invasion and witnessed the capture of that city. They are visitors at the Engstrum, this city.

"We did not believe they would get there and up to the last the newspapers were reassuring; and then one afternoon we went out to buy a late paper and there, in the Rue de la Loi were masses of every description of vehicles laden with refugees—women, children, old men, carrying whatever they could snatch up from the ruins of their homes," said M. Deru. "The women were crying silently and hopelessly, for they had fled from Louvain, and Louvain was in flames. Our hearts sank, and we went home.

"We never shall forget the day the Germans entered the city. Not a person was on the streets. All the blinds were pulled down at the windows. There were no lights, no noise; it was a city of the dead. Long before the German troops were in sight we could hear them coming. Faintly at first the sound of a great Maenner choir singing 'Die Wacht am Rhein' was heard through the streets. We listened breathlessly and the song grew stronger; never if I live to be a hundred shall I forget the sound of those voices. Then came the tread of marching feet and the crunch of gravel and the heavy wheeled ammunition trains came within sound. Finally they bore into view, the first Uhlans with their flag-decked lances barely passing until the infantry men arrived in long lines singing as they marched, their uniforms gray and somber in their severity, gaining an added touch of somberness from the dust, which turned the marching men into gray specters."

MUCH SPENT IN SUGAR MAKING.

Ten Million Dollars Invested in Philippines by Americans.

P. J. Harwood, superintendent of the Commercial Pacific Cable Company of Manila, who is spending a month's vacation in Southern California, said last night at the Clark Hotel that $10,000,000 of American capital had been invested in the Philippine sugar industry within the last year. Lack of shipping has caused thousands of barrels to be stored in Manila but that the government was still urging the production of sugar there.

ENEMY ACTIVE ALONG BORDER.

German Movements in Mexico are Closely Watched.

Collector Elliott Returns from Ten Days' Trip There.

Tells of Conditions Along the International Line.

German activity on the Mexican border is becoming increasingly evident, said John B. Elliott, Collector of Customs, who returned to his offices in the Federal Building yesterday, after a ten-days' inspection tour along the border.

While on the border Mr. Elliott caused the arrest of H. Kiffle, a naturalized German from New York City, who was lodged in jail at San Diego on a charge of being a slacker. He is also under suspicion as a carrier of information from German agents in this country to "spy headquarters" in Mexico. He had crossed the line once and returned before being taken into custody.

Kiffle admitted to the arresting officers that he was a slacker. When arrested he had $800 in gold on his person, which he intended taking across the line. He served four years in the United States Army, and is well informed on American army matters, Mr. Elliott said. He is held under $2000 bail.

SLACKER COLONIES.

That slackers bearing prominent California names are among those now making up small colonies of Americans in Lower California was the intimation of Mr. Elliott.

The slacker question is now occupying the attention of government officials along the border. Within the past several days several arrests have been made of slackers attempting to cross into Mexico. With a view to curbing Teuton activities, the customs agents are working together with the army and navy intelligence bureaus.

Difficulty is being encountered in preventing military secrets and other information from getting over the line where the Germans are awaiting it with avidity.

"Five thousand people cross the border daily in both directions," Mr. Elliott stated. "One may well imagine the difficulty of searching methodically such a large number.

OFFICIALS WATCHFUL.

"The officials are doing magnificent work, however. This is testified to by the fact that smuggling across the line has practically ceased."

Mr. Elliott held a series of conferences with officials of the army, the immigration service and the Department of Justice, the outcome of which, he said, he was not permitted to disclose, but which is believed to have a bearing on German operations along the border.

The collector, much to his amusement, was "placed under arrest" for five minutes by a husky United States trooper who failed to identify him.

"It was a funny situation while it lasted," he said. "It is a good illustration of the competent manner in which the border is being watched. The soldier took me for a slacker, and when he was informed of my real status he released me at once with apologies."

MAY GET GUARDIAN.

Secretary of Lunacy Commission Asks for Appointment of Some One to Look After Woman.

A petition for the appointment of a guardian for the person and property of Mary Gault Sheedy, was filed in the Probate Court, yesterday. Mrs. Sheedy is held in the psycopathic ward at the County Hospital, pending an investigation.

It is alleged that Mrs. Sheedy applied to the county authorities for assistance, saying that if she was furnished a ticket to Kansas City, she could make her own way. Authority was given to purchase her a ticket, when it was discovered that she had $2300 in cash, and deeds to property said to be worth $10,000. Sherman Smith, secretary of the Lunacy Commission, made the application for the guardianship.

DE HOOG RESENTENCED.

Superior Judge Craig yesterday resentenced Roy de Hoog, one of the Westlake Home Savings Bank robbers, to twenty years in San Quentin. De Hoog had been previously sentenced under the indeterminate prison law that has since been declared by the District Court of the First Circuit to apply only to crimes committed since the passage of the law.

GOES TO PRISON.

Dr. L. C. Wilcoxon was taken north last night to San Quentin, where he will serve two years for the crime of forgery, following his conviction in Judge Houser's court. The charge against Wilcoxon was that he had passed a forged deed upon A. R. Eastman, covering property owned by Otis Lish.

Mrs. Dunnagan's Baby Has Thick Hair Now Thanks to Cuticura

"Our baby had skin trouble that broke out all over her head, and then on her face and body. It commenced in red spots that developed into white-headed pimples. These itched and burned so that she could not sleep, and I had to sit up at night and rub her. She had scarcely any hair.

"Then I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They were so beneficial that I bought Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and before they were gone, she was healed. She has a thick head of hair now, and her skin is in fine shape." (Signed) Mrs. Bessie Dunnagan, Arlington, Colorado, July 28, 1917.

A GREASY, PIMPLY SKIN
COATED TONGUE AND FOUL BREATH.

Poisons in the blood, accummulated through the winter months should be promptly driven out by taking sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses, but it is so nauseating! Well then, just get a tube of Sulpherb Tablets and they will do the work pleasantly. They are made of sulphur, cream of tartar and herbs—sugar-coated tablets. Stomach, liver, bowels and blood are all benefited by their occasional use. Greasy skin, pimples, coated tongue and foul breath tell you if your blood is bad. Mrs. B. Clarke, 905 Main St., Buffalo, writes: "I have been using your Sulpherb Tablets and like them very, very, much." Sold by all druggists. Don't accept ordinary "sulphur" tablets and be nauseated and disappointed. For sale by The Owl Drug Co.'s stores and all other druggists.

PLANS TO DESCRIBE THE STATE IN MUSIC.

PAULIST CHORISTERS PREPARE TO PRESENT NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT.

Father Finn, director of the Paulist Choristers, will inaugurate a novel idea in music this evening when the final concert of the Paulist Choristers will be given in Shrine Auditorium. He will attempt to interpret in music the physical impressions he has received of California. Father Finn describes the idea as an effort to convey by the medium of music, impressions usually received through the eye.

"For some time I have described in music my impressions of different peoples," he said. "But this will be my first attempt to describe the climate, the flora and fauna of a country. California lends itself wonderfully to the descriptive power of music. I will prelude my effort with a short explanatory talk on the subject, yet, I am sure that I will be able to convince my audience of my meaning of the music itself. The music I shall play will be entirely extemporaneous and will be a part of the programme."

Father Finn, in explaining the work of the Choristers, said that every penny of the proceeds of the concerts was turned over to French Ambassador Jusserand, for distribution among the suffering civilian population of France.

"Today will be the sixth anniversary of the day the Paulist Choristers sang in the Notre Dame cathedral in Paris, which was recently shelled by the German's super-gun," Father Finn said. "In the morning we will sing the Pentecostal mass at 10:30 o'clock in the Franciscan church here, the same as we sang it six years ago in Paris."

en Miles of Patriots in Line Stir Watching Thousands with War-Relief Appeal that Cannot and will not be Denied Our Soldiers in France.

USHED, indeed, must be the t and dull the sympathies the man, woman or child essed the great Red Cross of yesterday afternoon and feel the longing to help in t work at hand. There were to the intellect and to the sympathies; there were cold f war, presented in striking and there were pictures of humanitarian work of the Red Cross in its efforts human suffering and dis-. There was the appeal of , and the urge of unity of against a common foe. ry bodies—men of the pres- and men who have car- in the battles of the past, under Old Glory—gave a martial air to the entire affair. Then came the semi-military and civic bodies; the floats and other vehicles, all massed in this one parade for the purpose of stirring the public conscience to the necessity of each individual doing his or her best in the effort to raise the desired second Red Cross war fund. Music played its important part, and bands sounded, all along the line of march, the inspiring airs of patriotism. From "Over There" to "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner," the selections ranged. The music was highly effective in its appeal to the spectators. And over all was the rapport of the red and white and blue of the American flag. The parade was seven miles long, and there were nearly 10,000 persons in line. Nearly ten times that number saw it pass.

WOMEN PREDOMINANT.

But pervading all was the great influence of womanhood. Never in Los Angeles has there been a parade where its womanhood took such a conspicuous part. The women were predominant, in their garb of the Red Cross nurses and its various avenues of activity. Everywhere was to be seen the crimson badge of the Red Cross, bearing its story of merciful succor to the men on the field of battle and the women and children, victims of war's ravages. Its constant appeal was one that cannot fail to make a profound impression on this community, and that should help effectively to loosen tightened pursestrings.

Yesterday's parade was immense in its proportions, spectacular in its composition, and deeply effective in its purposes. Thousands of people lined the streets, cheered the soldiers and sailors and the veterans of past wars, and then uncovered as the color-bearers proudly passed along with the emblem of liberty. The affair was a good augury for the success of the second Red Cross war fund drive, which will officially open tomorrow morning.

Los Angeles is given to enjoying parades. It enjoyed the one of yesterday; but also took in the deeper significance of this spectacular event. Los Angeles, collectively and individually, is ready for the big drive. Proud of its record in the third Liberty Loan campaign, this city stands forth alert and ready to do its full duty in the present call. The apportionment for Los Angeles is $750,000 of the $100,000,000 which America is to raise for the second Red Cross war fund. Campaign managers hope that Los Angeles will again go far over the top, and place to its credit subscriptions that will total fully $1,000,000.

BOMBS SIGNAL START.

Sharply at 1 o'clock four aerial bombs were fired over the city as an airplane from Fort MacArthur majestically wended its way over the huge crowds.

Headed by an escort of mounted police the line of white and khaki clad figures, carrying guns, national emblems and pennons of the Red Cross of Mercy, swung from Hope street east to Broadway.

Immediately following the police came the Camp Kearny Band of ninety pieces under the command of Capt. S. S. Boothe. Police, city and county officials 300 strong were next in line.

Under the command of Col. J. W. C. Abbott two battalions of soldiers from Fort MacArthur followed, swinging in trim military step to the martial air furnished by the Fort MacArthur Band. Ambulances from the Hospital Corps, followed by the Submarine Base Band, came next with five companies of sailors from the Submarine Base and naval training station at San Pedro completing the contingent of military forces of Uncle Sam.

Interested throughout the long line of marching figures came Boy Scouts, with band and bugle corps. Trim youthful figures of the high school cadets of Los Angeles city, unit after unit.

MILITARY DIVISIONS.

Throughout the entire parade the military atmosphere was present. Three soldiers who fought in the Franco-Prussian War against the same tyranny which is now trying to dominate the world, escorted a standard of French and American

TO THE CITIZENS OF LOS ANGELES:

YOUR attention is requested to the Second Red Cross War Fund drive which will be held in Los Angeles, May 20 to 27.

It is presumed you are familiar with the objects and accomplishments of Red Cross, "the Greatest Mother in the World." We have enlisted for this campaign about 8000 workers, all of whom are giving their time for this campaign without any compensation, except the compensation that goes to a red-blooded patriotic American of having done something of real service to his country.

The men and women composing our campaign organization represent every walk in life, and they are entitled to a respectful hearing from the citizens of Los Angeles, and we ask that when they call, you drop whatever may be engaging your attention and make your subscription, or definitely inform them that you cannot, or do not care to subscribe, to the end their time may be conserved and not wasted in waiting for your convenience.

Remember each one of these campaigners is a representative of our soldiers who have gone to the front to defend our country. They are giving of their time and money, and all they ask of you is your money. Many of the members of this committee represent an earning ability of $100 or more per day, and the average for the entire committee is easily over $5 per day. Consequently the time donated by these workers represents at least $45,000 per day, or $315,000 for the week. They have a lot to do, and you are most earnestly requested to help them accomplish the results desired by not wasting their time.

Give until you smile.

Give until you have the consciousness of having done your part in proportion to your means. You will smile with self-satisfaction when you have done what you ought to do.

HARRY M. HALDEMAN,
Chairman Campaign Committee.

"Give until you smile."

This is the official slogan for the second Red Cross War Fund campaign, which is to begin its week's activities tomorrow morning. The generous spirit of citizens of the Southland it to be put to the test. Every community of Southern California will be expected to do not only its bit, but its best, in support of this great humanitarian work. The money donated to the second Red Cross War Fund is to be used solely for war relief work.

The allotment for Los Angeles has been placed at $750,000. It is the expectation of the campaign organization that Los Angeles will come in at the finish of this seven days' effort with a record of contributions totaling fully $1,000,000. California altogether is expected to raise $3,500,000 and Arizona $150,000.

The machinery for the campaign is complete in every detail. The workers are fully instructed; the work has been carefully mapped out; each precinct has been card-indexed, and in a most systematic manner, the big campaign will open tomorrow morning.

IN CHURCHES TODAY.

Today special impetus will be given to the cause by sermons and addresses in many of the Los Angeles churches. The Ministerial Union has decided that no Red Cross subscriptions will be taken at the church services, on account of the difficulty at these times of giving official receipts; but the churches are in most hearty accord with the work, and many ardent and heart-stirring messages on the work of the Red Cross will be given to the people of Los Angeles today.

Contributions may be made in cash, direct, or in pledges on which the payments will mature on July 1, August 1, September 1 and October 1. Liberty Bonds or matured Liberty Bond interest coupons will be accepted at par as contributions, or in payment of Red Cross pledges. All check donations should be made payable to the American Red Cross Second War Fund.

How will the money contributed be used? This is a natural question to arise in the mind of the prospective contributor. It is explicitly announced that the entire fund will be used solely for war relief work. Just how this may be apportioned may be judged by a review of the distribution of the first Red Cross War Fund.

FIRST FUND'S USE.

Here is how it went:

Relief work in France, $20,936,103.04; in Belgium, $2,086,131; in Italy, $3,588,826; in Russia, $1,242,845.07; in Rumania, $2,676,368.76; in Serbia, $875,180.76; in Great Britain, $1,8[illegible]5,750.75; in other foreign countries, $3,576,300; for American prisoners in Germany, $343,304; in the United States, $8,589,899.27; restricted as to use by donor, $2,520,409.57; working capital for the purchase of supplies for resales to chapters or for shipment

TRAVELING IN WAR TIME LIKE TAKING REST CURE.

It's Composed of Nine Parts Waiting and One Getting There—Transportation Rules Rigid.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent of The Times.

PARIS, May 1.—I have found a sure way in which to soothe the savage breast which pines for perpetual action. Simply travel in war time. It is the nearest thing to perpetual inaction yet discovered, and as a panacea for nervousness or restlessness is better than a sanatorium.

It is composed of nine parts waiting to get to a certain point, and one part actually going there.

If you are one of those fiery individuals who cannot endure idleness, chafe at the bit when the doctor advises you to take a short siesta after your noon meal, and go rushing through life with distended nostrils and flashing eyeballs, the best way to calm yourself is to put the extra shirt in your suit case and go on a long journey into foreign lands, while the German heathen still rages and the other countries are too busy fighting him to monkey much with the stranger within their gates.

Inside of a month you will be so well trained and broken that you will stand in one spot for days at a time without hitching.

NO LONGER RESTLESS.

Most of my life I have been more restless than a fox terrier hunting for a mouse. It was agony to sit through a sermon, while the intermission at the playhouse always was welcome, acting as a sort of safety valve for pent-up activity and providing opportunity to shake a leg. I esteemed chairs and cosy corners as suitable spots for those in whom the vital spark had burned low. Count that day lost which was not passed under high pressure and with both feet on the loud pedal.

Now all this is changed. I am now so well domesticated that I am thinking about taking up knitting. Since leaving Los Angeles three months ago the figures show that I have put in 1296 hours waiting. Think of it, 1296 precious hours plucked right out of the prime of life, 77,560 golden minutes gone to the demnition bow-wows.

Part of this time has been passed in gloomy hotel lobbies, where the lounge lizard has his habitation and the society bud preens her plumes; in clammy depots, in chilly steamboat piers at points of debarkation, or in the underheated waiting-room of some consulate, where the festive peasant and blithesome alien exude bad breath in seven different languages.

LESSONS IN WAITING.

I have waited for liners to arrive and to depart, for trains that never came and never went; waited to get out of sight of land so as to be on my way, and waited for the sight of it so as to get there, and waited for officials of high and low degree to attend to the cases of 500 other persons who happened to be standing just in front of me.

I have cooled my heels so persistently that they are now refrigerated and without any sense of feeling. Human warmth has departed out of my hoofs.

For the first couple of weeks a man will fume and fret and work himself into a lather. Then gradually he begins to become reconciled. He soon learns that haste makes waste, and there is no use trying to rush the governments who are at war. Trying to crowd things only gums up the works. One slip will set him back a month. I met one traveler who had been held up six weeks in Italy because, in having his passport vised, he had "cut one of the corners," so to speak. One little detail had been overlooked. One newspaper man here, having considerable spare time on his hands, enlisted with the Red Cross, figuring that he could be of some assistance occasionally. He received a wire from his paper ordering him to England immediately to cover an important event. To his horror he learned all too late that Red Cross members must give forty days' notice before leaving the country. All the pleading and wire-pulling in the world couldn't extricate him from the red tape in which he had unconsciously enmeshed himself.

NECESSARY RULES.

Rules and regulations as unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians are now in force, and properly so. The only surprise to me is that the governments tolerate as much traveling as is now permitted. Every person adds to the burden of their transportation problems. The military comes first, both on rail and on water. Civilians must bide their time, and they acquire this habit in a surprisingly short time.

Personally, I have found the officials of all the countries visited both courteous and obliging. They attend to matters with all the dispatch possible under war-time pressure and the added necessity of proceeding with caution. The German spy is still very much abroad in the world, and resorts to every subterfuge from actually donning a uniform to enrolling with the Y.M. C.A. and kindred organizations.

LEAVE IT TO NATURE.

The man who takes a running start for France expecting to land there in about ten days is almost sure to skid. He will find himself time and again on a siding while the limited goes by on the main track, figuratively speaking.

Inside of a fortnight it begins to dawn on you how the game is played, and, picking out the softest chair in the hotel, you lie back and decide to let nature take its course.

In my own case it has wrought a wonderful change, and probably added a good many years to my life, which will be devoted to the upbuilding of the community in a quiet, unobtrusive sort of way.

Outwardly, I show no more animation than a sphinx. Inwardly I am as calm as a sylvan scene along about sunset. I can sit for hours in the hotel lobby and stare vacantly into space without so much as twitching an eyelid. I am the only living human cucumber.

ON THE WAY to BERLIN
by
Harry A. Williams

PARIS, May 2.—There are three features to the bombardment of Paris with long-range guns—its brutality, its ineffectiveness from a military standpoint, and its childishness. All are familiar with its brutal side; the casualties which it has caused among women, children and aged men with whom Paris is chiefly populated at the present time.

In its other phase it strikes me as on the same plane as an overgrown boy hiding in an alley and heaving rocks over the fence at little girls playing at a tea party on the lawn. It is an act unworthy of any grown man, let alone the ruler of a nation.

When the Kaiser decided to play this prank on an unoffending neighboring city, he probably figured that he was playing a dramatic role in his part as war lord, and doing something very terrifying. It is true that women and the immature have been frightened, while the aged have suffered nervous shocks, but I do not think that any normal man in the vigor of health has experienced fear or dread.

In fact, Paris on the whole is greatly bored with the Kaiser's tiresome pranks. Time and again I have heard shells explode and noticed that those in the hotel lobby would not even look up from their reading, nor those on the streets quicken their pace or seek shelter.

Sometimes I think that the Kaiser is an ordinary lunatic, and again merely an overgrown child who needs a good paddling. Some day a real man will lay Wilhelm across his knee and apply a good thick board to his skinny rump.

Nothing New About It.

Lacking the finer dramatic instinct, the Germans opined that they were doing something very theatric when they projected these guns on an unsuspecting public—that Paris would be prostrated with amazement and the whole world flabbergasted. In reality, the possibility of guns of this range was not a German conception. Seven years ago W. S. Simpson of London worked out the idea of a similar long-range gun, the principle of which was a modification of the shell to overcome atmospheric resistance. It was estimated that the gun would have a range of sixty-two and a half miles. But as inaccuracy would make it of no military value and nobody except the Germans ever considered shelling open towns, the gun was never constructed.

A Paris Boxing Bout.

Saw my first Paris boxing match the other night in which Criqui, the clever French mitt man, defeated a huge French negro. M. Descamps, the referee, stopped it in the third round, so unequal was the contest. It was a brilliant scene with thousands of men in uniform and beautifully-gowned women. When Rene Rennart, the French soldier famous for his heroism at Monastir, entered the building minus a leg and his breast ablaze with medals, he was given a tremendous ovation. Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight champion, was at the ringside, and seemed to enjoy it immensely. More than once during the battle, "Attaboy" and "Hit him in the bread basket" came from the gallery in unmistakable American accents.

No Time for Diversions.

Before leaving the States I was approached by a promoter who asked me to ascertain the possibility of sending Carpentier to the United States for a few weeks. His idea was to have him engage in one fight and then stage him in the movies, the net proceeds to be given to the Red Cross or devoted to some other sort of war work helpful to the Allies. As yet I can report no progress, even though the suggestion is not without its merits. With hordes of barbarians battering at her gates, France has no time to think of diversions.

How to Pronounce "Foch."

Stephen Lauzanne, editor of Le Matin, a Frenchman and a scholar, seeks as follows to set Americans right on the pronunciation of Gen. Foch's name:

"The correct pronunciation of the name of Gen. Ferdinand Foch is with a short 'o' and the final 'ch' as though it were 'sh' a trifle shortened. It will rhyme with the English exclamation of disgust, 'Bosh!' Or it will rhyme equally well with the French soldiers' name for the unspeakable German butcher soldiers—'Boche.' All you have to remember is that Gen. Foch is going to give the Boche what he deserves, and you have the correct pronunciation. But, for heaven's sake, don't call the gallant general in the horrible guttural German way; his name does not rhyme with 'Hoch!' The saints forbid!"

Work of the Red Cross.

One of the most refreshing sights in Paris these days is that of American Red Cross ambulances and wagons hurrying through the streets. The work of this organization has been of great aid to the French from the first. During the bombardments the American Red Cross workers can be seen rushing to the aid of the stricken with no thought for their own safety.

Americanizing Paris.

Paris, always in its cosmopolitan features the world's capital, is becoming quite Americanized. For many years the seat of an "American colony" and an American Chamber of Commerce, it will soon have an American theater, while the American bar, where you place one hoof on the rail, has already made its advent.

Show Houses Running.

Show houses are running here as usual, although, of course, not playing to crowds of peace time dimensions. "Faust" and "Thais" are running at the Grande Nationale Opera, which is much frequented by American officers. Seeking something lighter they revert to the Opera Comique. I reckon that for gorgeous costumes and gorgeous forms, the playhouses of Paris have the world beaten.

Two Cities Contrasted.

"Emile," the clever dramatic writer of the Excelsior, takes the following polite and elegant fall out of staid London critics:

"Of course, you have met the austere moralist who is afflicted by the gaiety of Paris and the guilty 'insouciance' of its amusements. 'Think of our allies,' he insists. 'Think of the grave Londoner who comes from his isle of mourning, who has just left a capital where everyone leads a monastic existence, and where the most severe restrictions are imposed. Think how surprised he must be to see such gaiety within our gates!'

"What will he think, oh! moralist? Why, simply that our amusement mongers don't know their business. Do you know what is the programme in course of preparation at Drury Lane for a great charity performance? Do you know how the pretended ascetics across the channel are amusing themselves in the midst of the battle of the Ypres? They are preparing a formidable parody of 'Faust!' They are preparing to laugh at the expense of our venerable Gounod. The role of Marguerite will, we are informed, be played by Little Tich, and the ballet will be danced by a squad of policemen. From this great pleasantry they expect abundant receipts for the war charities! . . ."

Work of the Y.M.C.A.

The Y.M.A.C. is performing an indispensable work here, not the least of which is reducing the sum total of homesickness. It is now maintaining over 600 huts, hotels, cafes, canteens and dugouts for American troops in France. Approximately 2000 workers are employed, and as many more will be required.

Boys Getting Ready.

Boys wearing long streamers of ribbons for several days now have been flocking the streets of Paris. They are members of the class of 1919, which, like the other classes, were called a year before their time. Just about such scenes as are witnessed in America and England took place when farewells were said to sisters, mothers and sweethearts. The boys of this class are known as "coquelicots" (poppies;) those of the 1918 class "paquerettes" (daisies;) and those of the 1917 class "bluets" (cornflowers,) symbolical of the three national colors of the flag, blue, white and red.

French-Irish Similarity.

There is such a striking facial resemblance of many of the French to the Irish that it cannot escape the attention of even a casual observer. This, while at variance with the popular conception of Frenchmen gained in America through the medium of caricatures, is not surprising, as both races are of Celtic origin and are quite similar in temperament and ideals. For this reason, the Irish above all others should be fighting shoulder to shoulder with the French, and many of the United States Irish are. So would the Sinn Feiners but for a few cheap, snotty politicians. Many of the younger Sinn Feiners, wholesome youths, are the victims of misinformation and conscienceless leadership. Placed under the right kind of influence and given honest leadership, they would be found on the right side, and fighting the Germans off their feet.

So Clever.

WILL GIVE TEACHERS PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

STATE UNIVERSITY'S SUMMER SESSION DESIGNED TO MEET MANDATES OF LAW.

The University of California summer session has planned its course in physical education to meet the demand for the preparation of teachers to fulfill the requirements of the physical education law. All teachers in elementary schools must know the games, "stunts," folk dances, athletic events, etc., characteristic of the age taught and also be able to conduct the fundamental forms of hygiene inspection and teaching. Superintendents, principals and teachers are urged to give the problem earnest consideration and plan for next fall immediately.

The summer session course will include elementary gymnastics, school games and gymnastics, playground activities, practical conduct of play activities, practice teaching, etc., also the principles of selection, classification, arrangement and progression of gymnastic material, folk dances and games.

Miss Ella Stevers, supervisor of physical education of Los Angeles city schools and physical director for women of the Y.W.C.A. of Los Angeles, will supervise the course, and methods will be presented which will help to solve the problem that almost all teachers will have to meet in giving instruction without gymnasiums or equipment of any sort.

The bulletin of the summer session, containing full information in regard to courses, faculty, admission, etc., can be had at the Los Angeles office, 417 Union League Building, or of the dean of the summer session, 209 California Hall, Berkeley.

Y.M.C.A. ONLY PLACE TO GET CHEWING TOBACCO IN PAR

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent of The Times.

PARIS, May 1.—In Los Angeles if craving a plug of tobacco you naturally would go to a Spring street cigar store.

In Paris you go to the Y.M.C.A.

Strangely the little Y.M.C.A. store at 12 Rue d'Aguesseau is the only place in Paris where chewing tobacco can be obtained. The use of this is largely an American habit, and Paris vendors of the weed had not conceived the idea of laying in a stock. Furthermore, they have a very difficult time even to supply their patrons with sufficient cigars and cigarettes.

As a result some of the Sammies suffered acutely through being unable to ruminate on their favorite cud. Probably half, or, at a

In looking over the great number of notes involved in this case it seems to me the defendant was a clever forger. He executed the signatures of financially responsible people with marvelous exactitude."

Phelps was sentenced to a term of five years on nine counts and an additional sentence of seven and one-half years on the third count in the indictment. Both sentences are to run concurrently.

MENTALLY UNSOUND?

Dr. H. R. Martin of Riverside, physician for Phelps, gave evidence that the defendant's alleged mental condition may have been induced by two operations performed by him in removing a diseased gland four years ago. The physician told the court he had withdrawn his account from the Phelps institution a year ago because "he had noticed a difference in the mental processes of the defendant."

"I didn't have in mind that Mr. Phelps would be a criminal, but I was of the opinion that he was mentally irresponsible," he testified. He had known Mr. Phelps ten years, he said.

A. R. Piddington and H. G. Stanley, both of whom had known the defendant twenty-five years, gave evidence in his behalf. The substance of their testimony was that a condition bordering on mental deterioration had been coming over the defendant the past two years. W. L. Peters, successor to Mr. Phelps in the Riverside bank, was in court as a character witness, but was not called. The witnesses came to testify voluntarily, they said.

In giving a summary of the case to the court Assistant United States District Attorney Moody stated that the defendant was one of the originators of the Riverside institution in 1906. He later became president at an annual salary of $3600.

The initial $300 defalcation occurred in 1909, at which time he was unable to meet a personal indebtedness of $8000 contracted in 1907. The embezzlement of various sums of money continued up till the time of his arrest.

Of the total of nearly $54,000, about $13,000 went to pay interest that had accumulated on the various forged notes signed by Phelps; about $8000 for automobiles, a "good many" thousands of dollars for two surgical operations, and thousands were given as charities to church, fraternal and charitable organizations.

THIRTY YEARS IN THE ARMY.

Los Angeles Man Honorably Retired—Has Served in Five Campaigns.

Charles R. Schreiber of this city, master signal electrician, has been honorably retired from the United States Army. He was stationed at Kelly Field, Texas, with the Six Hundred and Thirty-second Aero Supply Squadron at the time of his retirement, and may make San Antonio his home.

He served thirty continuous years in the army, and has been in five campaigns. The first was at the Indian uprising in Nebraska in 1891, when he participated in the Battle of Wounded Knee. He was present at the taking of San Juan Hill and at the Battle of Santiago. His last field service was with the punitive expedition into Mexico.

He received a warm good-by from all the men and was presented by the squadron with an inscribed solid gold fountain pen. Lieut. DeNio, squadron commander, made the presentation.

Very Effective Method for Banishing Hairs

(Modes of Today)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

Reliable Method of Hair Care

Hair is by far the most conspicuous thing about us and is probably the most easily damaged by bad or careless treatment. If we are very careful in hair washing, we will have virtually no hair troubles. An especially fine shampoo for this weather, one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair, that dissolves and entirely removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt, can easily be used at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of Canthrox (which you can get at any druggist's), in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. This chemically dissolves all impurities and creates a soothing, cooling lather. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on the glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem much heavier than it is. After Canthrox shampoo, arranging the hair is a pleasure.

HUMAN "NATER."

Furs were never higher in the history of the trade, and never has there been such a demand, according to the reports of dealers. Woman nature is exemplified in the fur business. When furs are cheap women do not care for them, but when they rise in price they are at once demanded. But how about man nature?

BLESSED BE DREAMS.

The writer of this paragraph had a wonderful dream—he thought he had discovered, far out in the mountains, an acre of ground almost covered with ten-dollar gold pieces. In his dream the dreamer said to himself, "Ah, I have often dreamed of such luck as this, but never before did it actually happen!" Of course the dreamer awoke to find it all "Maya, illusion." And yet, blessed be illusion that gives one an occasional respite from the realities of life! It might add some to the comfort of the poor and the sorrowful if they would insist on believing that their so-called conscious life is really only a nightmare and that their sweet dreams are but a foretaste of the real life they will know in "the tomorrow of death."

THE HILLS OF GOD.

They are not only in Paradise, they are also in Southern California. Just now the rolling foothills are a study in green and gold, and at a distance the little mountains appear to be all gold, for the positive yellow of the mustard blooms are fitting mediums for the reflection of old Sol's shining hair that falls in copious beauty through 92,000,000 miles of either upon the emerald earth. There is no more beautiful sight in the world than the foothills of Southern California in springtime, unless it is the golden-brown loveliness of those same hills later on in the year. "I believe that the commonest blackberry briar would adorn the parlors of heaven," sings Whitman, and Mrs. Browning declares that—

"Earth's crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God!"

HERE ARE SOME PEACE TERMS.

The Times submits to Mr. Hohenzollern the following terms of peace:

1. Disarmament, disbandment and dispersion of the German army.
2. Unconditional surrender to the Allies, including the United States, of German arms, equipments, munitions, forts, arsenals, ships of war and U-boats.
3. Return of Alsace and Lorraine to France.
4. Payment of damages inflicted by Germany upon individuals and corporations in Belgium, Flanders, Poland and Northern France.
5. Issuance of German government bonds to the Allies, including the United States, to an amount equal to the cost to them of the war.
6. Occupation of Berlin, Vienna and the principal cities of Germany and Austria by the military forces of the Allies until the foregoing terms are complied with. Customs duties and other taxes to be collected by representatives of the Allies.
7. Exodus of Me und Gott and all his family to St. Helena or Patagonia P.D.Q.

LOYALTY FIRST.

Elihu Root, statesman and patriot, has sounded a note of warning that every loyal American must surrender all minor impulses, motives and desires and be possessed with a single, overwhelming purpose until the war is won. Speaking at the annual meeting of the National Security League in New York last week Mr. Root declared that party lines must be forgotten in the Congressional elections this fall in every instance where the loyalty of candidates becomes an issue. He referred expressly to districts in New York City and elsewhere throughout the country in which mixed nationalities predominate.

Asserting that secret influences were already at work in certain sections to aid candidates of pro-German or pacifist proclivities, Mr. Root said, "There is one great, single, predominant qualification for election to Congress and that is a loyal heart. I don't care whether a man is Democrat, Republican, Progressive, Socialist or Prohibition or what-not. He must have a loyal heart or it is treason to send him to Congress."

This test can be fittingly applied to the self-nominated candidates who will appear on the California ballot; and it is well to remember that loyalty demands something far greater than lip service. The vocabulary of every enemy spy is well stocked with loyal phrases and the loyalty test must extend to acts and associations. No candidate who is inclined to put his loyalty to party before loyalty to country, or who is more interested in winning a seat in Congress than in winning the war, should be permitted to sit in the next Congress.

CIVIC PATRIOTISM VERSUS POLITICAL PAUPERISM.

The idea that we shall all become hirelings or pensioners of the State is obnoxious to the American spirit. America has co-ordinated its forces to fight for democracy in foreign fields, not to fight against it at home.

There are democratic institutions, guaranteed by the Constitution, that must survive the present conflict if liberty itself is not to perish. The individual must persist, as well as the government.

"Liberty," declared Webster in a notable address, "exists in proportion to wholesome restraint." That restraint must be exercised by those who govern as well as by the governed. There is a distinction between war emergencies and stable policies—a distinction that must not be forgotten. Coordinating legislative and executive functions during the stress of conflict is vastly different from a fixed policy of state Socialism. Government operation in time of war must not be confused with government ownership in time of peace. Men form themselves into vigilance committees and obey chosen leaders to meet a sudden peril that rises outside the law; but they do not pledge life fealty to the leaders of the moment. That civilized democracy shall win in its present struggle with barbaric despotism is written on the stars; but vigilance must not slumber, lest paternalistic governments shall reduce the country to a state analogous to A BUREAUCRATIC ALMSHOUSE. We are not yet ready to permit a stifling of private industry and initiative that would make public paupers of us all. No, Senator Johnson and Commissioner Carnahan, we, the people of California, are not ready for that.

Progressive eras are always infested with impostors. In the present age they seem to be propagating faster than ever before. Germany's rape of Belgium is a striking example of placing national interest before national honor; while California's forty fat commissions furnish a modern instance of the cohesive force of public plunder. Government was intended for a harness, but it has become the load. In 1877 President Hayes enunciated the great Republican doctrine that "he serves his party best who serves his country best." But that was more than forty years ago. The modern Democratic application has been that he serves his party best who creates the most positions for deserving Democrats. In a number of notable instances of late, however, President Wilson has reaffirmed the great Republican principle of "country first." But when that principle comes to be applied to State and local politics in California it runs athwart the intrenched political machine of the most greedy bureaucracy that has yet fastened itself upon any American commonwealth. The office-holders have organized themselves into an army, always on the offensive. They tell us all we must "get in or go under."

In no other State are there so many citizens on the public pay roll; no other State pays such high salaries to so many office-holders; and, as a logical consequence, the per capita cost of government in California is the highest in the Union. And it appears that the end is not yet. In place of reducing State expenses in order that money might be conserved for financing the great war, the cost of State government is higher this spring than ever before in the history of California. A few counties are reducing government cost in their new budgets, but the State machine is still running full speed ahead.

II.

Government operation of the railroads of the country has proven a dismal financial failure. In a single month a profit of $76,000,000 under private ownership shrank to a loss of $2,000,000 under government operation. The failure of government construction of airplanes is the tragic episode of the first year of the war. Our allies have noted with surprise that the output of American ammunition factories was less under government control than when privately operated. The conviction is growing that whenever the government interferes with individual initiative both the industry and the government suffer. Bolshevik rule in Russia has proved an object lesson for democracy elsewhere. That Bolshevik government typifies the triumph of German diplomatic duplicity. The Junkers spent millions to secure to the Reds the control of the institutions and the finance of the state; then they withdrew, fully aware that state Socialism and official greed would wreck the country more surely than millions of armed troops.

California is not immune from the attack of similar forces. Not even the satellites of the late Russian Czar ever displayed more greed than the commissionized government of California during the last seven years. It has doubled the cost of State government in that time. But a single commissioner has resigned. Three thousand pay-roll patriots, male and female, full of the idea that the GOVERNMENT MUST DO EVERYTHING, from building houses and running railroads to regulating habits. California formed part of a lobby in Washington that worked to secure immunity from conscription for State employees. Not a State commission has been abolished since war was declared, although their duties have been taken over by the Federal government. The Railroad Commission has dropped all suits against the steam railroads operated by the government; but none of the commissioners has resigned, although the Secretary of the Federal Treasury has written to Gov. Stephens urging him to reduce railroad taxes in the State. The taxes formerly paid by the railroads must now be paid by the Federal government. Every dollar expended by the forty fat commissions of California is a dollar that would be turned direct into the Federal war fund if the commissions were abolished and the railroad taxes were reduced in an amount equal to the cost of the commission. A commissioner who holds on to his job under such conditions has not enough patriotism to fill the veins of a louse; and about one hundred and fifty of them are doing so. Not only are they hanging on to their sinecures, but they are maintaining great departments that are costing in the aggregate nearly $5,000,000 a year. Blood money, every dollar of it! If any one of a hundred—yes, a thousand—men whom we could name were Governor at this juncture those parasites would be kicked out of office, their places abolished and the money thus saved would be devoted to a patriotic purpose. But Gov. Stephens is too much under the thrall of the political machine maintained by these parasites to dare disturb them. They have assured him that they made his predecessor and that they can make or break him politically. Is this thing going so far that every man of us must get on the State pay roll and join the army of the Civil List or feed on grass? Is Paternalism to make paupers of us all?

III.

Let us envisage for a moment the conditions that would result if the policy of State control and operation of all industry should pass from theory to fact and the control of every human activity should pass into the hands of government commissions. Every citizen would cease to be self-supporting and the State would become one vast almshouse conducted by bureaucrats. Each person would need be sustained by some kind of pension; he would have to cling somewhere to the pay roll. The State would become a Pharaoh empowered to enforce edicts calling for "bricks without straw." Economists have declared for the last thousand years that the only human equality possible is the equality of misery. Equality exists among beasts. Just as soon as humanity begins to rise from the condition of the brute, exceptional mentalities leap to the mountain tops and the feeble are crushed under the feet of the rabble.

President Cleveland enunciated a governing principle when he asserted in the message accompanying his veto of the Texas seed bill that, "though the people support the government, the GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT SUPPORT THE PEOPLE." Almost a century before Edmund Burke observed, after a comprehensive study of the effects of the French Revolution: "And having looked to the government for bread, on the very first scarcity they will turn and bite the hand that fed them." If there are still doubting Thomases, let them read and reflect on the developments of the Russian revolution from the rise to power of Kerensky to the signing of the ignoble treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

IV.

President Wilson did not hesitate to appoint his distinguished opponent, Charles Evans Hughes, to investigate the grave charges growing out of the government's failure to produce airplanes. In so doing he has declared to the nation that the war is bigger than any party, than any class or faction, and that it is only through the coordination of every vital force in the nation that victory can be won.

California represents an army corps in that engagement, both in Picardy and on the home front. Our paramount duty is to subordinate every other impulse to that of winning the war. To that end men of breadth of vision must be induced to STAND FOR ELECTION BOTH TO CONGRESS AND TO THE STATE LEGISLATURE. Since the parasitic State commissioners have not enough manhood or patriotism to resign, let them be forced out and the money wasted on them be applied to feeding and equipping our Liberty Army. Let us have some dollar-a-year volunteers to take their places until the State government has been readjusted on a war basis. Vigilance on the part of the individual must be displayed in order that the penny politicians of the Mouser-Phillips type, self-nominated under our noisome State primary law, be not permitted again to misrepresent Los Angeles districts in the State Legislature. Not politicians, but men of proved industrial ability; not pay-roll patriots, but volunteer forces of democracy; in short, NOT PARASITES, BUT PATRIOTS, must be nominated and elected in the year 1918 if California is to take and hold a place in the firing line on the western front until victory is assured for the American idea, not for Bolshevik Socialism!

We have had enough of the faddists, enough of the demagogues, enough of the feeble-minded; it is time for the brains, integrity and ability of California to manifest themselves in the conduct of the State government. Patriotism above partisanship! Democracy above bureaucracy! Liberty above State control! Human rights above the demands of political militarism! No surrender to the Hindenburgs or the Kerenskys of America and their armies of office-holders.

Wake up, wake up, ye people! Arouse yourselves to the perils at home!

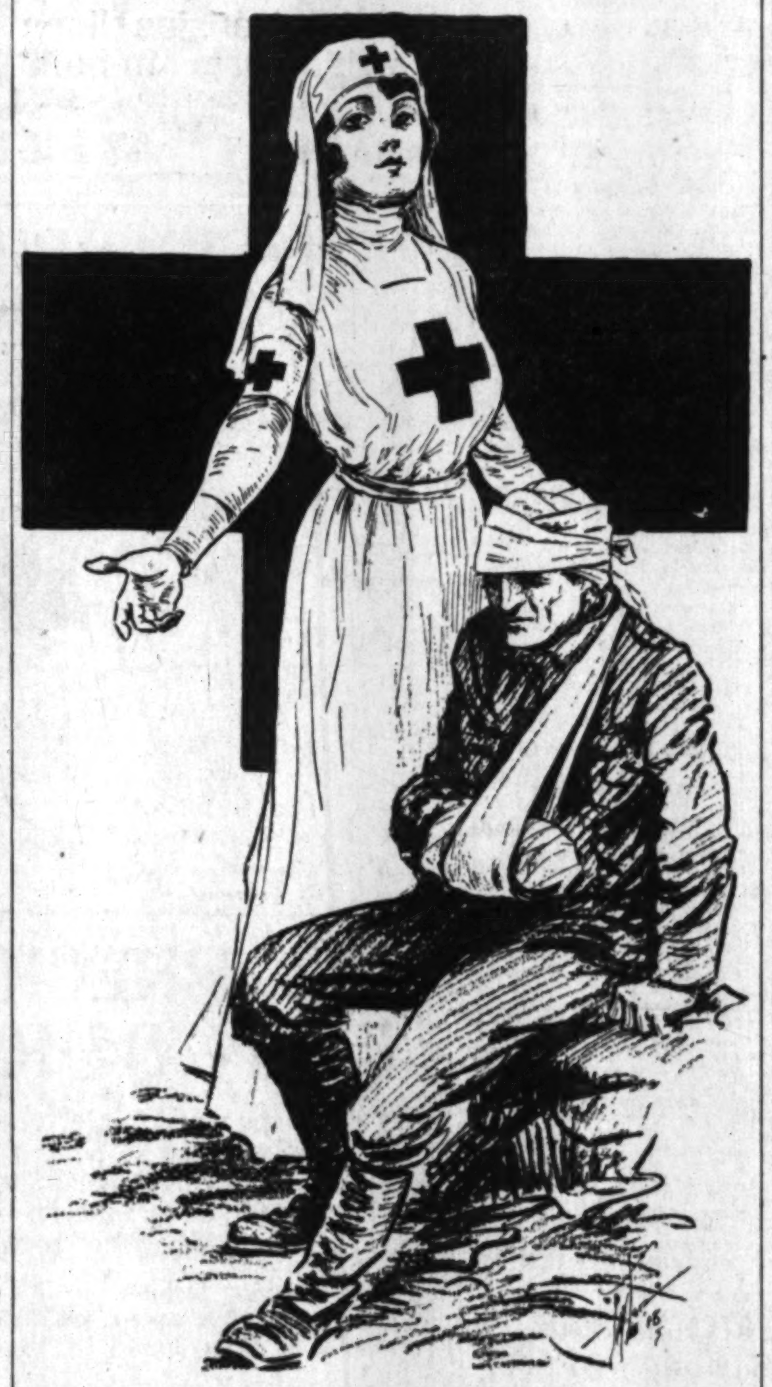
QUEEN MARIE REBELS.

King Ferdinand of Rumania may sign the peace treaties that Mr. Hohenzollern directs him to sign; but Queen Marie, his wife, has publicly announced that she would rather abdicate than reign over a country under German rule. Marie has been the wife of Ferdinand for twenty-five years. She is a woman of good sense and excellent breeding. She has borne Ferdinand two sons and four daughters. Her husband did not ascend the throne until October, 1914. She and her five surviving children under her guidance have never lost an opportunity of insulting the Germans in Rumania; and rather than remain in Rumania as a vassal of Me und Gott, we advise her to go to Reno and obtain a divorce.

Even the rich man has his troubles. As a general rule he hasn't enough time to eat or sleep. He is eternally chasing the dollar. But there is nothing so unsatisfactory in this world as a lot of money. [So they tell us.]

The visit of Hindenburg to Paris has been postponed on account of battle grounds.

Sister, Mother, Friend.



LOST MOTION.

There's a lesson for us all in what's happening at Washington.

Upon his promise to do a good job and not abuse the privileges of the Overman law, the President has been given opportunity to become the greatest reducer of lost motion in history.

If he succeeds humankind will be shown, on a big scale, the beauty and economy of things done simply.

The world is all cluttered up with vitality-consuming frills; ill-directed energy; lost motion.

Some day it will not be so. Children in school will be taught to reason; to study everything comparatively; to know the "why," the right proportion, the cost of every move or happening in relation to the result thereof. This will be easy because it will be natural. We will quit stupidly telling the child who is intelligent enough to ask questions that he is too young to understand. By rambling the fields and quizzing their tutor the boy sons of a London editor learned more of language, of engineering and other branches of knowledge in a few months than is learned in several years—if really learned at all in the true sense—by the ordinary rote methods.

Meantime many a boy will grow to manhood in Los Angeles with reasoning powers undeveloped. He may be "educated." He may, indeed, become an "efficiency expert." Yet he may wonder why seagulls sometimes fly inland for food when there are so many fish in the sea; the while he insists upon New York shirts and his wife calls for Minneapolis flour; thus helping keep away manufacturer-clients though seeking them; the personification of the general habit of wasting motion.

This war awoke the nation to the fact that it was buying abroad what it had, or could have, within its own borders—that it was wasting time, labor, initiative, money.

Locally we should make a similar discovery. Millions of dollars earned here, and which should be put back into the circulating capital of this community, are given the far-away roll which has no come-back. Wasted motion. It overworks the dollar and does nobody any particular benefit. Circulate money, yes; but circulate it where it will do the most good.

Some communities there are which live by giving the rest of the world special service. This community was, but is not, one of these. In an economic sense it has become an average community. The average community lives by manufacturing—food, clothes and other necessities, chiefly. The quickest way for us to obtain this absolutely-necessary manufacturing asset is by cutting out the lost-motion buying from afar and developing home industries.

We live by what we sell. Most of us sell our labor. To whom? To the producers, including manufacturers. We need more manufacturers of the kind who would require our services not merely during the war, but always.

How can we get them? By supporting those who are already here. By showing that the best way to get trade here is to manufacture here. By proving that we are through with the present habit of lost motion.

As we must sell our labor to live, so the producer must sell his product to live. If he comes here, starts a business, pays wages, and we spend those wages on ANY products made far away that can be had just as good and at the right price here, we weaken this market for the producer located here. The money he brings here to pay us we send back, perhaps to the very locality he came from. Wasted energy for all concerned. And by and by we lose the producer. He cannot live on wind.

Southern California producers, if their products and prices are right and provided they LET PEOPLE KNOW THEY ARE ON EARTH, need and should receive co-operation from those whom they serve and many of whom they employ. "Live and let live." Otherwise, either the producer manages to sell to a far-away market or goes far away himself and we lose him as the man behind the pay roll.

It may be, as scientists say, that energy never is wasted—that it merely changes its form. In other words, if we spend the energy which is in the dollars we earn, in such manner that it goes far away from here, it is not wasted. It merely changes locality. And when our producer follows it we may have energy enough left to hunt another job, if there be one. To a man up a tree that looks a good deal like lost motion.

Learn the lesson. Once you get it's swing it's easy. Ponder the simple fact that every motion hits or misses, and that your dollar-motions miss if they do not butter bread in your own community.

Lost motion is particularly to be avoided at this time, with respect to buying things which must come from afar. Our government needs the transportation lines to carry men and materials needed to win this war.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

HE ALSO SERVES.

Before the war across the sea our thoughts were all of boodle; we showed enough of loyalty by whistling "Yankee Doodle." We groaned whene'er we paid a tax, and raised old Nick and Harry, and said the burden on our backs was much too fierce to carry. If we were asked to rise and aid some project, for a minute, our winning smile would be mislaid; we'd ask, "What is there in it?" We'd talk much of the public weal, of things that needed doing; but all we'd do was rant and spiel and chew all rags worth chewing. In selfishness we all were soaked, long years of peace had spoiled us; then Stoker Wilhelm deftly stoked and raised the fire that roiled us. We've vowed to put him in the broth who made this nation nervous, and we have shaken off our sloth, and our one aim is service. I see the bankers leave their banks, the pastors leave their churches to round up cheap disloyal cranks and pull them from their perches. I see the merchants leave their stores to help in bond campaigning; each man forsakes his private chores; no arguing, explaining. We're shaken from the musty ways in which we used to travel; we want to serve, to help, and raise a cloud of dust and gravel. Oh, it's a great thing for our souls, it puts new zest in living, this thing of finding that our rolls are only fit for giving.

WALT MASON.

Secretary Baker has asked Congress for an appropriation of more than a billion dollars for war aviation. And the people won't kick if they get anything for their money. So far, it is a question whether they have been able to do so.

I GUESS SO.

BY CHARLES F. LUMMIS.

I wouldn't know George Creel from Adam's father-in-law, if I met the two walking arm-in-arm on Pennsylvania avenue; and by the way Mr. Creel's name is being "toasted" in Congress and by the American Publishers' Association, mebbe I would sooner cultivate intimacy with the Grand-daddy of the Race!

Of course until Congress gives him a clean bill of health, I shall give Mr. C. the Benefit of the Doubt—and I have plenty to draw from! You can't expect a veteran newspaper man to swallow anything fishy.

To be Government Censor for the United States in this War Against Hell is one of the biggest responsibilities ever put on any American official below the very President. Mr. McAdoo himself has a more titanic job; but not half so far-reaching a one. Railroads ran before Government control; but the Freedom of Thought is incomparably more vital than rerouting freight. And what so few seem to realize is that Freedom of Thought depends absolutely on Freedom of Knowledge. Even the wisest man, shut out from the Truth, finds his thought imprisoned. Knowledge is the only window for the brain. To nail up that window is to shut us into Groping—perhaps to Madness. And if I know anything of my countrymen, the American people will never stand for being Shut up in the Dark. We will face any light, no matter how blinding; we will make any sacrifice—if we Understand. But we have some British traits still. Few of us were born with silver spoons in our mouth—but none with Stoppers! Nor with Blinders in our Look-outs!

Our English has many confusions of sound. But making a man a Censor doesn't ex-officio give him Sense—any more than a Tailor has to resume the caudal behind-hand of our arboreal ancestors, or a Sailor must stick to the old wind-jammers and would be a steamer or a Propeller if he embarked in modern navigation.

This is no Drive on Mr. Creel. We're just trying—nationally and authoritatively—to find out just what he is. "Who's Who in America" doesn't mention his name, though it lists the 22,000 Americans who are known to have done something worth while in any line whatever—including some thousand men known to the country as knowing what News is, and how to treat it. Mebbe Mr. Creel had not yet been Discovered. He may be the Best—nay, he may be the Only—man to decide what Knowledge shall be imparted by the Press (our sole source of knowledge) to the twenty million American homes that are giving their Boys, their Hope of Prosperity.

The Press of the United States has been, ever since we entered the war, the whole Right Arm of the President and of his central authority. It has done more to Swing the Country into Step Behind Him than Congress, Governors, Legislatures, politicians and everyone else, all put together. In fact, it is what Got them together. A Kaiser can pass the word by his generals to the troops; but the only way a President can get the ear of the American People is by "the Papers."

And God knows the Papers have Risen to the Responsibility! It has Purged and christened and bettered them, this War, just as it has the mass of us—and we all needed a Jolt. There are a few irredeemable Iscariots; but the overwhelming majority of the American Press has Jumped into the Harness with the President and for the Country.

There are three chief things we Elect, Grumble at and are generically Ungrateful to—Congress, Women and Newspapers. It's sometimes hard to live with them—but forever impossible to live without them. They are all integral parts of American life. And Women, Congress and the Papers—all are Making Good.

Is there anyone so Bereft of Intelligence as to fancy for an instant that if war had been declared and the Press suppressed in the same breath, we wouldn't be Licked Before we Began? Who is to win the war? Officials, no matter how high? No, the American People. And how would they even know there is a war? By dropping in at the White House and asking: "Well, what's new today?" Bah! They know not ony that it is, but what it is, by the paper that falls to every home every morning. And by that only.

The Draft could not have been "put over" except for the newspapers—not for a month. Americans were not used to conscription. But the Press made this subversive thing not only possible, but easy—by its infinite publicity of praise for loyalty and its damning of slackers.

Not one of the three Liberty Bond drives could possibly have "gone over the top" if it hadn't been for the newspapers. Nay, without them the sale would not have been 20 per cent. of the minimum. How are people going to do what they don't know anything about? At least 80 per cent. of the Liberty Loan is due to the crusade of the newspapers—to wake the public up, to wake committees, drives and organization.

It is the Press that has made possible the marvelous achievement of the Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A. and a thousand other patriotic activities. It is the Press that has rallied, not only the Man-power, but the Woman-power of America to win this war. It is the Press upon which this nation must rely, as much as on any official from the President down-and-inclusive, for the winning of this war.

There is patriotic honor enough in most newspaper offices to make them Safe. There are already plenty of laws to catch any that betray our trust.

The Newspaper is the Eyes of Us. They mustn't be gouged out—nor even blindfolded by an ignote amature.

It takes a lifetime and millions of dollars to build a newspaper. Once knocked down, it never gets up to full height again. And I'd as soon have the city editor supplanted by the We'll See To You's as the Associated Press put into the pocket of any official that ever lived—not to mention G. C.

POLITICS.

The American Game.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

The entrance of Dist.-Atty. Charles M. Fickert of San Francisco into the gubernatorial race and the definite decision of Friend W. Richardson to stay out of it were the most important political developments of the week. I never did give the Richardson boomlet much serious consideration and don't believe very many were surprised when he made his formal announcement. A similar pronunciamento by Charley McGee of San Diego is next.

Mr. Fickert said he will announce his platform in a few days, and until he does it will not be the easiest thing in the world to figure the effect of the campaign he will wage. Undoubtedly his name will be linked with the Mooney case and it may do him a great deal of good unless Gov. Stephens is wise enough to take his thunder away by merely permitting the law to take its course. In the event that the Governor is foolish enough to commute the arch murderer's sentence then Mr. Fickert will have some real campaign material and will unquestionably be an important factor in the race.

Mr. Ficket is a fearless man, and a man of strong convictions. Convinced that he is right, he will fight anybody and everybody if necessary to win. Despite threats of the unionites who supported him in his campaigns for District Attorney, he went after Mooney and the other bomb-throwers fearlessly, succeeding in procuring convictions under most adverse conditions. The country applauded his successful efforts, and the State may be expected to show its appreciation at the polls.

Thomas Lee Woolwine, our own fightin' District Attorney, was not in the least perturbed when he heard that Mr. Fickert was in the race. He said he has always felt that a District Attorney will be the next Governor; but, of course, you know which one he meant.

Francis Jonas Heney is facing Charles M. Fickert for the third time. One it was in a campaign for District Attorney of San Francisco. Mr. Fickert won by an overwhelming majority. The second time it was a fist to fist encounter. The Wild Ass took the count. Now it is for gubernatorial honors.

Editor J. O. Hayes has at last decided to make a public appearance in Los Angeles. He is scheduled to speak next Saturday before the City Club, the event to mark the opening of his campaign south of the Tehachepi.

W. C. Mushet is seriously considering the advisability of becoming a candidate to succeed Congressman Randall. During the past week he has made a superficial canvass of the Ninth District and has met encouragement in many quarters. He believes that Republicanism is an important factor and that there are enough real unadulterated Republicans in the district to elect him. Mr. Randall will be mercilessly attacked upon his anti-war record and Mr. Odell is not particularly popular with the rank and file of Republicans. Mr. Mushet will definitely decide this week.

Unionites of the "Curly" Grow and "Red" Gore type have joined with Dr. Haynes, Dr. Kellogg and Walter Stevenson, the big bugs of the Southern California Civil Service Reform League, in a protest to the Council against the proposed confirmation of the appointment of Benjamin F. Pearson as a member of the City Civil Service Commission. Mr. Pearson is superintendent of the Southern California Edison Company and was appointed by Mayor Woodman because of his rare ability. He is opposed by the unionites because he does not believe in the closed shop principle. Neither does the Mayor believe in it. A canvass of the Council shows that only Ralph Criswell, the Socialist member, and John B. Reeves, the master plumber, may be expected to vote against Mr. Pearson.

The contest for Sheriff is warming up. John C. Cline, the incumbent, is devoting considerable time to Red Cross and other patriotic work while his opponents have started campaigns throughout the county. Bob Brain is confident that he will go to the finals with Mr. Cline, but two others think the same thing about themselves. They are Perry A. Howard and Sam Browne.

Mayor Woodman is looking around for a successor to H. A. Payne, who resigned as efficiency expert to accept the position of County Auditor. The Mayor says the Efficiency Commission wants a man with a level head, rather than one who thinks he knows more than any other person how the city government should be operated.

J. L. Mathews of Covina, the public-spirited editor, is a full fledged candidate for [illegible] the First District. His [illegible] economy, something which [illegible] make quite a hit in that [illegible]

City Clerk Wilde had a [illegible] yesterday over the failure of [illegible] fice to get a 100 per cent [illegible] the third Liberty Loan [illegible] said it was due to the [illegible] three of the highest paid [illegible] his department to buy bonds [illegible] is said some of the patriotic [illegible] employees intend to smoke out [illegible] slackers in all departments.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

BANNING is the proud possessor of the only known female "delivery boy," in the person of Miss Ruth Fountain, one of the popular girls there, who wears a becoming uniform of overalls, drives a delivery automobile with expert ease, and carries a smile as well as groceries to every home.

When members of the transfer firm of Little & Fountain enlisted in the army, Miss Fountain, who had been assisting in her brother's office as book-keeper, was made legal agent to transact their business. RAIL EMBARGO PACKS CANNERIES AT HARBO

AN embargo on all rail shipments of sardines for ten days has been a handicap on the canneries at the port during the last week. No reason has been given for the embargo, but it is presumed it was made to give the right of way to the needs of the army and navy and prevent congestion on the east coast.

All the canneries have been packed with an enormous amount of fish during the last few weeks and the embargo has congested their warehouses as well as imposed financial hardships upon the packers. Ordinarily, shipments are made as fast as packed and [illegible] on the bills of lading [illegible] operate.

Taken altogether, the fish [illegible] industry, however, has been [illegible] satisfactory. AUSTRALIAN CANNER IS GATHERING IDEAS HE

E. POWELL LEWIS, president of the Kelley-Lewis Company of Melbourne, Australia, the largest canning company in the Antipodes, and special representative of the Goulburn Valley Fruit Growers' Association, said yesterday at the Lankershim Hotel that the wheat crop of Australia this year is expected to exceed that of any previous year, being estimated at 400,000,000 bushels.

"For the last nine months there have been lying in Melbourne 300,000,000 bushels of wheat," he said. "The United States is building ships for the specific purpose of moving this grain and there is now a fleet of vessels plying between this coast and Australia. On the ship on which I came over there was a crew of men who were sent to this country to man one of the newly launched vessels. All the grain has been purchased by the British government and will be sent to Europe from the Atlantic ports of this country."

Mr. Lewis is making a special tour of the canning industry in Southern California, observing the best methods of packing fruit. At the request of the British government the fruit growers of Australia are about to install canning companies patterned after the American.

"Fruit growing in Australia is now becoming one of our largest industries," Mr. Lewis said. "Tons of it will go to waste this year unless it is canned, and if I can secure sufficient tin in the United States we shall install canneries and save this crop."

Of the labor situation in Australia Mr. Lewis said that strikes [illegible] never heard of. "All [illegible] tween employer and [illegible] settled by a board of [illegible] composed of five members [illegible] sides with a chairman, and [illegible] I know there never was a [illegible] difficulties had not been [illegible]" he said.

WAR SERVICE NURSES.

The section representing nurses accepted for war service aroused much enthusiasm along the line of parade. First came a banner, announcing that Los Angeles has enrolled 300 Red Cross nurses for work "Over There." Then followed the long line of nurses from the various hospitals and training schools, in their professional garb, and each wearing the head-dress of the Red Cross, with its symbol on their foreheads. There were bodies of nurses from the city departments, the County Hospital training school, Methodist Hospital, Good Samaritan Hospital, Clara Barton Hospital, Children's Hospital, Angelus Hospital, St. Vincent's Hospital, Pasadena Hospital and the Crocker-street Hospital and from the Bureau of Hygiene.

ROTARY CLUB.

The Rotary Club had a large representation. Its members carried a huge banner with the rotarians' wheel, and they were followed by a big contingent representing the salvage work.

VILLE DE PARIS FLOAT.

An outstanding feature was the Red Cross boat of the Ville de Paris It was in white, with the rigging and outline of the vessel in red flowers. In the center of the craft arose a stately red cross and Red Cross nurses and sailors manned the vessel.

BOHEMIAN-SLOVAC.

The Bohemian-Slovac section presented a float depicting the future Bohemian-Slovac state and the relief work that the Red Cross is carrying on in behalf of these peoples. The women marching wore native costumes, brilliant in coloring and quaint in design.

FRENCH FLOAT.

George Fusenot was chairman of the French float, on which rode some twenty women, all knitting, sewing or making bandages. It was decorated in the French and American colors, and bore the slogan, "Work."

BRITISH AMBULANCE.

A dozen women of the British Ambulance, seated under a canopy of asparagus fern and red carnations, showed the public the work that their society is doing. A large pile of knitted garments was heaped in the middle of the float, while the workers sewed under the supervision of Mrs. C. C. Willmans. Another part of the entry showed Mrs. John Bonynge in charge of a corps of knitters, and in a third, girls, under Miss Trixie Costello, served tea. The top and sides were completely covered with decorations of flowers, interspersed with British, Allied and Red Cross flags. Miss Maude Somerville and Mrs. Taylor, knitting on the float, each made a complete suit of pajamas while en route.

BELGIAN RELIEF.

Celebrating the opening of a new tearoom the Belgian Relief float, decorated in the orange, red and black of Belgium, showed a scene of the new adjunct. On the sides of the truck were the words, "Eat for the Belgian Children at Our Tearoom." Ten ladies, under the direction of Mrs. John Lynch, rode on the float, and served each other with tea.

ITAY'S ROYAL EAGLE.

The Italian national colors supplied the color motif for the float of the Italian relief. The entry showed Italia, portrayed by Miss Teresa Giacomino, seated on her dais under the Royal Eagle, surveying the work of the Red Cross workers who were sewing, knitting and making bandages. Mrs. Robert I. Vignola was chairman of the Float Committee.

FIRST ENGLISH LUTHERANS.

The float entered by the First English Lutheran Church showed the three branches of Red Cross work, knitting, sewing and making bandages and surgical dressings. Six women were occupied in this section, and the other half depicted the Red Cross, through a nurse, aiding foreign children, Miss Ruth

For War Fund.

CITY TO BE CANVASSED BY FOUR MAIN BODIES.

Big and Modest "Prospects" will be Gone After by Six Thousand Workers.

THE great campaign for the second Red Cross War Fund, which officially opens tomorrow morning, has Harry M. Haldeman as its campaign chairman. It will be divided into four sections.

The first will be known as the Big Prospect Division; the second as the Industrial Organization, under the chairmanship of James S. Riley and Campaign Manager J. A. H. Kerr; the third as the Precinct Division, and the fourth as the Hollywood and Moving Picture Division, under the chairmanship of G. G. Greenwood.

The first body will go after the "big prospects"—that being its particular function. The second will secure the donations of employees of all industrial concerns. The precinct organization has a captain and from ten to fifteen workers for each voting precinct of the entire city. There are 743 captains and about 6000 workers.

NAMES TO BE POSTED.

The names of residents in each precinct will be posted at their precinct headquarters, and as their donations are reported these also will be posted beside their names.

If you donate your subscription to the Red Cross at your place of business or to one of the Red Cross teams working in the downtown district, you will be given a certificate of subscription. It is your duty then to present this certificate of subscription at your precinct headquarters at the earliest possible moment and you will receive a Red Cross insignia, which is of celluloid printed in red and blue and bearing the words "Second War Fund." Also the amount that you donate will be set opposite your name on the precinct list, and will be formal recognition of your donation.

Precinct headquarters has been established at the voting place in each precinct and members of the Precinct Committee will be in charge from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day from May 21 to May 27, inclusive, so that each subscriber can receive immediate recognition for his subscription. If you are employed downtown or in business downtown you are urged to make your donation through one of the teams if it solicits you or through the Industrial Committee; but be sure and turn in your certificate of subscription at your precinct headquarters.

FOR INTENSIVE WORK.

The Industrial Organization and the Red Cross teams will do their intensive work tomorrow, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and the house-to-house canvass precinct workers will do their work on Friday and Saturday and Monday, May 27, checking up each resident of Los Angeles to see whether he or she has donated to the Red Cross.

Each day at 12 noon and 6 p.m., the amounts will be posted in the precinct headquarters. The precinct captain has been instructed to make a written report to headquarters of any person in his precinct who gives utterances to unpatriotic remarks or pro-German sentiment.

EASTERN STAR PLANS RED CROSS BENEFIT.

A big Red Cross benefit in which all of the Eastern Star chapters in Los Angeles will unite in raising funds for the local chapter of the Red Cross is to be held at the Shrine Auditorium on June 8. Thousands of tickets for the benefit are to be sold, every Eastern Star chapter organizing campaign teams to compete in the ticket sales.

Music for the grand march and the dancing will be furnished by the Coast Artillery Band from Fort MacArthur. In addition, there will be a musical programme that will include numbers from the Orpheus Club and Grego Chrniawsky, the Russian violinist. The presentation of Columbia, with Miss Hallie L Baere as Columbia, will follow an exhibition drill by the uniformed team from the Jinistin Grotto.

Every Masonic organization in the city is to co-operate to make the benefit a success. The tickets will sell for 50 cents each and an effort is to be made to sell 40,000 of them in Los Angeles.

Clarence W. Edgar is chairman of the General Committee in charge of the benefit and J. W. Peterson is chairman of the Entertainment Committee. Anna T. McCreery is chairman of the Committee on Arrangements. The Executive Committee representing the Eastern Star chapters in charge of the benefit ball is composed of Clarence W. Edgar, Walter C. Johantgen, Harry W. Reynolds, William F. Wiebers, Mrs. Anna T. McCreery, Mrs. Lillian D. Fowler and Mrs. Murial T. Shutt.

"GIVE UNTIL YOU SMILE," RED CROSS WAR SLOGAN.

Money Donated will be Used Solely for Relief Work—Campaigners Give Their Time Free.

abroad, $15,000,000; working cash advanced for France and the United States, $4,287,000.

The Red Cross has been designated "the real mother" for our men "Over There." In a cablegram from Maj. James H. Perkins he says:

"Every American soldier now entering the trenches carries an American Red Cross comfort kit, containing towel, shirt, writing paper, pencil, soap, handkerchief, socks, mirror and tobacco."

THE WORK ABROAD.

Would you know further what your donations to the American Red Cross are doing to help win the war? Then consider these facts:

In France, the American Red Cross is caring for 50,000 children, orphans and refugees.

In Poland, the Red Cross has saved 60,000 children from starvation.

Seven hundred thousand tuberculars in France are being taken care of by the Red Cross.

Three hundred and fifty thousand repatriates in Franc have been taken care of. These persons, considered useless by Germany, have been turned back into France during the last ten months and are still arriving 1000 a day.

Canteen service provided at 500 junction and terminal points in rear of battle front.

Fifteen rolling canteens maintained at front line trenches.

Supplied 27,000,000 surgical dressings to France and Flanders.

Enlisting and training 1000 nurses a month for army and Red Cross work.

Installed artificial limb factory near Paris and furnishing product to government at cost.

Taken over and maintained five large hospitals for French army.

Installed portable ice plants to supply ice for hospitals.

Cared for thousands of orphans in Serbia and thousands of prisoners in Austrian camps.

Supplying medical aid, clothing, food, farm implements and seed to Serbia's starving thousands.

Saved Rumania from extermination by relief to thousands of this country's refugees. Maintains large hospital at Jassy.

Saved Italy from horror of disaster and suffering by quick relief to both soldiers and civilians after Italian retreat. Cemented Italian and American friendship.

NURSES SUPPLIED.

The Red Cross has already supplied nearly 7000 nurses as a reserve for the Army and Navy Nurse Corps, since the beginning of the war, and Surgeon-General Gorgas has called for 10,000 army nurses to be furnished by June 1. The Red Cross must supply and entrain a large proportion of these.

For the last six months the American Red Cross has maintained a series of front line canteens where more than 1,500,000 French poilus have been served with hot meals and friendly cheer. At the request of the United States Army, the Red Cross has installed this service with all American troops engaged in actual fighting. This is a touch of home always at the elbow of the soldiers, no matter where he is or under what hardships he is operating. The work of the Red Cross canteen worker is often done under heavy shell fire and requires men of great bravery and sympathy.

As stated, the money donated to the second Red Cross War Fund is to be used solely for war relief work. The overhead expenses including salaries of the Red Cross National Council, division headquarters, local chapters, branches and auxiliaries are met by membership fees. No expenses of administration in the United States are paid out of the war fund. Every dollar contributed to this fund goes to war relief.

The local chapter may request not to exceed 25 per cent. of the money contributed to the second Red Cross War Fund to be turned over to the Los Angeles chapter to help it in carrying out its relief work.

The other 75 per cent. of the money contributed to the second Red Cross War Fund is to be used scolely for war relief work, which includes not only taking care of the sick and wounded soldiers, but also in alleviating the suffering and want of the civilian population in the war area and providing food and other necessities for our soldiers and the soldiers of our allies held as prisoners by the enemy.

IN VERDUGO CANYON.

The tea given last Sunday by the Verdugo Canyon branch of the Red Cross at its headquarters, the old Verdugo ranch house, was such a marked success that it has been decided to keep the headquarters open as a tearoom every Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock for the benefit of the gauze-dressings department of the branch. Tea will be served at small tables in the shade of the old trees and on the veranda of the old adobe house, which abounds in charm to the lovers of Spanish California. The signs have been placed for the convenience of motorists, who will find it a beautiful drive through Verdugo Canyon coming from Los Angeles via Glendale, and from Pasadena via Eagle Rock or La Canada.

BOOTS FOR SALE.

Someone has given an army officer who wants to be exceptionally well booted at an exceptionally low price a splendid opportunity. There has been donated to the Red Cross a pair of military boots, mahogany in color, regulation in every way, which cost $50 to build. These are offered for sale at the shop at No. 406 West Pico street.

When the Baby Needs a Laxative---

No one knows better than the ever-watchful mother—the natural doctor of the family in all the small ills—that when the baby is out of sorts it is usually due to indigestion or constipation.

It is always well, in any of its illnesses, to look for this cause. The diet may have to be changed, but before good can result from it, the bowels must be moved.

The mother has the choice of many medicines—cathartics, purgatives, bitter-waters, pills, physics, etc. But the little body doesn't need such harsh remedies for they wrench the system and do only temporary good, so often followed by an unpleasant reaction.

A better plan is to employ a mild, gentle laxative of which only a little is required. There is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold by druggists under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin that thousands of mothers have used successfully for baby's constipation and its accompanying ills, such as belching, wind colic, restlessness, sleeplessness, etc.

The nursing mother will also find it ideal for herself, and it is especially important that she be free from constipation.

Syrup Pepsin is guaranteed to do as promised or the druggist will refund the money. Thousands of cautious families have it in the house, secure against the little ills.

SYRUP PEPSIN
The Perfect Laxative

NO INCREASE

In spite of enormous increased laboratory costs due to the War the manufacturers of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sacrificing their profits and absorbing the war taxes so that this family laxative may remain at the pre-war price of 50c and $1 a large bottle. Sold by druggists for 26 years.

FREE SAMPLES

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in America. If you have never used it and would like to sample it before buying, send your address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. SEES NO VICTORY FOR THE ALLIES THIS YEA

American Army Officer Just B from Mission at Front Tells a Graphic Story.

THE consensus of opinion among the military leaders of the Allies is that a decisive Allied victory cannot be obtained this year. This was the statement made yesterday by Capt. E. H. Lougher, a member of the commission sent by President Wilson to Europe to investigate the war conditions. Capt. Lougher, a recent visitor at Redondo Beach, is attached to the intelligence department of the American army and was the first American officer to arrive in this country direct from the scenes of the present big battles. He arrived in New York three weeks ago on a French convoy. The convoy was attacked by submarines on three different occasions, Capt. Lougher stated. One of the submarines was sunk and the ship narrowly averted being struck by a torpedo, which passed only about 100 feet from the vessel.

Capt. Lougher was formerly head of the Federated Colleges of India and of the India school system. He was chairman of the commission which was sent by India to China at the time of the Boxer trouble to investigate the opium traffic with China. It was the result of the work of this commission that a law was passed forbidding the import of opium to China for a period of ten years. Capt. Lougher was also prominent in prison reform work in the State of Michigan.

SOLDIERS RELEASED.

"The signing of the peace treaties by Germany with Russia and Rumania," Capt. Lougher stated, "released 2,600,000 German soldiers for service on other fronts. Some of these soldiers were sent to Italy, but the greatest number of them were transferred to the western front. It was because of this increase that the recent and present German offensive was undertaken.

"But the signing of the peace treaties with these countries," Capt. Lougher continued, "did not only mean the releasing of that many men for services on the western front, but also resulted in other tremendous advantages for the Germans. In the first place the critical food situation in the Central Empires was somewhat relieved and will be still more relieved in the future. The shortage of metals was also replenished, which fact has given Germany renewed energy. Another thing which is not often thought of is that there is a large man power in the new territories which Germany now controls. Although she may not, and probably will not, draft these men—the Ukranians and other Russians—in the German army, she can use these men to work in munition factories, in the fields and other work which would release that many German soldiers. There is even a possibility of Germany getting many mercenary soldiers from these territories. Russia has supplied mercenary soldiers before."

"What are the possibilities of a German victory?" he was asked.

NO GERMAN VICTORY.

"There is no possibility of a German victory," Capt. Lougher answered. "She tried all the force at her command and did not break the Allied line, and, knowing what

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing.

Alkali Makes Soap Bad for Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Every Man, Woman and Child Should Contribute to the Second Red Cross War Fund Campaign

"A Great net of Mercy drawn through an Ocean of Unspeakable Pain."

—The American Red Cross is the largest and most efficient organization for the relief of suffering that the world has ever seen.

—It is made up almost entirely of volunteer workers, the higher executives being, without exception, men accustomed to large affairs, who are giving their services without pay.

—Congress authorizes it.

—President Wilson heads it.

—The War Department audits its accounts, and every soldier and sailor, who has seen service, blesses it.

—Every cent that you contribute to the Red Cross War Fund goes for war relief.

—What are the few dollars that we can give compared to the lives of our boys who are at the front fighting for us?

—It is through the efforts of the Red Cross and the medical branches of the service that the percentage of wounded men who die has been lowered to 2 per cent.; whereas in the Civil War it was as high as 23 per cent.

—Give freely this week—do it quickly. Los Angeles has a quota of $750,000—just a few dollars from every one of us, if we all put our shoulder to the wheel. We should consider it a privilege to

As Surely as Come the Rare-June Days, Come the Brides in Sweet Attire!

—With betwitching seriousness they come into the picture—with its perspective of, perhaps, a simple room made to bloom with all the flowers of the Bride Month; or, perhaps, a dim chancel, melodious with organ whispers; or, it may be "his" company—for war brides are certain to be many this June.

—And whether she's to be a war bride and thus gowned in the simplest white frock, or whether it's to be a grand church wedding, and her gown must shine richly white in the church's half light—she must have a trousseau and it must be individual; it must bespeak her—and her wedding day!

—Silken undergarments and stockings were never more lovely than those which the Bride of this June may choose.

REGIMENT IN FULL WAR DRESS TO PARADE HE

Field Artillery will Hike from Kearny to Los Angeles.

PLANS are being mapped for the One Hundred and Forty-third Regiment of Field Artillery (the old First California) to hike to Los Angeles from its training quarters at Camp Kearny. The request of the Los Angeles Auxiliary to Battery F that the Fortieth Division's famous regiment be permitted to visit Los Angeles before its departure for the battlefields of Europe is before Maj.-Gen. Frederick S. Strong, and it is believed he will grant it. The artillerymen, many of whom are from Los Angeles and its suburbs, are wild for a "go" at the Boches, but they want their sweethearts, sisters, mothers and wives and male relatives to see them in their fighting clothes and their war equipment under actual working conditions, road dirt and all.

That Maj.-Gen. Strong is inclined to grant the auxiliary's request, which has the approval of the Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Woodman and the City Council, was indicated yesterday when Capt. H. G. Ferguson, the regimental-adjutant, and Acting Sergeant Edward Vail visited Los Angeles. They were on a detail to select camp of the American League season saw these teams clash: Three Hundred and Sixty-first Infantry and Three Hundred and Sixty-fourth Infantry, Southern California men; Three Hundred and Sixteenth Supply trains and Auxiliary Remount; Military Police and Forty-fourth Infantry; Three Hundred and Sixteenth Engineers and Division Headquarters; Quartermaster Corps and Three Hundred and Forty-sixth Field Artillery.

Each of the two leagues will stage five games on the following dates: May 22, May 29, June 5, June 12, June 19, June 26, July 3, July 10. Then some time in July the military "world's championship" will be decided.

Of course, the fastest team at Camp Lewis will be the divisional team, composed of well-known ex-leaguers.

"It isn't going to be any cinch making this division baseball team, I can tell you," is the way Charles Schmutz, former National League pitcher, put it this week, in speaking of the Wild West division team. Capt. James Scott, formerly of the champion White Sox, agrees with him.

Charles Mullen, also a former White Sox man, but who played with the New York Americans and other teams, is in charge of the squad.

MANY GOOD PITCHERS.

There are no fewer than ten good pitchers after berths on the division team, with places for but four or five, so it can readily be seen that Schmutz has it figured out about right. Among the diamond stars trying for the division team are: Joe Connolly, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, former Tacoma Tiger; Louis Guisto, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, first base, formerly of the Cleveland Americans; Walter Mails, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, ex-big league performer; Bill McIvor, Three Hundred and Sixteenth Engineers, pitcher, from the Northwestern League; Mark Higby, Three Hundred and Sixty-second ambulance company formerly of the Coast League; Charles Schmutz, pitcher, majors, Northwestern League; Howard Mundorff, Military Police, Coast League outfielder; Hap Meyers, Three Hundred and Twenty-second Field Signal Battalion, first base, Boston Braves; "Red" Oldring, just out of Officers' Training Camp, San Francisco.

Harrington, also an embryo officer, catcher, Olympic Club, San Francisco; Sergt. Ten Million, Three Hundred and Sixty-first Infantry, outfielder, Northwesetrn League; M. H. Shriver, officers' school graduate, infielder, University of California; Lafayette, formerly with Cincinnati, and who soon will report at the camp; Roy Sharp, training camp man, infielder, University of California; "Midget" McKay, also a camp man, infielder, University of North Dakota; Lowell Romney, who graduated from the camp, outfielder, former Utah Aggie star; Tom Hickey, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, pitcher; Ed Klein, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry; Hal Chase, Three Hundred and Forty-seventh Field Artillery; Ted Allen, Three Hundred and Forty-seventh Field Artillery; Capt. "Death Valley" Jim Scott, Chicago White Sox, pitcher; Jim Reardon, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, catcher; La Mara and Holloway, One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade, utility.

A Los Angeles man now in the service, saw the former newsboy in the division adjutant's office. But now he is in a uniform. As soon as he was old enough, Roth enlisted and was sent to Fort McDowell. He is in the miscellaneous detail of the Camp Quartermaster's Corps, and is doing his share.

STILL A SPEEDER.

The army has done wonders for young men who had not "found themselves." About a year ago Sidney F. (Red) White of Ocean Park piloted a high-powered car on a wild trip through the streets of Santa Monica. He and his car went right through the front window of a house and woke up the occupants at 3 o'clock in the morning. He was told he could not run an auto for a year. He was in the East when he enlisted and went to Camp Funston. He was there a week when he was made a sergeant. Then he became an instructor and his name was among the successful in the training camp list from there recently. He was appointed a second lieutenant and now the judge in Santa Monica can feel better that he did not give the young man a more severe punishment. "Red" White is making good in the army.

Maj.-Gen. Strong is glad to have wholesome women come to camp, for their presence has an uplifting effect upon the men. Their hands usually are rough from doing their own washing and generally travel on the train so they can knit all the way. Nations may war against each other, and the whole world fight, but the women always knit and each loop is a whack at the Kaiser.

Gen. Strong recently declared that a woman's presence, causes the average man to look spick and span. They make the Sammy feel that his folks back at home are with him and the sameness of things is broken by the spice of home life. Every man is homesick some time and the first months of training are liable to bring this on, especially when there are no Huns in front of one to break the monotony of things.

There is the delicate mother, whose thin fingers have been pricked by many needles, but on her faded coat is a Red Cross button. When the war reaches the mother it is a sign that it will be hard on the Kaiser. But others come to camp, such as the woman who comes in her own electric car.

The "mending mothers," who have taken up a long felt want here in mending clothes for the men in camp, have adopted the whole division. Twice a week they ride over from La Jolla and each day mend all repairable spots on the men's uniforms, their socks and underwear. They work hard all the time and have accomplished a great deal in the few weeks they have been carrying on the work.

When the men of the Sunshine Division march against the Hun foe, no matter in what country, they will be thinking of the kindly and inspiring women who visited the cantonment during their stay here. Battery F, men, One Hundred Forty-third Field Artillery, from Los Angeles, speak loudly in praise of the woman's auxiliary to that unit. The men in that battery have been provided with all manner of helps in their soldier life. Time was when a soldier carried the favor of his lady into battle with him, but nowadays the favor is generally a hand-knitted sweater or a wristlet, something that counts.

Gen. Strong has said that the women who have sons have not sought the soft jobs for their sons, but rather would like to see them doing their duty in the trenches. That is what the men want themselves, to get somo sort of fighting action. When the order to go comes there will be more than 20,000 happy Sammies and they will be cheered up by the women—if they need cheering up.

Women workers in the camp are not being overlooked as the books arrive. A library station has just been established in the new nurses' quarters at the Base Hospital. A library had already been placed in the old quarters. A station has also been established at the telephone exchange.

The reading habit among the soldiers continues to grow. Complete records for the camp for March show that nearly 17,000 books were borrowed. Nearly half this number were borrowed from the main building.

LOOKING ON AT CAMP KEARNY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP KEARNY, May 18.—"When the triumphant American troops march into Berlin, I feel sure they will be led by officers mounted upon horses from the Camp Kearny Remount Depot," said Capt. P. L. Loriot, head of the French mission here, in talking at a lively festival at the Remount Depot. The day was a general holiday. Maj.-Gen. Strong attended and took occasion to praise the work of Maj. John R. Valentine, commanding the station, pointing out that inspectors have told him the station is one of the best in the country. In the evening the men loaded "eats" into a truck and went to La Jolla for a dinner-dance. This affair was attended by Gen. Strong, Brig.-Gen. Richard W. Young, Lieut.-Col. William C. Webb and members of Gen. Strong's staff.

Still Going Up.

Corp. Vernon Snively, son of former Chief of Police Clare Snively, has been promoted again. He is now a sergeant in Battery F, One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery, the Los Angeles battery.

Pigeons with Colors Safe.

Attention has been called by the army authorities to an act recently passed by Congress. This law makes it a crime to capture, shoot, kill, or possess homing, or carrier, pigeons owned by the United States or bearing a government mark, such as "U.S.A." or "U.S.N." Mere possession is prima facie evidence of guilt and it is incumbent on the person finding these pigeons to notify the nearest military authorities.

Acting Physical Director.

Guy C. Harris of Pasadena, is acting physical director of the Y.M.C.A. in camp pending the arrival of Joseph Pipal, the recently appointed director.

Guests of Gen. Strong.

Col. Alfred M. and Mrs. Hunter were guests this week of Maj.-Gen. Strong. Col. Hunter is in the Coast Artillery and is stationed at Fort Miley, San Francisco.

SEVEN-MILE TRIBUTE TO WOMEN'S WORK IN WAR.

Los Angeles Amazed by Size and Beauty of Red Cross Pageant.

C. Hoffman, supervisor of the Los Angeles Settlement House, sitting on the front seats of the big truck, represented Columbia and held the reins which guided nine pretty girls in the garb of the Red Cross, all of whom preceded the float.

MEXICAN SOCIETY.

Seven Red Cross nurses administered to a wounded soldier on the float of the Mexican Society. In addition, Samuel M. Reachy, Chancellor of the local Mexican Consulate, a representative of the Mexican government, sat on the float, together with C. C. Moreno, secretary of the society, under whose direction the entry was made.

ARMENIAN RELIEF.

A unique float was that of the Armenian relief, which portrayed a scene in the desert with the Red Cross aiding the suffering Armenians. George Innacious was in charge of the float on which were riding a dozen women and children, all of whom were being administered to by a Red Cross nurse.

LOYAL NEGROES IN LINE.

The negroes of America, always loyal to Old Glory, as shown in their history during the Civil War and the Spanish-American War, and their response to calls for enlistment in the early part of the present war, also are serving their country in the Red Cross work. One of the features of the parade that won hearty applause yesterday was the contingent of negro women represented in their various auxiliaries. One of these was the Phillis Wheatley auxiliary of the Santa Monica Bay Chapter of the Red Cross. It had forty-five members in line, with Mrs. E. J. Peters, its president, heading them.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

One of the auxiliary sections that received warm applause was that of the First Methodist Episcopal Church. Its banners headed the various sections showing their work in the preparation of surgical dressings, bandages, knitting, hospital garments, French and Belgian relief, etc.

VAN NUYS BUILDING.

The Van Nuys Building auxiliary showed an organization that reaches every section of that large structure. The men and women marching in this section carried a banner which read: "We work all day and give our evenings. Can't you give an hour?"

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.

A brave showing for Red Cross work was made by the students of the State Normal School. "Uncle Sam" led this contingent, and then followed the Normal Auxiliary, every member knitting as she marched. Then came the salvage squad, the gardening squad, each girl carrying a hoe or rake; the surgical dressings squad, the poster squad, the sewing for war relief squad, etc.

SPIRITUALIST SECTION.

The Spiritualist section headed its long line of Red Cross auxiliary members with a banner which read: "We have seven Red Cross ambulances at the front."

BEAUTIFUL ELK FLOAT.

Built in the shape of a Red Cross, made of red carnations, and outlined by white daisies, the immense float of Elks, Lodge No. 99 of this city, was one of the most impressive of the entire parade. In the middle of the cross stood a full-grown stuffed elk, flanked on one side by a soldier, and on the other by a United States marine. Eight red crosses stood on the back and sides of the float, a streamer from each being attached to the antlers of the elk. The float was designed by Harry S. Duffield, Deacon Pyle, Jack Pyle and Louis Bristol.

Preceding the float were thirty Elks, led by Exalted Ruler Paul D. Robinson and Martin A Berne, in charge of parade formation. Michael F. Shannon was head of the parade committee.

STAGE WOMEN'S RELIEF.

Patriotic actresses of the vicinity entered a float for the Stage Women's War Relief, the new national organization of theatrical people which is aiding the Red Cross. The float, on which were seated well-known motion picture and stage stars, among them Gladys Brockwell and Bertha Mann, represented a Roman council chamber with the women doing patriotic work. On the side were posters relating to the Red Cross, and a banner which floated over the entry bore the slogan, "The Red Cross is helping us. It is up to us to help it."

SCHOOL SECTIONS.

The county schools vied with those of the city in their fine showing, and the many schools represented were headed by a banner which announced that the county schools have 14,000 Junior Red Cross members.

The larger city schools were represented by marching bodies, and then came other schools of the city where Red Cross work has been carried on—and that means all of them—with a boy selected from each school to carry its banner.

The Westlake School for Girls had one of the best marching companies in the line.

HOSPITAL SOCIETY.

The American Women's Hospital Society entered two symbolical floats, one of which showed the Red Cross workers at home, and the other a scene in Europe. Peasants, dressed in their native costumes, were crouching before Black Terror, and Belgium sat, crushed and suffering, among the wreckage of her former home. On both were slogans pertaining to the necessity of women doctors abroad.

Y.M.C.A. FLOATS.

Two floats were entered by the Y.M.C.A. One depicted a dugout in France, in which was located a dressing station. Wounded soldiers were being cared for, and others were resting. The other float, representing a typical Y.M.C.A. hut in Flanders, housed a jazz band of soldiers and sailors.

AMERICAN RED STAR.

A spectacular entry was that representing the American Red Star, and made by Col. Anita Baldwin, who is the head of this movement on the Pacific Coast. A huge red cross, covered with carnations, occupied the center of the float. At the fore was Joan of Arc, represented by Miss Dexter Baldwin. At the base of the red cross were four Red Cross nurses, in costume. Each held in leash one of the famous war dogs from the Baldwin kennels. The attendants of Joan of Arc were Col. Baldwin, Miss Helen Fiske, Mrs. Nayan Hyde and Mrs. Claire Hosler Coombs. The float was drawn by six of Col. Baldwin's blooded black horses, harnessed in white and gold.

REDONDO BEACH.

The two floats of Redondo Beach, decorated in American colors, carried a number of pretty girls, all of whom were knitting or making bandages.

LADIES' BAND.

The truck of the Ladies' Band, an organization of forty pieces under the direction of Miss Halle Beare, was decorated in white, on which appeared a number of small red crosses. Miss Emma Silva, as the Goddess of Liberty, waved to the crowds from the running-board of the car, which was driven by Mrs. Jacob Cohn, a Red Cross nurse.

ECHO PARK FLOAT.

Women of the Echo Park Auxiliary knit and sewed on a float decorated with red carnations, around which was a white border, and from which flew American flags. The sides of the truck were completely banked with red, and a canopy of green shaded the driver.

SYRIAN AUXILIARY.

The entry of the Syrian Auxiliary was a large truck decorated with the American and Allied colors on which a number of Syrian children and women were seated knitting.

THE EAGLES.

On the Eagles' float, their bird was perched above a cluster of greenery, overlooking the world. He was surrounded by a number of women Red Cross workers, with Columbia facing the eagle.

"POSTER" CHILDREN.

Bringing up the rear of the parade was the automobile of J. W. Gratz of Compton, which was decorated with the American colors. Little Miss Liberty, in the person of Josephine Elizabeth Gratz, 6 years old, stood on a platform holding aloft her torch and with her foot on a German dachshund. Riding in the car were a number of the children who are to take part in the play "Poster Folk of the Magic Peanut," which is to be given at the Friday Morning Club for the benefit of the Red Cross. All the children were garbed as Red Cross nurses.

MANY STRIKING FEATURES.

The representation of Red Cross auxiliaries was astounding to one who has not been in close touch with this work. In the line of parade were auxiliaries from many churches, clubs, societies, schools and community sections of the city. Each had some individual feature in the parade, and many of them were striking in their character. One of the interesting features was the Junior Red Cross Auxiliary work represented in the parochial schools. The Catholic schools represented included the Cathedral High School and the parish schools of St. Michael's, Sacred Heart, Our Lady of Lourdes, St. Thomas, St. Joseph, St. Vincent, St. Brendan's, St. Patrick's and St. Cecelia's.

FINE FOR RED CROSS.

Judge Jackson is doing his bit toward raising money for the Red Cross. His method is unique. A receptacle stands in his courtroom, and if attorneys are late or for other good and sufficient reasons, he makes a nominal fine which they drop into the receptacle. He has another receptacle at the Union League, where he resides. Both boxes have yielded a total of $300 for Red Cross work.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK

of the germs of many diseases such as Grip, Malaria, means for all of us—fight or die. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if the liver is inactive and the blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in the germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spots," or soil for germ-growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself.

It cures troubles caused by torpid liver or impure blood. All druggists, liquid or tablets.

Send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.—"I have used Doctor's Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for eczema, and found it very good."—MRS. ANNIE ALBRIGHT, 3524 Sixth avenue.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—"I will gladly tell of the relief and cure Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gave me. I was sick with troubles of stomach, liver, etc., and La Grippe with all its attending ailments. When all else failed Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did the good work. I also took 'Pleasant Pellets' for biliousness, with grand success. I write with gratitude to tell others of the relief that is in store for them. Do not delay but hasten to get the above remedies if suffering from any indisposition." — SAMUEL KALISKY, 978 Euclid Avenue.

For War Service.

MANY RESPOND TO CALL OF THE NAVY RESERVES.

A BIG electric sign that looks like a lighthouse, on the third floor of the Union Oil Building, bears the inscription, "U. S. Navy." This sign is the destination of hundreds of young men these days who are responding to a call for men for navy service.

So many men are needed and so many responding that the local station is a busy place. A special detail of men from the Naval Reserve Training Station at the harbor is on duty at the station to give first hand information about the reserves and to help out in the work of enrolling more men.

Many persons have the idea that the reserve is a landlubber organization and some have voiced the opinion that it is only for those who want a soft job in home waters. Not so. The Naval Reserves are available for any service the Navy Department desires of them and no one can enroll in the reserves without signing for general service whenever needed.

The reserves are enrolled for four years and serve only during war time. In time of peace they are on inactive duty or may be discharged at request. All men enrolling in the reserves are sent home to wait orders for a call to duty.

Men of draft age may enroll but must obtain release from local board, which may be secured if the men are not called for the existing current quota.

WAR HARD ON HORSE RACING.

Former American Trainer is Back from Europe.

Tells of His Adventures in Two Big Cities.

"Boots" Durnell Hopes to Go to Bucharest Again.

Charley ("Boots") Durnell, former well-known owner and trainer of race horses, and at one time associated with the late John W. Gates, the millionaire plunger, in his betting transactions, is in Los Angeles for a visit to his sister. Mr. Durnell came here from San Francisco, where he arrived several days ago from Japan.

For the last ten years, until Rumania entered the war, Mr. Durnell managed and trained the horses of Alexander Marghiloman, Rumania Premier, at Buzeu, near Bucharest. During that time the American won many of the big derbys and stake races at Vienna and Budapest. At the Alexandria last night, Mr. Durnell had the following to say about his experiences after the Germans took Bucharest:

"Some six days before the Germans came, the King of Rumania had been staying at the Prime Minister's chateau at Buzeu. When the Germans were within ten miles of the city, I left on the same train with the King and his suite. The party numbered about 300 and three trains were used so as to take care of the baggage and other necessary things to take along.

PRIVATE CAPITAL URGED TO BUILD AT HARBOR.

Proposal that Government Find Homes for Ship Workers Disfavored.

PLANS to ask government aid toward housing shipworkers are being frowned upon in the harbor district. The business men and civic and commercial organizations do not look with favor on the plan to ask government help to build houses.

"We should be helping the government now," said Secretary Tilburne of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce yesterday. "Los Angeles has plenty of capitol to house shipworkers with profit and there is no necessity for calling on the government. In the first place, we should have to show a dire necessity for government funds before we could hope to get money at this time. Los Angeles is in no such financial straits that it needs Federal aid at this time in a proposition that offers good returns for private capital. It is time for the property owners and the capitalists to be doing something for themselves."

While there are over 5000 men riding to and from their work at the shipyards each day because of lack of houses in the harbor district, it is believed that these can be better housed through the efforts of private capital than in any barracks that the government would be likely to build. San Pedro and Wilmington are growing rapidly and there is every reason to believe that the growth is permanent and substantial.

BUNGALOW COURTS.

Bungalow courts will best solve the housing problem in the harbor district, according to George A. Damon, city planning expert of Pasadena, expressed in a talk before the Civic League of San Pedro.

"Scientific investigation has proven that a laboring man cannot afford to pay more than 25 per cent. of his income for rent," said he. "It has also been proven that it is not good business to put an improvement on a lot that costs more than twice the value of the real estate.

"This means that a man earning $100 a month should not be expected to pay more than $25 a month for a house costing $2000 and that it should be built on a lot that costs no more than $1000. It therefore follows that lots must be sold for less than $1000 with good streets, water, lights and gas.

TRANSPORTATION NEED.

"Until means of local transportation to new tracts with water, gas and good streets are provided, there are few sections in the harbor district where such lots can be found. The bungalow court, therefore offers the best solution of the housing problem at the present time. When these are provided, it is probable that new tracts will be opened up where houses can be built and sold on installments, but there seem to be no such opportunities in the harbor district now."

Although not keeping up with the demand for houses, building operations at the harbor are increasing steadily, the permits averaging about $15,000 a day at the present time. The increase in building is reflected in the increased consumption of water and the number of new services installed. The number of new services installed has jumped from thirty-two in January to eighty-one in April.

Famous in a Day for Her Beautiful Complexion, Oatmeal Combination Do

A Free Prescription Does Its Work Overnight. You Can Prepare It at Home.

New York: It is my own discovery and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results, says Mae Edna Wilder, when her friends ask her about her wonderful complexion and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. You can do the same thing if you follow my advice, she says. I feel it my duty to tell every girl and woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it. All this change in a single night. I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical prescription that removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription which you can prepare at your own home is as follows: Go to any grocery and get ten cents worth of ordinary oatmeal, and from any drug store a bottle of derwillo. Prepare the oatmeal as directed in every package of derwillo and apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin appear transparent, smooth and velvety. I especially recommend it for a sallow skin, freckles, tan, sun spots, coarse pores, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the face, hands and arms are heir to. If your neck or chest is discolored from exposure, apply this combination there and the objectionable defect will disappear as if by magic. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this oatmeal-derwillo combination will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours

Hugh J. Crawford of and the San Pedro the honor of imposing sentence in the enforce- Gandier ordinance. Judge made good his promise to law strictly by giving a of an alleged blind pig, the police in San Pedro, jail.

White added two jail sen- 180 days each, to the strengthened them with that no fines, or parole were to by persons found guilty the law.

Then there was a little break in "conviction line" of the new records. In Judge Chesebro's court a man convicted of blind-pigging was given a $500 fine, on the grounds that his health demanded some consideration. He had two attorneys and a lot of expert testimony. Judge Richardson lost a little of his batting average when he imposed a thirty-day sentence, and later on reduced it to ten days.

Another 180-day sentence was imposed in Judge Richardson's court. Then three sentences of fines followed. In this connection it was pointed out by the judge who gave the fines as sentences that the cases in hand were not fully in the scope of the Gandier law. Some were merely "unintentional" violations of the law, the judges say, while others did not come fully under provisions of the law as applied to the piggeries.

Two of the cases were not brought into court, as no complaint was filed. In two cases bail was forfeited. One case, grown famous as the great sandwich mystery, lingered for three weeks, a stumbling block in the otherwise even path of the judges, and after due, careful and concerted consideration by the five magistrates, sitting "en banc," was duly, carefully and considerately dismissed. It was the case around which revolved—it still is revolving, by the way—the mooted and momentous question, "Why is a sandwich, or when is a meal?"

It's not a question of food administration as much as one of liquor consumption. It was put up to the judges in the shape of a test case to determine whether serving liquor with a sandwich playing the part of a meal, was to be allowed in the Los Angeles cafes, hotels, and clubs.

The answer to that question, the judges finally decided in a four-page opinion several days ago, is, in effect, "As you like it." If a person is hungry, a sandwich is a meal. If he is not, then it is only "subterfuge." Appetite, digestion, good faith, money consideration and "other circumstances" enter into the riddle. The squad boys took one look at the decision and quit making arrests of that type. Apparently they are still trying to figure out what it's all about. The rest of the cases are pending.

THEY PREFER JURIES.

The trend in court fashions, so far as the liquor cases are concerned at the present time, remains strongly inclined toward the jury panels. The courts have had their say in the newspapers, and their "say" did not sound alluring to the persons whose liberty may have to depend on the interpretation of a little thing like a liquor ordinance. So every one, almost, who is being brought into court on these charges, demands a jury trial. The next month really will tell the story of the new law's enforcement from the court point of view.

As hope springs eternal in the human breast, the jury trial is the one thing the blind piggers, real, potentional and unfortunate, are looking forward to; but according to the police, they are doomed to a disappointment. The bright young men of rubber heels and a keen scent for sightless animals, such as are grouped under Sert. Hackett's banner of "Dryness that is Dry," are going to see to it that their cases are complete. They all are experts in gathering evidence that will "keep" and stand the test, and they have no fear of having "reasonable doubt" multiplied by twelve.

With the exception of San Pedro, where Capt. Spellman and his men raided an alleged blind pig near the water front, and a few scattered cases in the sub-station districts, the location of the places raided and where arrests were made under the Gandier ordinance since April 1, show a rather restricted district.

A LITTLE TOPOGRAPHY.

Roughly it can be said to be bounded by Central avenue on the east, the plaza on the north, Main street on the west and Twelfth street on the south, with a few scattered locations like so many strands running to the residential districts from the narrow rectangle. Charles Catsworth also claims the honor of being a part of the geometrical design.

The old property clerk's quarters at the City Jail Building, now converted into a store room, resemble a liquor warehouse, and smell like one. Barrels of all sizes and varieties, demijohns that range in sizes from the "baby boys" to five-gallon type, cases of all sorts and descriptions, oblong, square, tucked with excelsior and just slung together with a few nails and wire, but each and every one filled with bottles and flasks—all these form a unique arrary and temptation to the venturesome trusties and other enterprising individuals—who take the trouble to trace the familiar odor of old to its lair.

In its splendid isolation, piled high without regard to their condition and previous state of servitude, the "evidence" represents the temporary spoils of the blind pig war, and incidently, thousands of dollars.

BARRELS AND CASES.

There are bonded and sealed barrels of whisky, bearing the proper government stamps, and others that were inspected with considerable interest by Federal authorities. There are barrels of wine and cases of brandies, beer, wine and malt tonic, in addition to sundry bottles and glasses containing all the way from champagne to a ginger special. All were taken in raids by the metropolitan squad, and practically all are being held as evidence in pending cases.

The exact value of the liquor stored in the Central Station and the substations, including the harbor station, probably will approximate $10,000, the officers estimate. What the ultimate disposition of it will be, depends upon the courts and what policy will be adopted by the police so far as the disposal of it is concerned.

The potential value of the wet goods now in custody of the police, however, forms a subject for intensive speculation by the department mathematicians and patrolmen with time hanging heavily on their shoulders.

"Now there are about 125 drinks to a gallon, the way the blind pigs are selling the stuff," is the method employed by some of these minions of the law in calculating what might have been, "and at 20 cents a drink, it would bring $25 a gallon. With fifty-two gallons to the barrel, there will be about 7500 drinks, amounting to $1300 from each barrel," and so on.

The bottled goods offer just as prominent a field of potential wealth and speculation, but from a real police point of view it is just so much evidence. And it is evidence that fast is being accumulated, while the trials of the suspects arrested in connection with the evidence are pending.

So far, only a few out-and-out blind pigs were raided, the police say, but the officers are striking their stride and are picking up speed at the rate of two or three good raids a day.

But while they may lack a little in quantity, there is no end of variety when it comes to the methods and conditions that are employed and overcome. The raiding officers have uncovered places of all sorts. Malt tonic "moles" that stretched into otherwise dry territory, were bottled up by the raiding officers, places where behind every stack of sandwiches lurked a "cup that cheered," panels that had a hollow sound and a strong "kick" behind them, and basements where potatoes in sack lots guarded the liquor from casual observation.

In one place the officers arrested a bartender whose pockets bulged with bottled goods, and who did a rushing business on soft drinks, the effect of which was not merely psychological. This place was not far removed from a barber shop where "lady barbers" gave tonsorial treatments and supplied the deserving ones with credentials that fetched the "soft drinks" with the mellow touch.

"It's all in the day's work," the officers declare as they help unload truckload after truckload of evidence they bring in and store it away to be fed into the legal machinery now being oiled up for the task of grinding all these cases into the answer to the question. How is Los Angeles enforcing its liquor ordinance?

ON FIFTY BASEBALL DIAMONDS THEY PRACTICE TO BEAT FRITZ.

Camp Lewis Big League Season Opens and Ball Players Train Muscles that will Find Use Later in Tossing Grenades in No Man's Land.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP LEWIS (Wash.) May 18.—The National and American baseball leagues in the East are satisfied with a mere-eight teams to the league, but not so with the "National" and "American" leagues at Camp Lewis, which will battle through a season with ten teams each. World's series, too, in the East are staged some time in September or October, but at Camp Lewis the pennant winners of the two major leagues will fight for the premier honors in July.

The league season at Camp Lewis started May 15 with a bang, when each league staged five contests. The games will be played every Wednesday, the last playing date being July 10. Fourteen diamonds have been selected at the camp for the use of the leaguers, and they are expected to be in use most of the daylight hours that the players are off duty.

There are a mere forty diamonds left for the army of other players who are not fast enough for the big leagues, and baseball men say that this summer will see the largest number of players in a given area that the popular diamond sport has ever known. On league schedule days it is a safe bet that there will be as many as forty "regular" games in progress. Then there will be the countless others of the "sand-lot" variety.

TO SETTLE DISPUTES.

A baseball commission, consisting of Capt. James Scott, former White Sox pitcher; Capt. A. Wattelet, commanding Co. A, Three Hundred and Sixty-fourth Infantry, a Los Angeles unit, and Capt. T. G. Cook, division athletic officer, has charge of the leagues and will settle all disputes. It's something like the National Commission which cuts the world's series melon back East every fall. Capt. Wattelet formerly played professional baseball, too, and before he entered the army was the manager of the Victoria (B. C.) team of the Northwestern League.

There are said to be something like thirty men at Camp Lewis who are widely known as professional baseball players, and probably as many more who have been good enough for league berths. Then there are any number of men who played on fast semi-pro teams and college and university nines. With this material to choose from, some fine baseball will be seen at the cantonment this summer.

In the opening of the National League season at camp, the Three Hundred and Sixty-second Infantry met the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, California men; the machine gun battalions, the Three Hundred and Sixteenth Ammunition trains; the Three Hundred and Forty-sixth Field Artillery, the Ordnance Department; the One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade, the Three Hundred and Forty-seventh Field Artillery; the Three Hundred and Sixteenth Sanitary trains the Three Hundred and Sixteenth Field Signal Battalion.

BUSY FILM MAN.

William Emery, ex-film actor, is one of the busiest men at Camp Lewis despite the fact he has only been here a few weeks and no longer can work in the pictures. He came from Southern California and was assigned to the depot brigade. He has already organized a 10-piece orchestra and teaches three French classes every week. Emery plays first violin in his orchestra, which has already appeared to advantage in a number of brigade programmes.

In his barracks in Eighteenth Company, One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade, Emery has what is probably his most prized possession. It is a violin 107 years old. Emery has had the instrument for fifteen years and would not part with it for any price. He paid $126 for it in Winnipeg and only obtained it at so low a figure because its owner was penniless.

The violin was made in Germany, but has been away from that company so long that it is now a very loyal American instrument, Emery says. Emery is going to send the instrument back to his home in California as he is afraid that army life will not agree with it.

WARLIKE FAMILY.

Machine-gun company, Three Hundred and Sixty-fourth Infantry, has a swarthy little Southern Californian, whose comrades say he holds the record for number of relatives engaged in the world war. The young soldier is Private Cocchi and he has twenty-four relatives, including brothers, and first and second cousins serving in the war.

One brother has been in the Italian army since February, 1913. He has taken part in many skirmishes against the East Africans, who were armed by German spies. After one year's service, he contracted fever, but soon recovered and was put back on the active list. This brother fought in several battles in the Alps against the Austrians. He is now serving on an Italian's general staff.

A second brother, called in January, 1917, fought at the Isonzo River in August of last year and later at Monte Santo, a big Austrian stronghold, was wounded in a bayonet attack. He was wounded in the left hand and in the chest, but has fully recovered and again is on the firing line.

Private Cocchi has ten first and nine second cousins in the Italian army and two first and one second cousin in the American army. Only one of the cousins has been wounded, and he is now on the road to recovery in an Italian hospital. Cocchi is company horseshoer and says that if he ever gets a crack at the Kaiser with his hammer it will be "goodby" Bill!"

If such a thing can be possible, the Camp Lewis Y.M.C.A.'s are becoming more popular with the men every day. They are centers for nearly every kind of activity and are utilized to capacity by the men in khaki. Here's a day record at Y.M.C.A. building No. 6, which will give an idea of what takes place in one of these centers during a few hours:

One hundred and fifty dollars worth of Thrift Stamps were sold. Over $600 worth of money orders were sold. The canteen sold $75 worth of confectionery and other goods. Eleven hundred soldiers attended one of the movie shows. One thousand apples were sold. One hundred and fifty men attended an evening service. The athletic equipment was in use all day. The fellows who played the Victrola decided that these were the most popular records: "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly," "I Want to Go Back to Michigan," "Back Home in Tennessee."

ORPHEUS FOUR RETURNING.

The Orpheus Four of Los Angeles, who have been singing throughout the East for the last year, in Chautauqua concerts and for the Y.M.C.A. war work, will return to Los Angeles shortly for a month's vacation. Then they will resume their work for the Y.M.C.A., singing at the army camps and other places.

LAND ENTRYMEN TO GET LEAVES FOR WAR WORK.

THAT the Department of the Interior is doing its "bit" for the relief of homestead entrymen is evidenced by a new and important ruling regarding entrymen who desire to accept temporary employment in the shipyards or munitions plants, just received by Receiver Mitchell of the Land Office.

Under the present law leaves of absence are limited to sickness, accident or the loss of crops by fire or other casualties. But the department has ruled that leaves of absence may be secured for not more than one year at a time for those entrymen who desire to assist the government in ship construction or the manufacture of war munitions. The effect is to protect the entry from contest for abandonment or failure to cultivate or make improvements contemplated by the homestead law during the period of suspension.

The entryman gets no credit for constructive residence during the period when he is enagaged in this class of war labor, and in order to secure the benefit of the new ruling he must submit an affidavit giving the nature of the employment, where and by whom employed, and the probable duration of the employment, and in addition the entry must be plainly identified, accompanied by the certificate of his employer showing that his services are needed in the war work.

No leaves of absence will be granted, but entrymen desiring to assist the government in shipbuilding or work in munitions plants may do so by following the line of action marked out. The time they are so engaged is simply carved out of the period during which they must complete their proofs.

Would Go Back.

CRIPPLED BY HUN GAS, NOW SEEKING REVENGE.

SPENDING most of his time in a wheel chair, out on the green lawns of the County Hospital grounds, Sergt. Albert E. Wood, of the Tenth Battalion, Canadian Overseas Service, is dreaming of the time when he will be strong enough to start back to his home in Toronto.

Sergt. Wood is paralyzed from his waistline to his toes. He is a victim of a German gas attack, on the battlefield of St. Julian, in Flanders, and was also injured seriously in a hospital at Vlamertingue, which was blown up by the Huns.

Sergt. Wood enlisted at Winnipeg on August 14, 1914, and very soon thereafter went over with a Canadian contingent. He saw a much active service before the gas attack that invalided him. He was sent to the Vlamertingue Hospital, and had only been there a short time when the place was blown up. Fifty people were killed, and this soldier came out of the wreck in such condition that he was sent home. Hearing of the climatic advantages of Southern California, he came here, but his funds becoming exhausted, he had to leave the hospital where he was a patient and was sent to the County Hospital.

"The people of Los Angeles have been very kind to me," said Sergt. Wood yesterday," and I could not have received better care and attention than I have had at the County Hospital. As soon as I am able to stand the trip, I shall go back to Canada, where I must appear again before a military medical board."

Sergt. Wood has had seven brothers-in-law in the overseas service. One has been killed in battle, and another has lost his hearing from gun-shock off with your finger and there you are—pain-free and happy, with the toe as smooth and corn-free as your palm. "Gets-It" is the only safe way in the world to treat a corn or callus. It's the sure way—the way that never fails. It is tried and true—used by millions every year. It always works. "Gets-It" makes cutting and digging at a corn and fussing with bandages, salves or anything else; entirely unnecessary.

HE DARKENED HIS GRAY HAIR

They Used to Call Him Grandpa; Now They Call Him Kid.

Tells How He Did It.

Mr. J. A. McCrea, a well-known resident of San Francisco, who was called Daddy and Grandpa on account of his white hair, and who darkened it with a simple home-made mixture, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. My friends now call me 'Kid.'"

LIKES 'EM WHOLESOME.

GOLDFISH TELLS WHY GOLDWYN MAKES CLEAN FILMS.

Courage is required of the motion picture producers with millions of dollars at stake, who refuse to yield to temporary tendencies for the debasement of screen stories.

The realization of this is forcefully brought home through an interview with Samuel Goldfish, president and principal owner of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who is now in Los Angeles, closing certain new contracts and arrangements for the production of many of the company's pictures here.

"You can realize better some of the larger problems of production at this moment, when I tell you some of our Goldwyn experiences," said Mr. Goldfish. "Always in motion pictures there has been and is an unhealthy undercurrent. Always there have been and are, in production, purely commercial factors with no concern for art or refinements. They are the money-making elements, who want to get their financial returns quickly. They know that there is a public that rushes in to see pictures of unhealthy moral tone, and even some of the better elements of picture-goers can be brought into theaters to see such pictures, by means of exploitation. There are likewise exhibitors who exist by showing this type of pictures. The occasional monetary successes they score have a tendency to undermine the resolution of men of finer purpose, who, although they own theaters, resist the temptation of temporary profits that can be realized from salacious or unclean pictures.

"When I first entered the film business, I determined that I would never seek profits through the production of prurient pictures. I don't believe it is possible for a producer to build up a permanent success with stories that affront the majority of clean-minded Americans. This is essentially a clean and healthy country. Outside of certain very large cities, there is no audience awaiting smut and suggestiveness. And there is instant resentment against those who try to force such things on our millions of young people.

Mr. Goldfish stated that Willard Mack has assumed personal charge of Goldwyn's scenario department, with his offices at the company's big studios in Fort Lee, N. J. Mr. Mack has already selected and secured for production the first three stories for Pauline Frederick, who has recently formed her own productions company.

Hart's New One.

William S. Hart, Artcraft star, is commencing work on his new picture, the nature of which is not disclosed, beyond the fact that it is a western, and is adapted from a well-known magazine story. Katherine MacDonald is Mr. Hart's leading woman in the production.

Russians Lose Tobacco.

It's an ill-wind blows nobody any good, and the soldiers and officers of William S. Hart's regiment, the gallant One Hundred Fifty-ninth Infantry, stationed at San Diego, and otherwise known as "The Bill Hart Two-Gun Men," have in part no less a catastrophe than the Russian fiasco, to thank for the fact that they are now or will soon be the happy possessors of 6000 packages of Bull Durham tobacco.

This is how it happened. Mr. Hart promised his "boys" they should have the tobacco. Then suddenly the government commandeered the Bull Durham Tobacco Works for war purposes, and Mr. Hart was troubled as to how he was going to get the tobacco, even considering going out with his trusty professional revolvers. Then, up in San Francisco, he met a United States customs official who stated he had in charge 6000 pounds of Bull Durham tobacco destined for the Russian government. But, he justly inquired, who is the Russian government? Nobody could find out. So, after infinite yards of red tape had been spun off, it was decided the tobacco might be consigned to Mr. Hart, who forthwith saw to it that the soothing weed went to the place where it would do the most good, and the One Hundred Fifty-ninth, with every puff, are blessing Bill Hart.

Will Aid War Work.

Very much in earnest are the film folk in regard to their proposed war aid society, judging from the circular sent out by the self-constituted committee of directors, who are promoting the organization, and which circular is said to have been sent to every one of the thousands of picture workers in this part of the country. The circular accompanied an invitation to be present at the mass meeting called by the committee, to be held at Clune's Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, May 26, and is as follows:

"In spite of the fact that the motion-picture people have made greater individual efforts and secured greater results in war relief work than any other body of people in the country, we have dissipated our strength through channels not identified with our profession and thus lost our identity.

"No individual should seek credit in this critical time, but being so powerful a body, the industry must be represented in war relief work or be open to the suspicion that its members may be shirking their duty.

"We have all been buying Liberty Bonds and giving our money, old magazines and newspapers and books and clothes and kid gloves and tin foil to different organizations, which was the right thing to do, but it was not proving to the world that our profession was an active war relief unit.

"If we had bought all our Liberty Bonds as a motion-picture industry, we would have made a showing to startle the world. If we had pooled all our other resources of entertainment, personal appearances before the public and donations of anything and everything, distributing all articles and contributions from a motion-picture headquarters, we would have quashed forever any attempt to prove us undesirable citizens.

"Let us give still more, but let us correct our method. Let us give the motion-picture industry the good name it deserves and have it respected.

"The help of each individual will be indispensable, and a way to help is within the reach of everyone, from the manufacturers down to the newest recruit in the ranks of the extra people.

"Every one has something he or she can make, or give up or collect from others—if it is only tin foil or tin cans. The point is for every one to determine NOW to be a soldier in this army and not a slacker—for every one to start today to help supply the needs of the fighting army—and for everybody to do EVERYTHING through a MOTION-PICTURE WAR RELIEF ASSOCIATION!

"Get enthusiastic over this suggestion and enthuse those around you, and then write a word of encouragement to
"MOTION-PICTURE WAR RELIEF COMMITTEE."

Miss Bara in Sizzler.

And now Theda Bara, Fox star, having finished work as a dove-like heroine, will go back to the sizzling drama. She will commence work tomorrow or Tuesday on a new picture, in which, as she plays a trained nurse at the beginning, she will have a fine start at vampiring.

Miss Bara will go to Catalina to make most of the scenes in the new story, which is an original scenario written especially for Miss Bara by a New York woman writer.

The Fox star left Friday for San Diego, where she will remain until Monday. Yesterday she visited Camp Kearny and saw her regiment put through its paces, the occasion being regimental field day of the One Hundred Fifty-eighth Infantry. She presented each of her godsons with a charm consisting of bronze pins patterned after the twelve signs of the zodiac, each soldier receiving the sign applicable to the date of his birth.

Reicher Goes East.

Frank Reicher, Metro director, left last Monday for New York, after having worked at the Metro's western studios in Hollywood since early in January, directing Edith Storey in two pictures, "The Claim" and "Treasure of the Sea," and Viola Dana in "The Only Road."

Before leaving Mr. Reicher was presented by his Metro associates with a wrist watch. He will direct Metro stars in New York.

Newman Goes Abroad.

E. M. Newman, lecturer and producer of the Newman Travel Pictures, is now touring the Allied countries as a commissioner of the United States government for the study of industrial and social conditions behind the battle lines. He

NO FIRECRACKER PLAY; THRILLS JUST THE SAME.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

IT HASN'T any plot; it hasn't any firecracker battle scenes; it's a war play without any suffering heroine, without any noble hero, whose white soul and white flannels alike come through battles unscathed, without any villain carrying a bomb in one hand and a lighted cigarette in the other.

Yet it's a thrilling war play all the same—with a significance so penetrating, action so vital, truthful events so skilfully welded that it holds you breathless through the unfolding of every inch of its ten reels!

That is "My Four Years in Germany," the picturization of James W. Gerard's famous book, which will open at Clune's Auditorium tomorrow, under the auspices of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which has been running in New York to huge audiences during the past twelve weeks, and which still is running there with no signs of quitting.

"My Four Years in Germany" marks a distinct departure from all that has heretofore been achieved on the screen. It is the first time that an historical narrative has been acted out before a motion-picture camera without an admixture of fiction. It is a striking, historical document, a plain record of facts minus fiction, which none can misunderstand, of the madness of a dynasty drunk with autocracy. Nothing that can happen will ever be able to efface this photographic record which will be handed down to future generations. After seeing the film, President Wilson said: "Let the American people see this picture and Kaiserism will be wiped from the face of the earth. This picture will live as long as there is an American Republic."

Ambassador Gerard enjoyed the rare opportunity of having an inside view of the workings of the Prussian court during four of the gravest years since the beginning of time; and from his vantage point behind the scenes he watched the Kaiser's autocratic military machine during more than two years after the breaking out of the world war. A feature of the picture and of the book alike is the showing of the clumsiness, haughtiness and suspicion on the part of the imperial German government toward the representatives of a powerful neutral nation never before equalled in diplomatic history. The scenario of the picture sticks to the original text without a departure.

When certain old-school statesmen questioned Gerard's permitting the visualization of his book, Ambassador Gerard said: "I want to have "My Four Years in Germany" filmed because I want to bring home to the American people the gravity of the situation. It is necessary to do something to try to overcome the apathy and indifference. German treachery must be exposed, and I know of no better way to get the attention of the multitude than by means of the films, which daily speak to millions where the printed page reaches merely thousands."

Never before has a diplomat published his reminiscences while they were "hot"—that is, immediately on retiring from office—because it was not regarded as ethical. But a new occasion called for a new precedent. The world wanted an inside view of German life, an intimate angle on the abnormal German mentation. Uncle Sam's representative at the court of Berlin was one of the few men equipped to give this. Comes now the film version of his book, which has proved to be one of the most important diplomatic disclosures ever shown during any war.

This plotless play also has no "star," but the actors are all of high standing. In fact, one eastern critic said that if he didn't know better, he would almost believe that the Kaiser and his entourage had knocked off warring for a day to have their pictures taken; and the portrayer of Ambassador Gerard looks enough like him to be Gerard himself, some persons, indeed, insisting that the diplomat did appear, but was too modest to admit it.

LOCKWOOD DEPARTS.

The latter part of this wek the Yorke-Metro company, headed by Harold Lockwood and his director, Fred J. Balshofer, will leave the studio in Hollywood for a location trip which will take them off the coast, near Monterey, where the exteriors for the new Lockwood vehicle, "A King in Khaki," will be photographed.

William J. Bowman, formerly director for the American, Vitagraph, and other companies, has been engaged to assist Fred. Balshofer in making the next Lockwood picture.

Grauman's.

"Resurrection," with Pauline Frederick, the star, which will be given its introduction to Los Angeles patrons of the silent drama tomorrow at Grauman's, is the picturization of one of the most celebrated works of the famous Russian literary genius, Count Leo Tolstoy. The stage version of the novel was for years the successful starring vehicle of Blanche Walsh, one of the best-known actresses of her day. It is a strong photoplay, dealing mostly with peasant life and satisfyingly tinged with romance. The superb Paramount production is greatly vivified with the portrayal of one of the most important scenes depicted on the Grauman stage, during which time an apropos musical rendition is offered.

Tally's Broadway.

Clara Kimball Young, whose fame as a screen actress of the highest merit rests on her characterizations of women buffeted by the storms of fate before they can reach their harbors of peace and love, comes to Tally's Broadway again next week in the filmed adaptation of Elinor Glyn's well-known and popular story, "The Reason Why," a vehicle that gives the beautiful star full scope for her talents. A noteworthy feature of this latest feature from Miss Young's own studios lies in the creation by Lucile (Lady Duff

The Big-hearted.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK.

HER LAST CONCERT, THEN GOVERNMENT SERVICE.

The boundless art of Schumann-Heink and the broad, generous spirit in which she has lavished it upon audiences throughout the length and breadth of the land have endeared her more closely to American hearts than words are able to describe. So much has been written of this illustrious contralto that words of praise are only idle repetition.

In a long career brilliant with honors and triumphs, perhaps her greatest accomplishment has been the bringing of music to thousands of people in remote cities and towns; the interest and enthusiasm aroused by her magnetic personality and great art marked the beginning of musical appreciation in many cities that today enjoy and support the finest concerts. Her appearance always awakens new enthusiasm and calls forth fresh admiration; her concerts in every large city are fixed annual events in the musical calendar.

Mme. Schumann-Heink,
Contralto, Shrine Auditorium, matinee, May 25.

She is scheduled for one concert in this city, Satuday afternoon, May 25, at Shrine Auditorium. Tickets are on sale at the Trinity box office. This will be her last appearance here for a year, as on the first of June she goes into the United States government service, singing throughout the East for the various interests of Uncle Sam. The concert will be given in Shrine Auditorium to accommodate the many hundreds who will journey from all over Southern California to bid adieu to this well-loved singer and patriotic citizen.

The programme, almost entirely in English, is given herewith:

First group: Recitative and aria from "Rinaldo" (in Italian) (Handel;) "My Heart Ever Faithful" (Bach,) "Thy Beaming Eyes" (MacDowell,) Aria from "Le Prophete," "Ah Mon Fils" (Meyerbeer;) second group: "Dawn in the Desert" (Ross,) "Danny Boy" (Weatherby,) "Cry of Rachel" (Salter,) "Cradle Song" (MacFadyen,) "Bolero" (Arditi;) group of piano solos by Miss Evas: "Liebestraum" (Liszt;) "To a Water Lily" (MacDowell,) march, "Grotesque" (Sinding;) fourth group, "A Soldier's Dream" (Byron Gay,) "At Parting" (Rogers,) "Kerry Dance" (Molloy,) "When the Boys Come Home" (Speaks,) "The Star Spangled Banner" (Key.)

Paulist Choristers Tonight.

So popular have the Paulist Choristers become in Los Angeles that a third concert is announced to be given at Shrine Auditorium this evening. This organization is unique in annals of American music. It was originated fourteen years ago by Father William J. Finn, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. After his graduation he spent two years abroad studying the methods in vogue with the famous choir directors of England and the continent. Six years ago he went abroad once more, taking with him his Paulist Choir to compete for the prize offered by the French government. There, in competition with over 400 other choirs and with such judges as Massenet, Saint-Saens and Puccini, they won the much-coveted honor.

Since January 1 they have been touring this country, the entire net income from the concerts going back to the French war relief. This is no small item, when it is remembered that the boys are billeted in the various towns in which they sing, leaving the railroad expense as the biggest item.

In Southern California, during the past week, they have sung in San Diego, Long Beach, two concerts in Santa Barbara, Pasadena, the concert tonight at Shrine making the third in this city. The programme this evening will be entirely different from either of the others, and the price of admission will be popular, the large seating capacity permitting many cheap seats.

The complete programme follows:

"Kyrie" (Terry,) "Angels We Have Heard" (Traditional,) Joseph McManus, soloist; "Praise the Lord" (Rachmaninoff,) "Deep River" (Engle,) Master Tobin, soloist; "Salve Regina" (Waddington,) Mr. Dunford, soloist; "Chant Indoue" (Rimsky-Korsakoff,) Master Dolan, soloist; "Emitte Spiritum" (Schnetky,) "A Bowl of Roses" (Clark,) two solos by Masters Probst and Finn; "Kolyada" (Rimsky-Korsakoff,) "Toreador Song" (Bizet,) "Lift Thine Eyes" (Logan,) solo by Mr. Egan; "Inflammatus" (Rossini,) and "The Star Spangled Banner" (Key.)

Cadman to Give "Shanewis."

Those who had the fortune to hear the interpretative recital of the Cadman opera, "Shanewis" (The Robin Woman,) as presented by Ethel Graham Lynde, operaloguist, and the American composer himself, at the Friday Morning Club recently, will be delighted to learn Plays.

HUSBAND, WANDERER.

WITH A LOT OF PRETTY GIRLS IN VAUDEVILLE.

Morosco.

For the first time in the Southwest, George V. Hobart's famous fun show, "What's Your Husband Doing" will be presented at the Morosco, beginning with today's matinee. Hobart wrote one of the biggest successes of the past five years in "What's Your Husband Doing?" and incidentally it was one of the biggest successes in the career of a writer who has been furnishing laughs for the public for the past twenty years. There will be several features of this production which is being made at the Morosco, under the direction of Fred J. Butler that will prove of unusual interest. The cast will include Dora Mae Howe, Frank Herbert, Alberta Ballard, Marion Vantine, James Corrigan, Elmer Ballard, Joseph Eggenton, David Butler, Robert Lawlor, Emily Pinter and Charles Buck.

Orpheum.

Probably the most notable bill of the season so far is that which is to open at the Orpheum Monday matinee, May 20, in that it brings here the very topnotch of all interpretative dancing acts, which has the added value of being made up of Los Angeles girls, presented first by a local woman, and still under her management, though now grown so great that it is proffered under the direction of Martin Beck, himself. The Greater Morgan Dancers are looked upon as the acme of interpretative terpsichorean artistry; their work has met with the approval of the masters of art in its several phases of form, color, action and ensemble, and the work of the girls has been pronounced perfect by the highest authorities. Another sensation in the new bill, though along another line entirely, is the appearance of Tarzan, the marvelous chimpanzee. A third feature act is the return of Percy Bronson and Winnie Baldwin, prime favorite couple, who also call this home. They bring their 1918 songology. "Exemption" is the playlet. Francis Yates and Gus Reed have an oddity called "Double Crossing;" Tom Dingle and Sam Ward have combined as the odd long fellows, and Gwen Lewis is an English girl who makes her local debut next week here, with Leona LaMar, the only act holding over.

Mason.

"The Wanderer," which has simply had to stay another week at the Mason in order to accommodate disappointed crowds, who could not get in to see it the first week, is so lavish a spectacle that one review of it never could cover all its attractive and impressive features. Second impressions, and even third and fourth impressions, keep recurring to mind, which is evidence a plenty that much more has been left unsaid than even the praise which was bestowed upon it contained. "The Wanderer," marks an epoch in the theatrical life of America. Messrs. Elliott, Comstock and Gest may well be excused if they point with pride to it. David Belasco never before so plainly showed himself the master stage director.

Pantages.

"Wedding Shells," a musical comedy featuring Bill Armstrong, Charles Fisher, Joseph Simons, Miss Cecil Renard and a big beauty chorus, will be the headliner of the coming week's Pantages bill, opening Monday matinee. "Wedding Shells" is the latest creation of Marty Brooks, well known New York producer of musical comedies and vaudeville acts. "Wedding Shells," is beautifully costumed, with many lightning like changes of costume made by the entire company. The Musical Maids, a bevy of pretty girls, will stage a musical melange. Early and Laight have a comedy sketch that boils over with laughter. Frank Morrell, the California minstrel will play a return engagement on next week's bill. Grew-Pates and Company have what they claim to be the act entirely different. William S. Hart, in "Tables Turned," a western melodrama, will be the added film attraction of the week.

Burbank.

Five high-class vaudeville acts, headed by the Borzaga Trio, instrumentalists and songsters, together with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in a screen version of the story, "With Neatness and Dispatch," will complete next week's bill at the Burbank, opening Monday matinee. "With Neatness and Dispatch" is a comedy drama that provides Bushman and Miss Bayne with roles admirably suitable to their respective talents, and the production should prove to be one of the best yet thrown on the Burbank screen. Other vaudeville acts, in addition to the Borzaga Trio, will be: Gay and Gilrose, in a comedy oddity, "The Future Woman;" Bob and Peggy Valentine in their original singing playlet, "Vital Statistics;" Billy Murray, singing comedian, and Andrew Kelly in mirth and melody.

Hippodrome.

In these strenuous war times, the Hippodrome management believes that people want to be entertained, that they want to laugh and forget their worries for a little while. The bill which starts tomorrow matinee has been arranged with that idea in mind. "The Campus Girls" heads the programme and is a miniature musical comedy which will furnish a riot of fun. Then the Gpysy Dancing Trio show a variety of steps. A musical absurdity, put on by Frank Berry and Ed Nickerson will call forth all the laughs at your command. Able performers who know what the public wants and proceed to give it to them are the McCarvers. Scamp and Scamp, two acrobatic comedians, perform what seem to be the impossible. Triller has an act that it is not fair to divulge. He calls it "A Study in Rags." An extra feature is a skit presented by a representative from the Twelfth Naval District. The act is called "Stand by the President," and has been authorized by the Navy Department and the commandant of the Twelfth Naval District.

WHEN DID YOU WRITE YOUR MOTHER LAST?

A Humerous Sob Story.

BY ADDISON LEWIS,
In "Reedy's Mirror."

Collins was a bum. He roamed about the country on foot or abaft the rods of a wind-jamming freight car, summer and winter, a restless spirit whose sole desire was to get food enough to keep him alive and beer as often as possible. He never stayed in one place long enough for people to inquire why he hadn't a regular job—because engraven on his soul was a solemn pledge: "Never Work."

If he had ever condescended to do a little manual labor, no matter how spasmodic, he would have elevated himself to the status of a tramp. A tramp will work, if there is no other way out. But a bum—never. He will sooner throw himself under a Mogul engine, and sue the railroad company for damages.

The lowest, the most good-for-nothing among us, say the psychologists, have some capability, some potential power, to do a certain thing better than the average of our fellows. Collins could hold the attention of a camp-fire gathering of twenty derelicts for hours at a time with his yarning. He was known as the best yarn-spinner among the disorganized cohorts of Coxie's army from the Battery to the Golden Gate. They called him affectionately "The Ace-high Liar." His yarns, he swore, were honest experiences from his own life, but as a matter of fact, as all his pals knew, they were 75 per cent. Collins's purple imagination. But they listened to him, and so passed many an hour otherwise weary and profitless. He could take them with him over the broad, cracked face of the earth. He could make them believe they were Alaskan gold hunters, explorers in the Uganda, English tars, seal hunters in the Bering Sea, plantation proprietors in Hawaii, Mexican arms smugglers—anything that came into his round red head.

In another stratum Collins might have been a successful writer of "red-blooded" fiction or thrilling scenarios for the movies. He had been the hero of a thousand unfilmed reels. He was a Lafcadio Hearn for description, a Jack London of narrative, a veritable Dickens for pathos. Nor is this saying much. Most every man has known some unheralded genius like Collins, blissfully ignorant of his own possibilities and therefore three times blessed.

One raw night toward the end of November, Collins and a pal were hugging a radiator in the lobby of the Salvation Army Hotel in Minneapolis. Why they happened to be there I don't know. Where they had come from, I don't know. But they were there. And it was good to feel the hot pipes pressed against their shivering bodies. They were cold and hungry and miserable; the joy of life had fled from their souls. Under their breath they cursed each other, God and the weather. The other occupants of the room were peacefully reading or pretending to read. But Collins and his companion were in no mood for reading. Their seared, yellow eyes roamed about the room. They craved whisky, raw whisky. It would ease their troubles and give them a temporary feeling of well-being. But they were flat broke, they couldn't borrow, and the days of begging had been fruitless. Their eyes continued to roam squintingly, maliciously. They hated the fatuous air of comfort exhaled by the rest of the room.

"Hell!" muttered Collins.

His pal did not answer. Collins turned to look at him. A single tear was trickling down his unshaven cheek. He was a young man almost half Collins's age. His gaze was fixed on the opposite wall, and Collins, following its direction encountered a placard in large letters: "When Did You Write Your Mother Last?"

"Got the homesick bug, eh?"

The other furtively drew his hand across his cheek. "Forget it!" he said hoarsely.

"I don't blame ya, after what we've had handed us the last two days." There was rough kindness in Collins's tone.

"Forget it!" repeated the kid. After a moment he added sullenly, "Guess I'll read. Nothin' else for a guy to do in this damned hole." He shuffled over to a table and sat down.

Collins hugged the radiator several minutes longer. Then he turned up his coat collar and left the room. He had decided to make another try at pan-handling the price of a drink.

When he came back his pal was hunched over the table with a pencil and a scrawled sheet of paper. Collins sat down opposite. A genial glow tingled inside him. His errand had been successful.

"Obeyin' orders?" he asked jovially, raising an eyebrow toward the placard. The kid ignored him. He was writing feverishly. Collins sat still, regarding the placard with half-shut, musing eyes. " 'When Did You Write Your Mother Last?' " he murmured. His lips twisted in a bitter smile. He put his arms on the table and pillowed his head on them. The stillness of the room was broken by three soft sounds—the click of the battered clock on the wall, the heavy breathing of the readers, and the tap, tap of the kid's pencil on the paper. Five minutes passed. Collins felt a heavy hand on his shoulder.

"You can't sleep here," said the room clerk.

"Eh?" said Collins, "I was asleep."

The clerk started back to his desk. Collins got to his feet and followed him. "How much for paper and an envelope?"

"Two cents."

Collins produced the coins. He went back to the table and sat down. After an infinite search he brought forth a stump of a pencil from somewhere in the depths of his being. He began to write. Slowly, haltingly, with a prodigious effort the words came. His copious speaking vocabulary, adapted to the demands of a hundred varying tales of his roving life, suddenly seemed to have vanished before the task of composing a simple letter. It was years since he had written anything but his name. But gradually, slowly, the page began to fill with crazily-fashioned words looking like so many hen tracks.

After a time, Collins glancing up found the kid's eyes on him.

"Who the hell you writtin' to?"

"Who the hell's askin'?"

Deliberately the kid leaned over and read the superscription—"Dearest Mother." Collins jerked the letter away. "If you weren't my pal, I'd bean you for that."

The kid was shaking with silent laughter. "Writin' to your maw! Forget it. Yer dippy."

"Who're you writin' to?"

"What's it to yuh?"

"Don't kid me, cully. You're writin' to yourn. There's ain't no law 'gainst my doin' the same."

"Forget it!" said the kid. "You never had no maw. Tole me yerself you was brung up in an orphan pen."

Collins failed to answer. He was suddenly busy with his writing. It was true, Collins had never known a mother. But that fact had never bothered him and it did not bother now. For his fervid imagination was aglow visualizing a perfect mother—his mother, to whom he was pouring out his heart in a badly scrawled letter—abasing himself before her love, which he was sure had followed him over his long, starved years of wandering; castigating himself in the light of her certain forgiveness. He blessed her in words, wrung from the depths of his soul, that he had never revealed to any man; begged her still to cherish her faith, that he knew had many times been sorely tried, for soon he was coming home. Home—to her.

The kid had long ago finished his letter and gone to his bunk when Collins wrote: "Affecshunitly, your son" and tucked the letter away in his coat.

It was only a few days later that Collins, attempting to jump the bumpers of a moving freight, missed his footing on the ice-sheathed metal and fell. He was badly crushed and died before he was found. There was no one to mourn him. The kid and he had since quarreled and parted company. But he earned a front-page story the next day in a great metropolitan daily. A shrewd reporter had come into possession of his precious letter, and it appeared in full, verbatim, under the title "Tramp Dies With Unmailed Letter to Mother." And many eyes in the great city blinked for a moment with suspicious moisture when they read. And several wanderers on the face of the earth recalled with a start the long time it had been since they had written their mothers.

Some of these, with the story still before them, half unconsciously reached for their check-books. And that evening before the type metal which had stamped the story on their awakened memories had been melted to be shaped again into the next day's murder, grand ball or clothing advertisement, a little fund had been raised to save what remained of Collins from the potters' field.

So it came to pass, on the following afternoon, a forlorn little undertaking "parlor" was made sadly gay with flowers from nameless givers, while "Spieler" Hanks, the leathern-lunged street-evangelist, said a few words above Collins's coffin in a voice strangely modulated.

When the kid many miles down the line read the account of this unusual occasion in a tattered, battered, week-old edition, borrowed from a brakie, he drew his hand across his tobacco-stained mouth and grunted in amazement.

"For de love o' Mike! Dat guy couldn't quit kiddin' even when he croaked. A whole town full o' weepin' nuts is just fallin' all over demselves paying respects to dat good-for-nothin' old hobo. Oh, Collins! Oh, boy!"

And he slapped his leg and went off into a paroxysm of laughter.

EDUCATIONAL.

Harvard's military activities next year will be greatly widened in scope. Announcement has already been made by the university that new courses in military science are on the programme for next fall and now comes the additional statement that some of the work will have to do with the artillery arm. Yale, of course, will remain the great artillery college of the country, says the Boston Transcript, and Harvard probably will continue to be most widely known for its infantry training, but those men who want artillery drill will be able to get it at Cambridge.

The senior class of Wellesley College has voted to eliminate the usual commencement festivities in June and devote the fund set aside for this purpose to the purchase of Liberty Bonds and surgical dressings. The concert, senior play, garden party and float, long regarded by students and alumnae as the attractive events of commencement week, will be dropped this year, and all of the graduating ceremonies, including the baccalaureate sermon, will take place on Friday, June 14.

Plans for democratizing University of Minnesota sororities, so that every girl in the institution may become a member of one of the Greek letter societies if she desires, have been tentatively approved by the Pan-Hellenic Council, a sorority representative body, by President M. L. Burton of the university, by E. E. Nicholson, dean of student affairs, and Miss Gertrude Beggs, dean of women. The approval means the sorority as an organization of exclusiveness will pass out at the end of the present school year unless all concerned change their minds.

Columbia's new requirements for the degree in medicine will go into effect next September. Two years of college work and four years of medical school study will no longer be sufficient. Hereafter the candidate must also spend a year in hospital service under the direction of university professors.

More intensive military training is to be instituted at Wesleyan University. It is planned to devote ten hours a week to the work and all those in the battalion will be allowed to drop one three-hour course in order to compensate for the extra time spent in drilling. This new schedule will last until the final examination period when all drilling will be stopped.

The 100 drafted men who are to be given intensive technical training at Tufts have arrived at the college. West Hall, one of the dormitories, will be used as a barracks.

Final assurance that Williamstown will have a reserve officers' training camp this summer has been given as a result of a meeting of representatives from seven New England colleges. Gen. Pew, who acted last year as superintendent of the Williams summer camp, will again have charge of the work.

Spring gardening has commenced at Vassar and forty students a day are now working in the college gardens. This work is to last until summer, when regular farming will begin. In connection with this work, Mrs. Frances Liggett has offered a farm at Stone Ridge, N. Y., for summer cultivation by Vassar farmers.

Another name was added to Amherst's roll of honor when Charles W. Chapman, Jr., of Waterloo, Iowa, of the class of 1918, met his death in an aviation fight over the German lines. Chapman left college last spring for ambulance work, but in the fall transferred to aviation. After training all winter he received his commission only a month and a half ago. He was the first member of the present senior class to die in action.

McGill University, Montreal, hereafter will admit women to the study of medicine and dentistry.

Former President William H. Taft has accepted the invitation of the faculty to give the Cole lectures at Bowdoin College next fall.

NOTED SINGER'S LAST CONCERT.

that the performance is to be repeated for the general public at Ebell Club House, Tuesday evening, May 28.

Mrs. Lynde, whose clever "readings" of old and modern operas has given her a unique position in Los Angeles and the West, was chosen by Mr. Cadman to interpret his most successful opera. As the libretto was written by Nelle Richmond Eberhart, Cadman's collaborator, who has located in Hollywood, and deals with a story of California and Oklahoma, the entire score having been penned in Los Angeles, a great deal of local interest is naturally attached. And since the work has had such a splendid presentation and success at the world's greatest operahouse in New York, those of the many friends of the composer and his librettists who could not hear the work done in New York are now privileged to attend a piano and verbal analysis on May 28.

In order that most music lovers may be able to attend during these times of demand, Mr. Cadman has placed the tickets at a very modest sum. They are to be had at the Birkel Music Company's store or at the door on the evening of the recital.

Matinee Musical Club.

An excellently presented musical programme was enjoyed by the members of the Matinee Musical Club on Thursday afternoon, the artists being the Gregg-Stearns Trio, whose work individually and ensemble was a delightful treat.

It is said that first impressions are the most lasting. In the case of Miss Elsa Cohn, one is immediately impressed by her personal charm, poise and a certain delightful positiveness that suggests capability. She has a voice of extreme richness and power. Edgar Vance accompanied Miss Cohn.

The first of the series of Liberty teas to be given by the club will be at the home of Mrs. Caroline Eager, Inglewood. For information regarding it, call Mrs. Joseph Zuckerman, 41732.

Eunice Landrum in Programme.

Eunice Landrum, pianist, will give her third annual recital at the Ebell Club Auditorium on Friday evening, May 24, at 8:15. The programme features numbers by Chopin, Wieniawski, Beethoven, Poldini, De Bussy and Liszt. Miss Landrum is

ARBUCKLE'S IDEA OF TAKING A GOOD

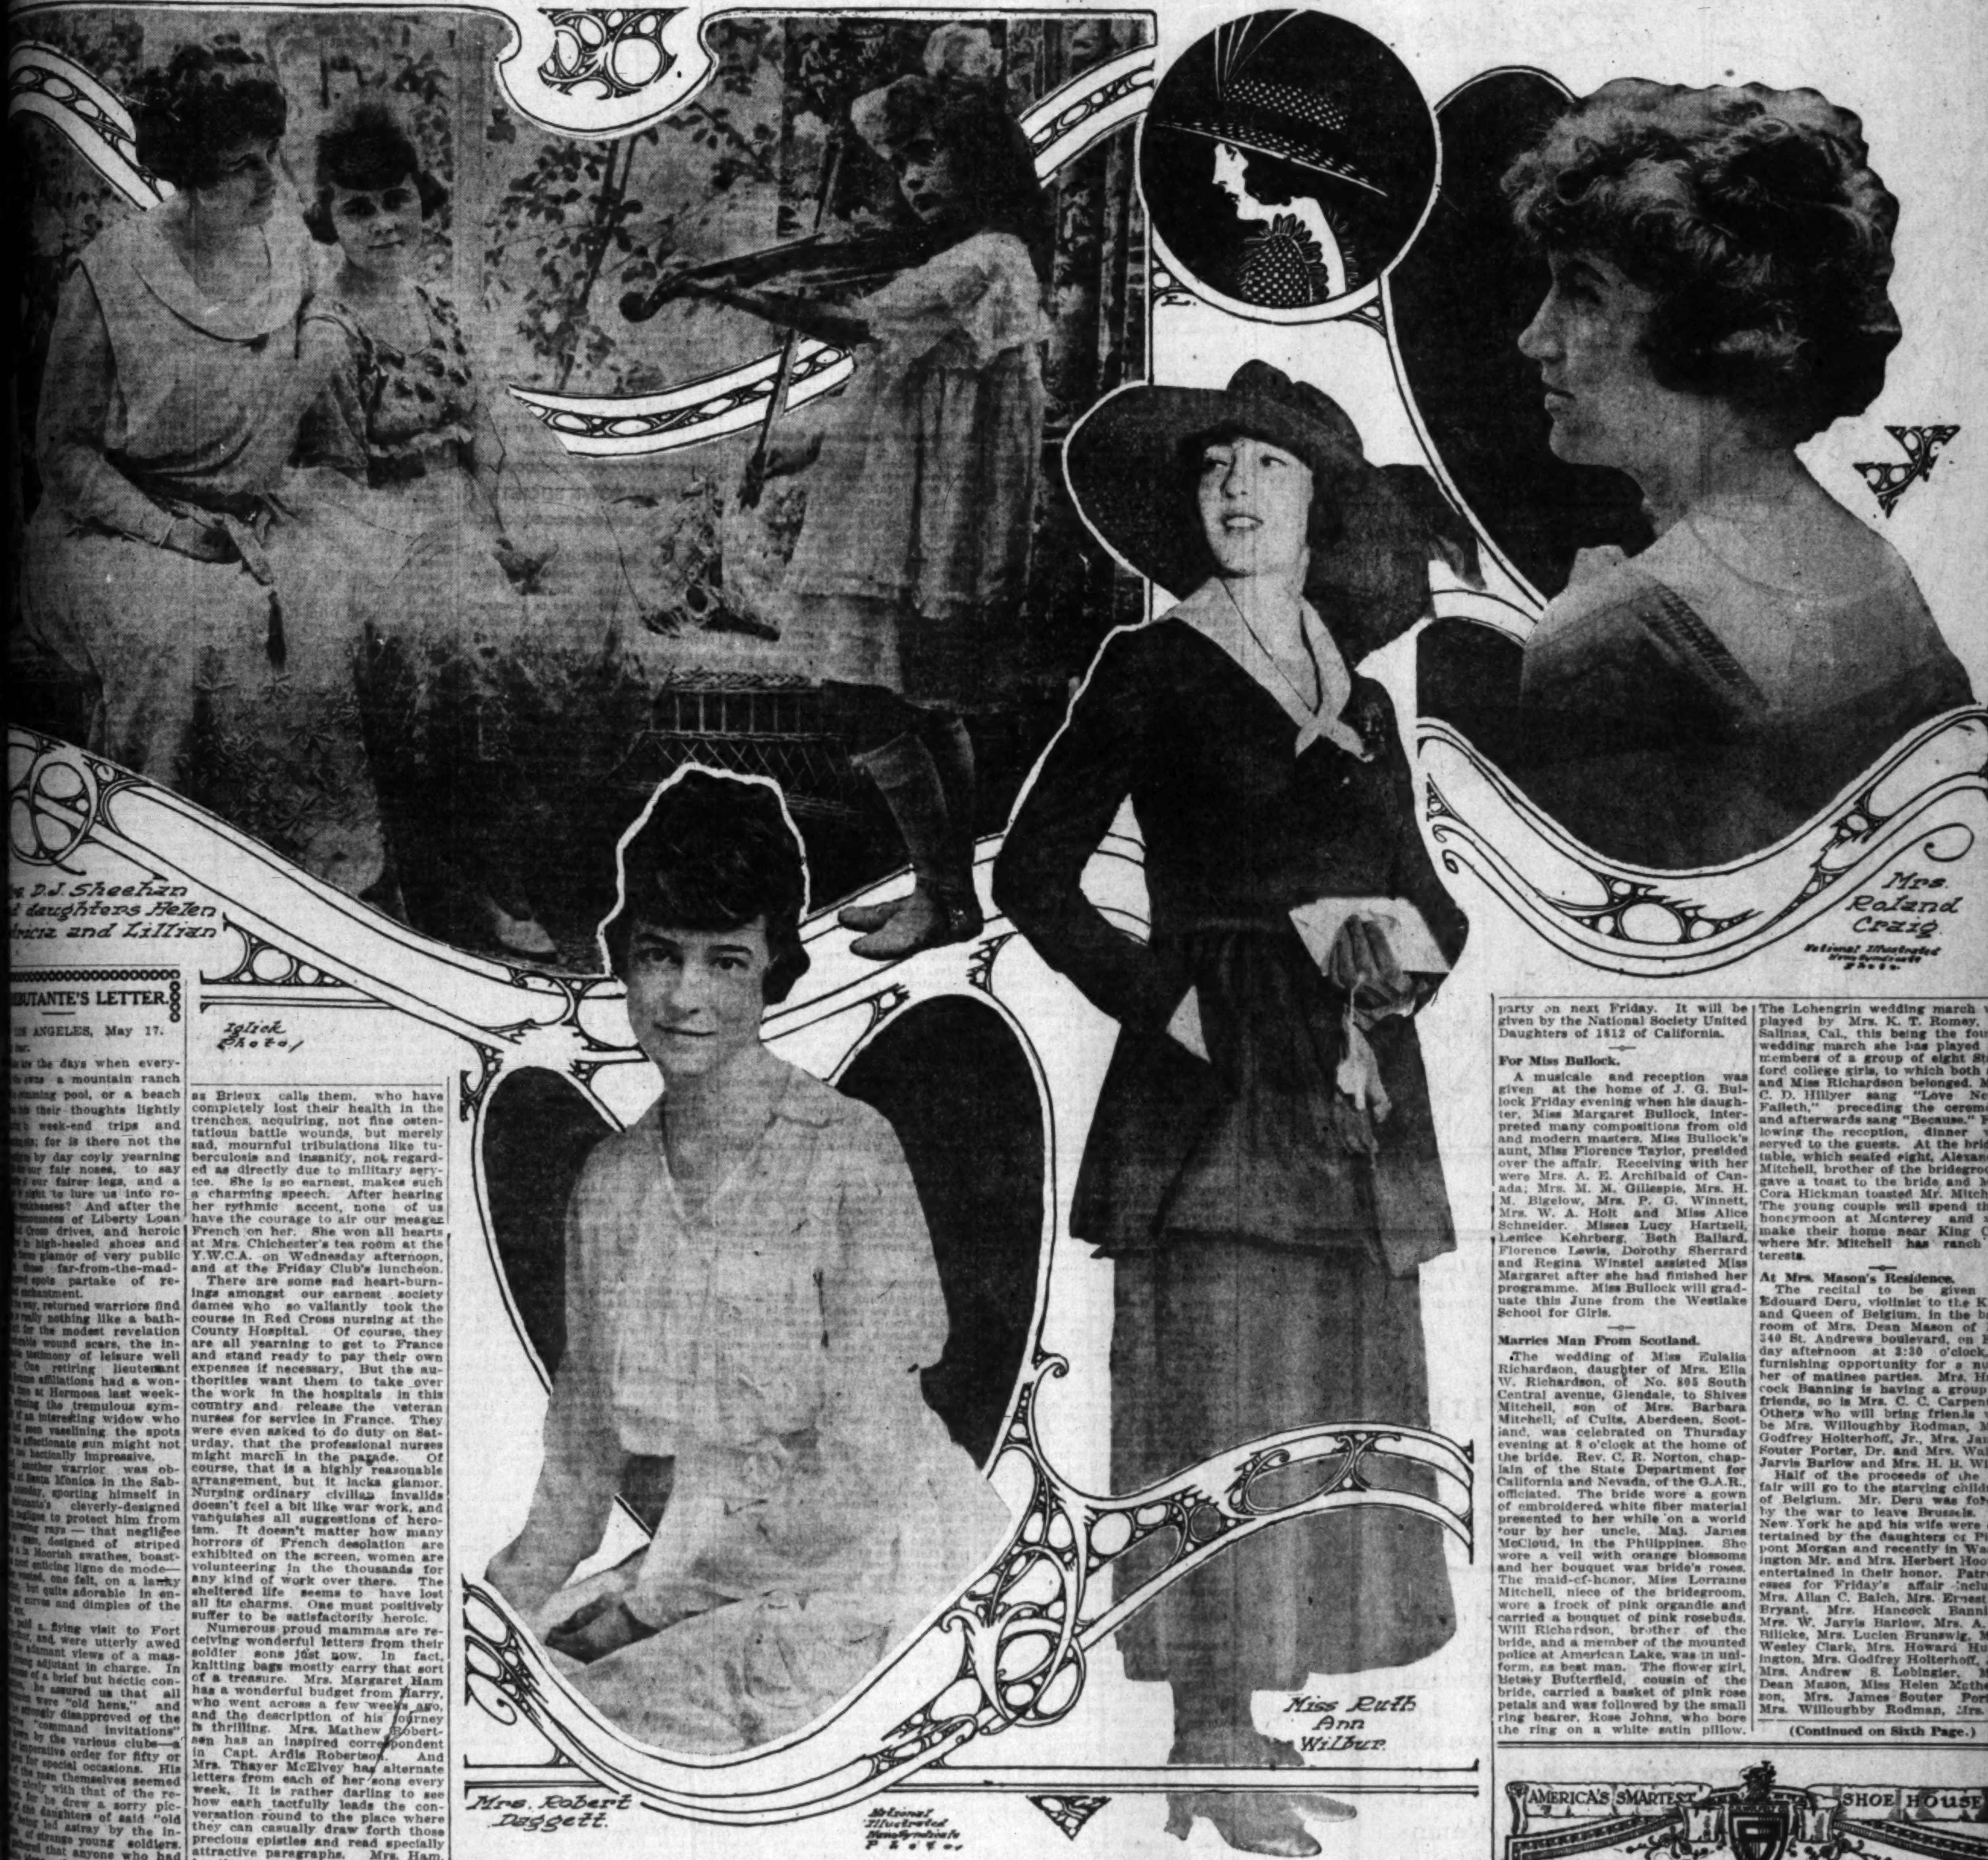
DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

Bright Side of Sunshine Land—People and Their Doings—A Hundred or More Happy Affairs



Lights and shadows on society.

Mrs. Sheehan entertained recently in honor of Miss Helen Patricia's eighteenth birthday. Miss Wilbur is prominent in the work of the Patriotic League. Mrs. Craig and Mrs. Daggett are recent brides. Mrs. Daggett was formerly Miss Laura Cutler of Pasadena.

BUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, May 17.

Dear.

are the days when everyone owns a mountain ranch swimming pool, or a beach their thoughts lightly to week-end trips and; for is there not the by day coyly yearning our fair noses, to say of our fairer legs, and a sight to lure us into romantic weaknesses? And after the strenuousness of Liberty Loan Red Cross drives, and heroic in high-heeled shoes and glamor of very public those far-from-the-madding-crowd spots partake of renewed enchantment.

By the way, returned warriors find there's really nothing like a bathing suit for the modest revelation of honorable wound scars, the indisputable testimony of leisure well earned. One retiring lieutenant home affiliations had a wonderful time at Hermosa last week winning the tremulous sympathy of an interesting widow who had seen vaselining the spots the affectionate sun might not too hectically impressive.

And another warrior was observed at Santa Monica in the Sabbath Sunday, sporting himself in a debutante's cleverly-designed negligee to protect him from burning rays — that negligee designed of striped in Moorish swathes, boasting most enticing ligne de mode—wasted, one felt, on a lanky, but quite adorable in enhancing curves and dimples of the fair sex.

We paid a flying visit to Fort MacArthur, and were utterly awed by the adamant views of a masterful young adjutant in charge. In the course of a brief but hectic conversation, he assured us that all women were "old hens," and he strongly disapproved of the "command invitations" sent down by the various clubs—a sort of imperative order for fifty or a dozen for special occasions. His of the men themselves seemed nicely with that of the rens, for he drew a sorry picture of the daughters of said "old hens" being led astray by the influence of strange young soldiers. We gathered that anyone who had ideas of entertaining for soldiers were "old hens."

It really is no catch to be born the wrong sex, is it dear? Half the women are being urged to do all they can to entertain the poor lone angel boys, far from the sanctity of their own homes, potential heroes all — and then we hear that commanding officers regard us as all man-mad. complain that we are giving the altogether too good a time of it and drop dreadful hints of blase except for our embarrassment of among the men themselves. One officer declared the men were overfed by zealous hostesses returned to camp with three-stomachaches. So you see, if we don't entertain them, we are and thoughtless; and if we do, we are even more selfish and Oh, well.

One might imagine from all this we had gone down to borrow uniformed dancing partners a party, but we hadn't. We only gone down to seek out a cook, recently released from the County Hospital, had gratefully knitted Ethel a because she had brought patients roses. And we had the mighty adjutant a timid about this burning subject. then that the alarming information was hurled at us that the mothers and wives and sisters of they are "a pack of old hens." of their sons are certainly young cockerels.

Have you met that piquant, petite Camille de Borde des Forest? She is a most engaging little here to blaze a trail for coming French mission—Mons. and Mme. Marie Lantes, campaigning on behalf of incapacitated French soldiers—those heroes without a halo, as Brieux calls them, who have completely lost their health in the trenches, acquiring, not fine ostentatious battle wounds, but merely sad, mournful tribulations like tuberculosis and insanity, not regarded as directly due to military service. She is so earnest, makes such a charming speech. After hearing her rythmic accent, none of us have the courage to air our meager French on her. She won all hearts at Mrs. Chichester's tea room at the Y.W.C.A. on Wednesday afternoon, and at the Friday Club's luncheon.

There are some sad heart-burnings amongst our earnest society dames who so valiantly took the course in Red Cross nursing at the County Hospital. Of course, they are all yearning to get to France and stand ready to pay their own expenses if necessary. But the authorities want them to take over the work in the hospitals in this country and release the veteran nurses for service in France. They were even asked to do duty on Saturday, that the professional nurses might march in the parade. Of course, that is a highly reasonable arrangement, but it lacks glamor. Nursing ordinary civilian invalids doesn't feel a bit like war work, and vanquishes all suggestions of heroism. It doesn't matter how many horrors of French desolation are exhibited on the screen, women are volunteering in the thousands for any kind of work over there. The sheltered life seems to have lost all its charms. One must positively suffer to be satisfactorily heroic.

Numerous proud mammas are receiving wonderful letters from their soldier sons just now. In fact, knitting bags mostly carry that sort of a treasure. Mrs. Margaret Ham has a wonderful budget from Harry, who went across a few weeks ago, and the description of his journey is thrilling. Mrs. Mathew Robertsen has an inspired correspondent in Capt. Ardis Robertson. And Mrs. Thayer McElvey has alternate letters from each of her sons every week. It is rather darling to see how each tactfully leads the conversation round to the place where they can casually draw forth those precious epistles and read specially attractive paragraphs. Mrs. Ham, by the way, is looking forward to an imminent visit to Madrid, where her daughter is the wife of the American Consul. Life in Madrid is unusually interesting just now—a hectic neutrality and diplomatic representatives of all countries oozing tact and cleverness.

With so many ardent war volunteers aching to go to France in any capacity and pay all their own expenses, it is really rather engaging to have certain young ladies pleading for subscriptions to pay their expenses across as "investigators" and nice supervisory jobs like that. One would have supposed there are countless suitable "investigators" already on the scene, who would be so very much less expensive.

Have you seen "Tarzan" at the Kinema? It worried us a good deal because it ends so abruptly, with the son of the English peer who has been reared in the jungle by a monkey, going off to England with the American girl, still attired in his strictly jungle loin draperies. We should have loved to have seen him make his debut in London society in that costume and with those manners.

Ah, yes, and talking of jungle men, we have a good specimen in Los Angeles society. Beyond the fact that he wears clothes, he is quite engagingly wild-animalish. He has positively no manners whatever, but, being a returned warrior, hostesses were at first lenient and made the most liberal allowances. However, he is proving quite a handful. While being entertained at one party recently, he was invited to grace another the following week. "Well, if I come, I guess I'll bring my own woman," said the delicious creature, "I can't cotton to these girls you hand me." "In that case, I think we'll excuse you," remarked the humble petitioner for his society. "Oh, dear people, I do beg your pardon," said the mortified hostess to her assembled guests. In one sense the party was perhaps not a complete success, but the novelty of the manners of the engaging gentleman certainly proved a spicy condiment. And think of it, he brought letters of introduction from a lofty Canadian official, and he has a number of most distinguished relations.

The new idea of giving Thrift Stamps for bridge prizes is rather good, isn't it? One sumptuous hostess even gave a $50 Liberty Bond at one last week. The golfers are talking of giving this sort of prize for their golf tournaments now, as well as handing all the entrance fees to the Red Cross. Golf, by the way, has culled over $6500 for the Red Cross this season, and the big city of Los Angeles championship for both men and women comes off at Griffith Park next week, which will mean several more hundreds.

Little Mrs. Delores Roscoe, who won the Southern California championship last week, is one of the best women golfers we have had on this Coast. She is petite and such a graceful player, having learned the game in her early youth from a famous Scotch professional in Scotland. She was in the films for a little while with Theda Bara, but says she has retired to private life for good.

Have you heard of that fascinating little club known as the Los Angeles Garden Club? Its members nearly all own wonderful gardens and each week they visit other famous beautiful places. Mrs. Walter S. Ray is the president, Mrs. R. Wernigk the secretary and Mrs. A. G. Metcalf the corresponding secretary. Last week they all went out to the Crow ranch at Glendora, which has canyons and mountains on the premises, and then went on to Judge Silent's wonderful show place, where he proudly exhibited his Copo d'ora, an amazing climbing vine with a thousand golden blossoms as big as saucers, and turned on all the fountain sprays for their delectation. One week was devoted to Sierra Madre, where they spent a joyous time at the Hart, Clapp and Graham gardens—Miss Tolly Graham really has three adorable dream gardens—one Italian, one Japanese and one English. In Los Angeles itself they have wandered through beautiful places—the Winter and Lindsey gardens on West Adams street, and the lovely Danziger place at Beverly. This attractive club makes gardens a serious study and they form a most enchanting coterie of garden lovers. Mrs. A. S. Hoyt, Mrs. Benjamin Harding, Miss Marie Crow, Mrs. Walter Lindsey and Mme. Stork are all members.

His friends will be interested to hear that Neville Woodcock, one time popular Los Angeles golfer, has received a special testimonial from the military authorities in England for his talent in making first-class soldiers out of raw recruits. They sent him to France once, but fetched him back as being more valuable as a training officer at home. He, it will be remembered, volunteered in the first dread days of the war nearly four years ago. But he says his heart is really in Los Angeles and he is coming back to win more golf championship some day. Wonder if he'll bring an English bride back with him?

So long, cherie,

Your frisky,

BETTY.

Wedding Diamonds

No wedding gift quite takes the place of a perfect diamond. And never were the diamond productions so beautiful as now. In wedding rings particular favor surrounds the all diamond paved circlet ring, while the solitaire set in fancy mountings paved with smaller diamonds is a most admired production.

Then there is the gift of a life time—a string of pearls perfectly matched for size and sheen.

Covina.

A BRIEF dispensation from war work and talk was felt in the bright and simple programme given under the direction of Mrs. George Jennings at the Monday Afternoon Club this week. Mrs. Pierre Letchworth and her assistants gave a programme of "Prose, Poetry and Song," each number being cleverly illustrated with living pictures. Mrs. Henry L. Marshall, accompanied by Mrs. David Watson, interspersed the programme with songs. Her first number, "Pale Hands Beside the Shalimar," was posed by Mrs. Ernest Witbeck in oriental costume. Another number was Cadman's "Far Off I Hear the Lover's Lute," posed by Carolyn Jennings in Indian costume. The popular song, "Just a Baby's Prayer at Twilight," brought many a sob when Nancy Tripp appeared with her doll in prayer-like attitude at the knee of Mrs. Letchworth as the "mother." Under "prose" Mrs. Lethworth read a story from Mark Twain. The old black mamma slave was splendid portrayed by Ruth Watson. Miss Julia Jennings also read a story that was posed by Mrs. N. Gorham. Mrs. Letchworth recited "The Debutante," posed by Rosita Kerckhoff; "Where the Morning Glories Twine," posed by Maude Beattie; and "What's in a Name?" The latter was written, both music and words, by a Covina man, Lloyd S. Porter, who is awaiting call in the United States Naval Reserve. Frances Havlin, accompanied by Miss Imogene Arthur, sang one of the popular war songs, "Laddie in Khaki," with Mrs. Henry Phillips as a Red Cross nurse. A dainty springlike dance, "To a Wild Rose," was given by Lucinda Beattie. The decorations were especially attractive, quantities of Cecile Brunner roses, ferns and palms being used.

THE LETTERS OF LEMUEL BEAN.

Lem Takes in a Real Cabaret Party.

BY ROY MOULTON.

SOMEWHERE IN NEW YORK.

DEAR FOLKS: About two weeks ago a young man came here from the West to forget his troubles, and spent most of his time in the jazz cabarets along the gilded way. On the seventh day he collapsed suddenly. He was removed to Bellevue, and examination by physicians revealed the fact that he was starving to death.

They fed him up on hospital fare and he took the first train for the West—back to God's country, where they eat food in calories—food from the red plush cow and the waving golden grain, and not from the string of the noisesome ukulele. During the week he had spent several hundred dollars in cafes and had been given everything but food. Those who desire food with their meals keep away from the bright lights.

Luella, my wife, is fond of seeing the sights. That is all any person lives here for. If he doesn't see the sights he might better live almost anywhere else.

This time we hit a cabaret in the chorus girl district, where the skirts are the only things that are shorter than the menus. First we looked in and it looked good. There was an orchestra of twenty-seven pieces, not including the washboilers and cowbells. The tables in this place are located around pillars so you cannot sit at one table and look around the corner and see what the people at the next table are getting to eat. They advertised a splendid dinner at $1.50. They advertised in all the papers.

I don't believe the chef reads the papers, for he fell down in a most spectacular manner.

As for environment, there was nothing to be desired. The place was literally crowded with the elite of the cloak and suit business and their lady friends.

The waiter brought two anaemic-looking rolls—one for each of us, and a large consignment of ice water.

"Only one roll!" objected Luella.

"When you have eaten that I am permitted to bring you another," said the waiter.

"I can see that we have made a serious mistake," said Luella, darting an annihilating glance at the stout German person in the tuxedo. It never feazed him. I almost thought he enjoyed our foodless situation. "We have made a serious mistake," repeated Luella. "We came here to eat. We are hungry."

"The cabaret will start in a moment," said the waiter, and he left us for an hour to muse over the horrors of going to war against his race.

The cabaret started as promised. This cafe has the loudest jazz band in New York. This band includes not only the familiar boiler explosion and a correct imitation of the battle of Vimy Ridge, but a new heart-rending instrument known as the cataphone. The cataphone makes a noise like a feline songbird with her tail caught in the crack of a door. They also introduced a new sensation which is an imitation of two locomotives meeting head-on while running at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour. After the first piece by the band everybody buys another cocktail.

Then a young lady, who could not have been more than 47 years old, got out in the spotlight and gave a dance. Owing to the war and the resultant scarcity of material for gowns she carried her stage wardrobe to the cafe in a stamp box. Luella wanted to go somewhere else, but I didn't think it would be just the thing to leave after having eaten two of their rolls.

The waiter sauntered over in our direction then and asked us if we wanted to order from the table d'hote or from the card. We immediately chose the table d'hote. There was a specific price on that. When a man's bank roll will fit comfortably in a cigarette holder, he does not venture into the mysteries of the carte.

It was about 4 o'clock when we received the two rolls and at about 7 o'clock we each received a plate of soup which was a delightful combination of pump water and sunshine. There was something in mine. It turned out to be a small piece of toast. Luella thought it might be a bit of enemy propaganda, so I laid it carefully aside on the plate. I almost forgot to mention that we each received three clams. They looked to be considerably over the draft age and the one I tried to eat, I believe to this day, was made of red rubber like an inner tube.

"Why do we only get three clams?" asked Luella.

"Clams are very scarce this year," said the waiter meaningly. "It is on account of the war."

If the gentleman was trying to sow the seed of discontent in our minds, he failed. We are patriots.

"If clams are scarce on account of the war, you may keep two of mine," I said. "Somebody will be able to eat them."

I tried to picture some European war sufferer chewing on one of those India rubber clams and blessing me as a savior.

In about a half-hour we had some green smelts. I say "some green smelts" advisedly. There were two. Neither of us likes smelts, but we ate them and waited patiently for something else to happen. Something did. It was a ukulele quartette accompanied by a Hawaiian lady from the East Side, named O'Rourke, who uked all around the place in a shredded wheat skirt.

Then before we had anything more to eat we had three one-steps, a codfish wiggle and a waltz.

Then came the waiter to get our meat order. We gave it quickly—Maryland spring chicken.

The menu made no mention of the particular spring. It may have been in the spring of 1812 that this particular chicken burst from its egg, took a squint over the green fields of Virginia and settled down for a long and happy life among the F.F.V.'s.

I don't believe that hen ever could have died a violent death. It could only have been accomplished with dynamite, and it is difficult to feed a chicken dynamite. The hind leg which I drew gave every indication of the fact that this bird was a great pedestrian, and I dare say she followed Lee through the Civil War. It is time to admire everything patriotic, so we said nothing. Luella had a wing, after which we had a ballad, a Russian hop-skip-and-jumper, and three pieces by the band.

After hearing those selections, life in the trenches will never hold any terrors for me, if I am lucky enough to go. The actual fighting isn't really the worst part of any war. The people at home, who can't go, do some suffering.

When the check came, after a brief session of bisque de tortoni, there was 6 cents added to it. I didn't object to the main body of the check. That seemed to be quite all right, and according to the advertisements, but I couldn't get the 6 cents. We could write two letters home for money with that 6 cents.

"Why the 6 cents?" I asked.

"That is the war tax for the cabaret," explained the waiter patiently, "2 per cent. of the check."

"The cabaret wasn't worth 6 cents," snapped Luella.

"I know it," agreed our waiter, "but it is war times."

Our waiter couldn't seem to forget the war for a moment. He was that kind of a waiter, if you know what I mean.

The cabaret proprietors are living up to Mr. Hoover's ideas to the letter and, gosh! how they dread it. I believe they are the most patriotic set of men in the world. They began to be patriotic in regard to food before Herbert really got on the job, and when he did hand down his instructions they were far ahead of him.

One of these jazz emporiums can save enough food in a week to feed a regiment of fighters.

On our way home we passed a statute of Christopher Columbus. Luella looked at it and sniffed.

"He was a great man. Chris was," I ventured. "He discovered America."

"Look on the map and tell me how he could have missed it," she replied. "If he was sailing this way he was sure to discover America. He couldn't fail. But while he was out discovering things, why didn't he finish the job?"

"What do y'mean, finish the job?" I asked.

"He discovered America, but he didn't discover how to live in it and eat one's meals out. I am hungrier than a Mexican-reconcentrado 180 miles from a tamale."

So we stopped off at a delicatessen and got $2.35 worth of food, and Luella put it in her handbag, and we took it home and ate it. We are old-fashioned, perhaps, but we do enjoy food with our meals. Hoping you are the same.

Yours,
LEM.

According to reports the vessel had a unique ballasting system. A number of goatskin bags were placed under the deck between two large planks. These bags when filled with water caused the vessel to sink. To cause it to rise again the bags were pressed together again with a windless arrangement, forcing the water out, and thus giving the boat reserve buoyancy.

Says Nance O'Neil.

ACTING IS THE SAME FOR TALKIE AND MOVIE STAGE

THAT there is a great and radical difference between acting for the stage and acting for the screen has been the general impression created through reading the opinions of stage and opera stars after experiences before the motion-picture camera. Just what the main differences were seemed much a matter of personal opinion, but that there was a marked difference all agreed. Many lauded the films and film acting, but others—usually the ones who failed to "make good"—were scornful in their remarks.

The reason for the failure of certain stage favorites in the movies, while others achieved great popularity, has long been an interesting and puzzling topic. No one could be more qualified to speak conclusively on the subject than Nance O'Neil.

"What is the difference between acting for the stage and acting for the screen? There is no difference. Apart from a few minor details, one plays just the same before the camera as before the footlights. It is only the artist who counts. A good actress upon the stage will be a good actress upon the screen. That is all there is to it."

Nance O'Neil made this rather startling declaration slowly and positively. Reclining comfortably upon the lounge in her dressing-room, she spoke with a conviction that gave proof of long and careful thought upon the subject. The performance of "The Wanderer" continued on its way on the stage just outside, but luckily Miss O'Neil makes no appearance in the second act, and a whole hour remained to hear more fully the thoughts of this most interesting of actresses. For Nance O'Neil is nothing if not original.

"But don't you miss the response of an audience? Isn't there a lack of inspiration in the coldness of the studio? Most of the stage stars claim this as the greatest drawback to picture acting," was said to the famous Magda.

"I can't agree with them. While it is true that a stage artist feels an audience, it acts as no incentive for me, at least. I do not play to the audience; in fact, I do my best to forget they are there. In my estimation the important thing is to look over the footlights. It is always as easy for me to 'feel' a part in the picture studio as in the theater, because I make it an imperative rule that real and appropriate lines must be spoken in the picture and the action must be definitely fixed as in a stage play. There can be no better proof that the acting is alike on stage and screen than in the fact that I have played certain roles for both and acted them in identically the same manner in each case."

"But you said that there were some minor details wherein the two differed?"

"Yes. On the stage the voice is the most effective agent in acting. It often takes an artist years to cultivate a voice, and without a commanding voice no stage artist can reach great heights. On the other hand, it is the eye that speaks upon the screen. The eye must reflect the innermost thoughts, and it does, with great power and little movement. Concentration is the keynote of effectiveness in motion pictures. Every change of thought must be concentrated upon the action being played, and, resolutely maintained to get the best results. Above all, the artist must be sincere. Otherwise, little is 'registered.' Insincerity and affectation are only too obvious upon the screen—and gain nothing. They are faults that must be overcome in picture acting."

Asked which of the two lines of work she preferred, Miss O'Neil artfully answered that she liked each in its own way.

"But motion-picture work is far more tiring. Any who imagine it to be one round of pleasure and enjoyment are soon disillusioned. There are many long and inexcusable waits that wear one out, and often it is necessary to work till late into the night. Nevertheless, there is a fascination about it."

Nickel Named for Devil.

It was firmly asserted and honestly believed by the ancient German copper miners that Old Nick, alias the devil, worked o' nights making an infernal metal purposely to bother and pester the honest and religious miners. This ore, which to all intents and purposes looked exactly like copper ore, yet no copper could be extracted from it, they called kupfernickel, or devil's copper.

This Old Nick's material, nicknamed nickel, was discovered by Cronstadt in 1751, and it was comparatively scarce in the metal world until a New York assayer found a few pounds of it in a shipment of copper ore from Sudbury, Can.

He assayed the metal and stated its value in his return account. The astonished shipper immediately instituted a systematic search and quickly found immense deposits of nickel ores.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mixed Bible and Profanity.

The Bible and profanity were strangely intermingled in the Congress a few days ago. Senator Overman made the statement that President Wilson "has been criticised in many instances, for not taking Senators into his confidence." To which Senator Reed remarked: "Oh hell!" Senator Overman expressed the hope that this expression would go into the Record. Subsequently Senator Overman read into the Record a section of the eighteenth chapter of Exodus, describing how Aaron and Hur sat by the side of Moses and held aloft his hands throughout the day while the conflict between the army of Israel and the army of Amalek was in progress.—[Indianapolis News.

The Gas Heater Question.

LOS ANGELES, May. 14.—[To the Editor of the Times.] An item in the papers states that under the terms of an ordinance introduced by Councilman Reeves it will be unlawful for any person in Los Angeles to install a gas heater in a bedroom or bathroom and moreover all such gas heaters that have already been installed will have to be taken out. I have used gas heaters in my home and other properties for seventeen years with the best of satisfaction and I am satisfied that there are probably thousands of these heaters in this city and have been in use for years and it certainly would work a hardship on people who have spent their money to install these heaters to be compelled to take them out and cast them aside and I earnestly protest against any such action.

It would seem to me that it is drawing the line pretty fine in designating the rooms in which heaters shall be used and shall not be used and would appear to me that it is giving the agents and manufacturers of one particular style of gas heater an opportunity to obtain a monopoly. This kind of legislation is little short of Kaiserism and I should like to have it shown and proved to me how the enactment of such a law would be valid. I am making this statement not in reference to the future installation of these heaters, but I am against making a law that would become retroactive.

Prohibition vs. War Needs.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] To adopt bone-dry prohibition in this State, as advocated by Gov. Stephens, would destroy the vineyards and thus lay waste 170,000 acres of productive land at a loss of $150,000,000 to the owners. Just what effect such a policy would have upon the State under normal conditions need not be considered, as this is not a normal period, and consideration must be given to existing problems and not to dead theories.

The existing problem is one that involves the whole Federal government, and the main question is one of money. The United States has been called upon to finance not only its cost of the war, but to furnish the cash sinews for all the Allies. In view of such a stupendous task, there must be no waste; no portion of this great country has a right to destroy the productive growth of 170,000 acres of fertile land. It is not good business, it is not common sense, nor is it patriotic in any meaning of the word.

On the land thus laid waste it would be necessary to produce crops of another kind, which would mean another investment, and the land owner, already impoverished by the destruction of his vineyard, must secure the money for this purpose from the very sources which must furnish money for the war, and the State of California places itself in the position of diverting $150,000,000 of money that is urgently needed in war expenditures.

No matter what views we may hold on the prohibition question, we have no moral right to insist on the performance of an action so drastic that it would confiscate such a vast sum of money, every dollar of which is needed in the terrific struggle, if we hope for the safe return of the men who went "over there."

The Unions and the Ships.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] As a loyal citizen I wish to call attention to a state of affairs hard to explain. Until very recently anyone about the shipyards who hindered production in any way was appropriately dealt with. But of late there has been loafing, incompetence and attempted intimidation of loyal workers, and nothing is done about it. Noting that you are a champion of square dealing, allow me respectfully to suggest a field for investigation. The local labor unions are swelling their membership, and increasing their dues. What becomes of the money? Of late they boast that they are working "with the government," making no move without first getting the approval of the local representative of the Shipping Board. Yet they threaten to "get" independent men who dare work to help get out the ships at the earliest possible date—even threaten to "get" foremen on the job who do not discriminate in their favor. Surely such fellows would not go free in England or France.

A SHIPYARD WORKER.

A Los Angeles Opportunity.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Opportunity beckons Los Angeles and through her the State and the nation. Transportation demands a union depot north of the Plaza with 600 acres for trackage, to be increased indefinitely up the river and down the river to the harbor, also, the removal of the railroad from Alameda street to the river bank and the immediate building of a subway from the Plaza down Main street to Jefferson, afterwards to be extended to San Pedro.

Educational facilities should be made the best the world ever knew, with a university, not far from the union depot, in Elysian Park, on a site of 600 acres, to which should be added a little more for better frontage on streets and rounding out the most wonderful location for a great university in America. To this university, lesser colleges, polytechnic and other public schools, should be invited the wealth of the nation's educational facilities. During the university course, young men and women need the home and the home needs them. With a great university in Elysian Park, children of 4,000,000 inhabitants could live at home and daily attend the university while having the wonderful home protection so much needed in the days of character formation.

Permit me to add another thought: The natural Gibraltar for defense of our Pacific Coast, south of San Francisco, is the San Pedro hills, and the government should immediately acquire all of those hills from San Pedro to Redondo Beach, over which and on which and under which and adjoining which government plants should be established and maintained for shipbuilding, for army training, for aviation and other purposes; and underneath should be kept vast stores of everything required in a protective defense and as bases for sending out America's forces in a time of war. Over some portion of that splendid property should be established an enlarged soldiers' home for our country's defenders when disease, wounds or old age retire them from active service.

WILL D. GOULD.

Sunday Closing at the Front.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—[To the Editor of the Times:] I have been out of the city for ten days. I am shocked beyond expression to find that the Sunday closing ordinance is not in operation. Los Angeles has lost a grand opportunity! Our City Council is a noble body of men, but the world should know the temper of Los Angeles. These men should be rewarded. Such as they should sit in the councils of the world.

A world war is on. Is it not a holy war? Are not our noble lads crusaders? Their mission as holy as Coeur de Lion's? Still, fighting on Sunday is wrong. Let us build great tabernacles behind the trenches. Week days they will be storehouses; Saturday night call all the soldiers from the trenches, unpack the tabernacles and let us hold Sunday services. Let no gun be fired, no hand grenade tossed—on Sunday. Our enemies are cruel and ungodly. Teach them a lesson of holiness by our example.

Close the hospitals on Sundays. Don't run the elevators. Doctors and nurses work for pay. Is it not sacrilegious to cure on Sunday, except by prayer? Let's pray—and close the hospitals. Close the gasoline-filling stations, too, Sunday. An ambulance might be tempted to go on some errand of mercy if gas could be had. It might be the work of the evil one in disguise. Close the drug stores Saturday night. They might sell Cascarets—and Cascarets "work while you sleep." They might work over on to Sunday morning. This would be doubly wrong.

I say: tighten up on Sunday! One thing more I'm worried about: could we legislate about it? Do the angels use their wings—on Sundays?

Methods of the Russellites.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The Russellites have been false in their teaching, in their methods and in their lives. What they have done recently in connection with your papers (inserting their leaflets into copies of The Times on the street,) they have been doing for years in connection with our institute, seeking everywhere to give the impression that the Bible Institute was headquarters for Russellism. In 1914 I prepared a leaflet showing the characteristics of this man Russell, and his methods. He changed his titles as often as possible, taking in Brooklyn, for instance, the name of the "Brooklyn Tabernacle," giving the impression that it was Talmage's Tabernacle; in London he had an old building, styling it the "Metropolitan Puplit," giving the impression that it was a continuation of Spurgeon's work. When the Laymen's missionary movement was inaugurated, they took a title which would give the impression that it was under their auspices.

No I.W.W. crowd ever existed that has been as mean and unprincipled as these Russellites, and they have now gone throughout this State seeking to get signatures to a petition to the President, representing themselves to be from the Bible Institute.

No terms I could use are fit for the occasion to express my abhorrence of this kind of business. We are suffering now by reason of their underhanded, despicable work. You know that we have spent tens of thousands of dollars here for the benefit of the people, trying to help men to the right kind of life and to be good citizens, and have done this unselfishly and gladly.

CLING TO OLD HOME.

Peasants of War-riddled Monastir Stay to Live in Cellars in the Nightmare City.

"I could never understand why more than half the population of Monastir, Serbia, continue to live in the city, although it is continually shelled by both high explosives and gas shells," Howard Logan of Chicago said today. Mr. Logan has just returned from Serbia, where he went to take moving pictures with the Red Cross commission under Col. C. A. Severance. He is in Kansas City to oversee the manufacture of certain aviation supplies for the government.

"It was a constant source of surprise to me," he said, "how women, little children and old men still remain in their homes in this nightmare city of Monastir, although at any moment they may be blown to pieces or die in horrible agony from gas asphyxiation."

TWO MILES FROM FRONT LINE.

"Monastir is, or rather was, a city of 60,000 inhabitants. It is just two miles from the front-line trenches. Most of the houses have been razed to the ground and its streets are full of gaping shell holes. The gaunt walls that still remain of the houses are banked with sandbags and their owners live in the cellars, the wise ones coming up to the street only for food or water."

Mr. Logan said that this overpowering desire of the peasant to remain in his home, in spite of the greatest danger to himself, was due to a deep love for his home and fireside, they in the fated city expecting every day to be blown to bits, fascinated by the very horror of it all. Fifteen to twenty gas victims, usually women and children, are found lying dead in the streets every day, he said.

Except for the direct aid of the American Red Cross many of the refugees would die of starvation, Mr. Logan declared.

CENTRAL POWERS TO CONTROL.

"One can hardly appreciate the awful calamity that has befallen little Serbia," he said. HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB SYMPOSIUM.

AMONG the things that came before the Happy Thought Club at the symposium yesterday was a communication from Lute Burbank, the plant wizard, requesting the loan of "Hassie," the Mexican jumping bean. He said that he had in mind the crossing of this lively legume with his pet corn. The result would be a mass of succotash plants which could be sold for $12 a thousand and make everybody rich.

The idea seemed a good one and the club's faith in the genius of Lute is large. It is hard to keep track of Jehosophat, the dancing bean, however, and the occasional disappearances of the wonder have caused considerable excitement in the club. At one time it was feared that the bean was playing in the hands of German spies, and on another occasion it was reported as having been accidentally swallowed by Pearlie Gates, who carelessly mistook it for a chocolate confection. It was a false alarm, however, and the custodian reported yesterday that the bean was resting as comfortably as its impulsive nature would permit and was under its accustomed glass case in the Hall of Curios.

The Old Resident suggested that the wish of Comrade Burbank be gratified, but that he be asked to file a suitable bond for the safe return of Jehosophat to the studio.

This was agreed upon, and developments are awaited with interest. Miss Nonpareil Nutt, the graceful houri of Banning, who sponsored the first appearances of Jehosophat before the club, will accompany the bean as official observer, and report results.

The Cheerful Idiot remarked that the crossing of a wild Mexican bean with Burbank's pet corn was more likely to produce a (b)onion than anything else, but the chair ruled him out of order.

Miss Nutt will chain Jehosophat to her wrist watch during the journey, and her bulletins will be awaited with interest.

The appearance of the Happy Thought Band in the Red Cross Parade aroused vast enthusiasm everywhere. Of course, the new uniforms had not arrived and some of the members had forgotten their instruments, but when the band blared forth the inspiring notes of "Johnny Get Your Gun," the throng yelped for very joy. The trombone duel between the Old Resident and Jot Woof, the amorous blacksmith of Anaheim, is a thing to be cherished in remembrance for many a day. Of course, Jot has the larger lung capacity and the greater road clearance, but the wiry, tenacious frame and strategic training of the pioneer could not help but count in the finals. The old man had from two to five notes left after everybody else had quit. Ignatz Paderewski, who made his first appearance in the band with his flying piano, said that he had never heard anything like it. When the two musical athletes had finished their trombones were worn down to the bone. Scarcely a trace of the trom was left.

Prof. Asa Harts, former leader of the Night Owl Jazz Band of Watts, is the temporary director of the band, and will probably remain until Sousa and Creatore can take their turns. There is some objection to the professor because of the German tang to his name, but as he was born in Boston of Scotch and English parentage, this criticism has no real standing. The only point is: can the professor deliver the goods? He has certainly brought into activity the tireless muscles of the Old Resident and the Anaheim blacksmith.

At the symposium yesterday Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes urged that the band be uniformed in armor plate, designed after the accouterment of the knights of old. He said that an attractive outfit weighing about sixty pounds to the suit could be obtained from the Steel Trust at a cost of about 30 cents a pound, or if individual patterns to represent such characters as Rinaldo, Bayard, Richard Coeur de Lion or Charlemagne were desired, the price would be $1 a pound. A fire and burglar-proof band thus equipped could be put in the front trenches right away. They could defy the artillery of the enemy and if they got out in No Man's Land and played "Traumerei," the German army would throw down its weapons and hasten back to Berlin with tear-stained eyes.

The Cheerful Idiot thought such uniforms would be heavy and uncomfortably hot in warm weather, but Prof. Hughes insisted that the other advantages would be so great that these temporary inconveniences could well be endured. Arrangements could be made to heat the uniforms by electricity or otherwise in very cold weather. A set of sheet iron trousers with a base-burner attachment is not to be sneezed at in an icy trench. Furthermore any time a petulant audience is so inappreciative as to throw rocks at the band, if the members were swathed in wrought iron suits, they could sneer at the crowd in calm contempt.

The Old Resident thought for a moment that the idea was an excellent one. He wanted to order a suit just like the one worn by Sir Launcelot. He thought a Launcelot in shining steel, going down Broadway playing a five-foot slide trombone, would be an inspiration to the American people.

Lady Lou Mont Royal thought so to and in the enthusiasm of the moment said she would order a suit like that worn by Queen Guinivere. Of course, this was not burglar proof, but she might have it made of mercerized steel. She said that she could play beautifully upon the harp—a pastime for which her long experience as a harpy especially fitted her.

The Cheerful Idiot suggested that his duties would doubtless be to carry the official can-opener of the band, and he would be expected to hurriedly open up any member who became overcome by the heat while encased in his metallic uniform.

These ideas will be suffered to develop themselves but no one need be surprised if a brass band led by men of iron in bronze suits should steal upon the enemy and copper the Kaiser.

Several skirts have a quasi-membership in the band and appear with it in practice or in indoor concert work. They may join in the parades later. There are several female bands in the country and there is no objection to a mixed affair.

Mazda Burns, who has been in a manicure shop in Fresno, has sent in her application for a place in the musical section. She says that she is a skilled performer on several instruments. She began her career as a member of the Band of Hope in the Bathodist Church at Visalia, the Salvation Army and was a wonderful performer on the tambourine with that organization at Santa Barbara. People went wild over her and some of them have been wild ever since. She plays on the saxophone, the telephone and the ivaphone.

"I'll bet she's phoney," remarked the Cheerful Idiot.

But Mazda offered to come on at her own expense. Whether she is prepared to don a Harveyized union suit is another matter.

Col. Benoni Toot, the famous author of "Why Women Work," was among those present at the symposium yesterday. He is passing through on his way from Chicago to Honolulu and wished to greet some of our leading literati and raconteurs. He is the author of that grand old potpourri, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," and to stimulate interest in his work, offered a set of fifty-two daintily illuminated cards for the best variation of his beautiful lines.

Esmerelda Hooligan, whose muse seems always on draught promptly chirped these lines:

"One sweetly solemn thought,
Comes to me o'er and o'er.
The husband I have caught
Is such a frightful bore."

Inasmuch as Esmerelda deserted her husband during the honeymoon to run away with a piano tuner, possibly she knew what she was talking about.

Wade A. Cross put his in this wise:

"One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er,
The battles I have fought,
Never have cost much gore."

Nor was the Cheerful Idiot to be suppressed. Seizing a bit of chalk he rambled over to the club blackboard and dashed off these lines:

"One sweetly solemn thought,
Comes to me o'er and o'er
Dried codfish may be bought,
At any grocery store."

The end is not yet and the contest for Col. Toot's magnificent prize will remain open until after the next symposium.

Gladys Vinaigrette Slosson, the mirthful maid of Moneta and one of the soulful singers of the Native Daughters, was one of the applicants for club membership. She brought her piccolo with her and exploded a span of limericks under the studio window. They sounded a little bit like this:

"There was a young woman named Grace,
Who sprang from a very fair race.
She used powder and paint,
And thought she looked quaint,
When she glanced at her cute little face."

There was a wild damsel named Helen Whose palate was crazy for melon,
Oh how she would fight,
On a cold winter night,
'Cause no melon came for her yellin'."

Gladys also put over an acrostic based upon the initial letters of the Happy Thought Club, and which when played soothingly on a megaphone rumbles something like this:

Happy Thought Club.
Here's to the Happy Thought Club!
And happy it certainly is;
Putting us in such joy and delight!
Putting us there is certainly right.
Yarns they don't give, but Thoughts good and true.

Happy! Go lucky!
Oh! They sure tickle you.
Unless you read their lines you'll always feel blue.
Great Happy Thought Club,
Helping everyone so.
Through life's dark hours, their pathway shall glow.

Cherish them, friends,
Laud them, too!

The Cheerful Idiot remarked that the acrostic was not exactly free verse, but it might be called the bargain counter kind. It reminded him of the work of Haffa Pound, half brother of Ezra Pound. Haffa is suffering from lignum vitae from the ears up, but this does not move the weird splendor of his composition. He is the author of that soulful ballad

Blackheads Vanish In Few Moments

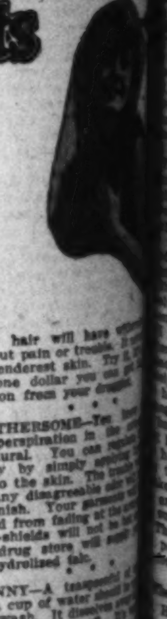
A Startling and Easy Way to Remove These Destroyers of Beauty—How Superfluous Hairs Just Melt Away!

BY VALESKA SURATT.



WHEN I first saw with what remarkable ease blackheads could be entirely eliminated I could hardly believe my own eyes. I thought as thousands of others do today that pinching and face-steaming were the only methods which force out these beauty-destroying pests. Pinching the skin produces red spots, and after a time the whole face is full of irregular patches which take a long time to disappear. Get some neroxin at any drug store and sprinkle a liberal amount on a sponge wet with hot water. Then rub it on the places where the blackheads are, for a few moments. After washing the face, you will find that every blackhead, big and little, has disappeared completely. This should be repeated every little while so as to keep the skin constantly free from blackheads.

MISS BLEMISH — Skin blemishes can surely be removed more quickly than you ever thought it possible. The skin beautifying formula given here is without doubt an article of extraordinary merit. Hundreds of women now realize this great secret. I have never known it to fail, and the muddiest complexion will lose its blemishes and take on a lily-like purity and tint. Simply mix one ounce of zintone with two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in one pint of water. Lay aside all other complexion treatments and use this only.

MISS MARVEL—Here is a wrinkle formula that will get those deep lines and crows' feet out of your face almost as your photographer got them out of the picture you mention. You'll look 15 years younger, if you will make up this cream and use it freely, daily: To two ounces of eptol add one tablespoonful of glycerine and stir into half a pint of hot water. You'll have a cream that will do the work as nothing can or has ever done. The eptol can be secured at the drug store.

The LIGHT CROSS

The Red Cross is a light cross for us, who stay at home, to bear. We save a little and buy bonds or Thrift Stamps, but that is selfish service that helps us first and our country afterward. But we do not know devotion, for we have not sacrificed yet.

It is our privilege now really to give—to give without hope of selfish reward—to know the exaltation of Giving to Our Country.

The Red Cross, that vast organization of self-denying Americans, that works without counting the hours, that gives without stinting, needs money. Some one will ask you to give. Only you can ask your conscience how much?

Mail Orders

Our Mail Order Department will look and shop and buy for you as you would do for yourself if you were here. Just write for anything—information or merchandise, to Mail Order Department, Robinson's, Los Angeles.

CLEAN FILMS HIS OBJECT.

sailed from an Atlantic port about two weeks ago with the members of his staff and a flock of motion-picture and still-life cameras—the first such equipment permitted to leave an American port of embarkation for non-military use in many months. News has just been received of his safe arrival on the other side by Charles Mercer, Mr. Newman's representative at the offices of the Educational Films Corporation of America, No. 729 Seventh avenue, which releases his pictures.

"I am going abroad," said Mr. Newman, "to get illustrations of social, commercial and civil life under war conditions in Great Britain, France and Italy, with a view to America profiting by the Allies' experience. I hope particularly to illustrate the conservation of human power that makes possible the release of every able-bodied man to the war with the least disturbance to commerce."

Encouraging to Hoover.

J. Warren Kerrigan and Wallace Worsley, respectively Paralta star and Paralta staff director, are deadly rivals when it comes to war gardens. Until recently, when the star discovered some mysterious method of making his lettuce grow faster, impartial judges thought that the director had the advantage. But now it's about an even break. Mr. Kerrigan has adobe soil and Wallace Worsley's garden is sandy loam, but Robert Brunton, head of the studio, says that the soil will not matter—the winner will be the one who first presents him with a nice mess of new spuds.

Walthall Plays Villain.

It now transpires that Henry Walthall, noble hero of 100 picture plots, will, in the new Griffith picture, now being produced, have a chance to practice his artistic and professional villainy.

"I am very glad indeed to be cast in the role," said Mr. Walthall the other day, "not only because it gives opportunity for variety in one's work before the public, but because this particular character is a particularly interesting breed of villain. No, I won't tell you what kind he is."

Alma's Blue-Ribboner.

The days of fish stories are upon us, and so far this season this one wins the blue ribbon.

When Alma Rubens, Triangle star, was working at the Triangle ranch studio recently, one of the cowboys brought in a pelican with a broken leg. He intended killing the huge bird to put it out of its misery, but tender-hearted Alma wouldn't listen to it, so a splint was made and the broken leg was set.

Slowly the leg mended under Miss Rubens's care, until the day came when the pelican was as good as new. Although she had become quite attached to her unusual pet, Miss Rubens decided to give it its liberty, and carrying it to the window of the room she flung it open and liberated the pelican.

That was the last she would ever see of her new pet, thought Miss Rubens, but subsequent events proved she was all wrong. On returning from the studio that afternoon, fair Alma found her pelican waiting for her, perched on the window sill. Of course, she let it in, overjoyed at the bird's faithfulness. But imagine her surprise when she found a fine mess of herring in its beak, the bird's offering for her kindness, she declares.

Now, according to Miss Rubens, the pelican refuses to leave her except for an occasional fishing trip, and whenever the Rubens family wants a nice mess of herring, Miss Rubens just opens the widow and sends Mr. Pelican out for them. He never fails, according to Alma.

Triangle Does Its Bit.

With fifty former employees wearing blue and olive drab in Uncle Sam's service, and more than $52,000 subscribed to the Third Liberty Loan, employees of the Triangle Film Corporation at Culver City are being congratulated on all sides on their patriotic showing, and with the girls of the playing forces using all their spare time to knit for the sailors and soldiers, all are busy doing their bit.

During the Third Liberty Loan drive, subscriptions were stimulated by an idea of Vice-President and General Manager H. O. Davis, under whose order a huge honor role was printed on the side of one of the Triangle buildings. When an employee bought bonds a star went up before his or her name, and with the conclusion of the drive there was hardly a name of the 475 in the list which lacked a star. The studio average was better than $100 worth of bonds for every employee.

Fifty stars are now on the service flag floating over the Culver City plant. This is a little more than 20 per cent. of the male employees of the studio. Nellie Allen of the Triangle playing forces, is now busy embroidering the monogram of each Triangle employee who has gone to war, on one of the stars on the service flag.

Gloria's Dad in Service.

Gloria Swanson, Triangle favorite, who has just completed work on her latest vehicle, the working title of which is "Station Content," has received good news from her father, Joseph Swanson. He has received a captain's commission in the regular army, and although now stationed at Newport News, Va., expects to sail in a short time for active service in France.

Fly Acted Out for Camera.

A fly, just one of the ordinary kind that all good people are advised to swat early and often, was responsible for a two-hour delay in the filming of the important scenes for the Triangle picture, "The Fly God," in which Roy Stewart is featured. The script called for an able-bodied fly to do some stunts on the window pane of a cabin, and Director Cliff Smith lost a lot of patience and much valuable time before he could round up a fly with enough sense to know that it was expected to act before the camera in the cause of art.

Annette Kellerman Stuff.

The simple village folk of Elsinore, Cal., were transfixed, a few days ago, at sight of Gladys Brockwell arrayed in the very newest style of Hooverized bathing suit—one of the sort that starts late and ends early—as she swam in the public swimming tank. Miss Brockwell states she had no idea of creating a sensation, but merely wanted to cool off after a hard morning's work on location, doing scenes for "The Bird of Prey."

Reform Item.

Tom Mix, the daredevil William Fox star who will be seen in the newest William Fox production of Western life, "Fame and Fortune," which he is now filming, tells an interesting story of his last poker game in a wild town in Southwestern Texas, where he visited a few weeks ago.

It seems that Mix, who had spent many weary weeks on the cattle ranges, came into town for relaxation, and what more natural for him to do than try and buck chance? Buying a stack of chips from the dealer, Tom started in the famous game of "draw." According to Tom, he drew quite well. If he would have three queens full of tens, some one else in the game would have three aces full of kings. This kept going for some considerable time, until Tom's chips were gone. It then dawned on Mix that he was being "trimmed." Unfortunately, Tom had committed the unpardonable faux pas in cowboy circles—he had forgotten his sixshooter. Mix left the game and went for his gun. The dealer got scared and wound up the game then and there, leaving for parts unknown. Even the bartender followed suit, and when Mix arrived he found the place deserted.

Cheated of his revenge, Tom piled all the saloon furniture and gambling paraphernalia in the middle of the floor and set a match to it. In a few minutes the saloon was a thing of the past.

"And believe me," said Mr. Mix in speaking of this incident in his eventful career, "that was the first town in Texas that went dry. No one opened a saloon after that."

Mary Pickford is Busy.

Mary Pickford is a busy girl these days. Her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, is very ill at the Sisters' Hospital, and Mary spends every spare moment with her. Besides which she is finishing her picture, "Captain Kidd," and is reading several scripts for her new one, with the chances her next picture may be an army story.

And as if this were not enough, Miss Pickford's lease on her present house on Western avenue in Hollywood expires on the first of June, and she is house-hunting. Also she is daily being besieged by real estate men with offers to sell mountains and foothills cheap.

Joy Notes.

Margery Wilson, who has been very ill, is again at work at Culver City, in a new Triangle production.

Foss's Back-fire.

When Darrell Foss, Triangle leading man, came to work the other morning, he displayed a severe laceration upon the forehead. It seemed to be his own personal business and trouble, but someone didn't think so.

"What happened to you, Foss?" inquired the inquisitive one. "Been unsober or something?"

"Naw," replied Darrell, "I bit myself."

"Bit yourself?" scoffed the questioner. "How could you bite yourself on the forehead?"

"Oh, I stood on a chair, of course," drawled Foss.

Peggy Drops Into Poetry.

It has remained for Peggy Pearce, Triangle star, to burst into poetry these fine spring days. Here, is the result of her efforts:

"The cornstalks rustle in the breeze;
They rustle night and morn—
By heck, they've got to rustle
To support their crop of corn."

Sherman Spreads Himself.

What promises to be the most elaborate presentation of a screen feature ever made has been arranged by Harry A. Sherman, president and general manager of the Sherman Productions, Inc., for the premier showing of Dustin Farnum's feature, "The Light of the Western Stars."

Mr. Sherman will first show this western classic at the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York before a specially-invited audience of the exalted personages of society and filmdom. In Mr. Sherman's party will be included Dustin Farnum, the star; Winifred Kingston, his leading woman; Mrs. Kingston, her mother, and Charles Swickard, Mr. Farnum's director.

In the meantime Mr. Sherman's scenario writer, Roy Clements, will commence work upon the continuity of the Sherman Productions' second State-right feature, which will be "The Wolf Breed," by Jackson Gregory.

Miss Barriscale in Harness.

Bessie Barriscale, Paralta star, who has been in New York for some time, send a wire announcing her departure for Los Angeles, where she will start immediately upon another production at the Brunton studios. Miss Barriscale was called East by the illness of her sister, and has been absent for several weeks. Once in New York, it proved a struggle to get away from the many friends who had known her there while she was on the stage. Howard Hickman will direct the new picture.

Narrow-escape Item.

Kamatsu Ori, Humri Ojato and Unjo Tamara, members of Sessue Hayakawa's company, who were sent to Japan some six months ago to film native scenes for the initial Hayakawa production, are back at the Hayakawa studio. They returned last week with about 4000 feet of film taken in Tokio and Yokohama and in the beautiful Mt. Fujiyama region.

The three Japanese were three very happy men after the film had been delivered into the safe keeping of W. J. Connery, treasurer of the Haworth Pictures Corporation, through which the Hayakawa productions are to be released. There was reason for their joy, as this very valuable negative had met with a number of mishaps out of all of which it had emerged with safety. Twice the film was stolen in Tokio and recovered by the alert Nipponese police; once the case containing it had been accidentally dropped over board from an inter-island steamer, to be brought, fortunately, to light again by grappling hooks, and it was saved from going up in smoke during a fire which partially destroyed a resort in the neighborhood of Japan's renowned mountain, Fujiyama, where its custodians were spending the night.

Tarzan in San Diego.

The "Tarzan" company, under Wilfred Lucas's direction, has spent the past nine days in and about San Diego, securing important scenes for the sequel to the "Tarzan of the Apes" feature made by the National Film Corporation.

Family Reunion Note.

Tsura Oaki, wife of Sessue Hayakawa, and well-known Japanese actress, is to have a leading role in Hayakawa's initial production.

De Mille a Hero.

The coolness of Director Cecil B. de Mille and Raymond Hatton averted a serious accident recently when the famous director was filming some airplane scenes to be used in his latest Artcraft picture, "We Can't Have Everything."

The scenes were shot on the beach just beyond Venice, and Raymond Hatton, who played an aviator of the Royal Flying Corps, was in the machine. A mechanician was whirling the propeller, preparatory to starting the machine for a run along the beach, when flames shot from the machine into the man's face and he darted back panic stricken. The natural inclination of Hatton would have been to jump over the side of the airplane, but instead he calmly kept his seat, and with Director de Mille's help, added to that of the mechanician, he extinguished the blaze.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Indications are that fully 90 per cent. of the boy-power in Seattle and King county will be enrolled in the United States Working Reserve and in the Junior Boys' Reserve when the drive for members closes. So says the Seattle Times. Membership in either organization requires a pledge that the applicant will do everything possible to aid the country during the war.

County Manager C. L. Maxfield declared yesterday that he received word from the principal of one Seattle school that every boy in the school had enrolled, after obtaining parental consent.

Federal recognition of patriotic services performed by boys enrolled in the reserve is to be given upon satisfactory proof being presented that work undertaken has been performed.

When a boy assures the authorities that he has spent six weeks of conscientious and satisfactory service on a farm, on fruit lands, or even in the making and care of his own war garden at home, he will be presented with a Federal badge, bearing the seal of the United States. This assumes enrollment in the Boys' Working Reserve of youths from 16 to 21 years of age. If a boy is in the Junior Boys' Reserve, which includes those from 13 to 16 years of age, like recognition will be given, though not a Federal badge.

If the boy has been working in an industry essential to winning the war and has served in such occupation for ten weeks before his enrollment, he, too, is regarded the same as the boy in the agricultural unit.

Under a third classification, the vocational unit, the boys who are at school and remain there, properly and fully utilizing their time in preparation are recognized with a vocational award. The reserve unstintingly recommends the remaining in school. For the award, very definite and positive assurance must be made that such boys have really applied themselves to study in a spirit of true patriotism.

The world war has even extended to the polar regions and jarred the Eskimo into making some of the comforts for soldiers, it was learned by the Washington Times through William T. Lopp, chief of the Alaskan division of the Bureau of Education.

The Eskimos raise money by selling furs, cutting ivory and longshoring for ships that visit their isolated homes," said Mr. Lopp, who has just reached Washington from Alaska.

"One village which had been saving up for years for a sawmill and had accumulated $130, gave $100 of its scanty hoard," he added to indicate the way the peaceful Eskimo is sacrificing for the savage white man.

A record for patriotic spirit and service has been made by the 175 women employed at the North telephone Exchange, in Indianapolis.

Art Club. The scheme of green and yellow in "Reflections," a nude woman looking at herself in a pier-glass is exceedingly attractive. The study has subtlety and atmosphere, a wonderful transfusion of color.

One could extend the list to a summary of every one of the little canvases. Look at these, among others, study them for your delight: "School Days;" "Mon Cher Fils Arsene," beautiful in color, fine in pose, the head well modeled. "Color Songs of India," a vivid bit, a woman reflected in a mirror; "Reverie No. 1," a beautifully posed relaxed nude figure; "A Spring Day," "An Armenian Lady," "Sur-Loing, France," "Ma Femme," "Mon Cher Fils Abby," "Sunbeams," "Alice," "Portrait of Mrs. Richardson."

Two Exhibitions in One.

At last the desirable and the delightful thing has happened. It sometimes does in this world of hopes deferred and plans delayed. In this case it is a joint exhibition by two of the strongest artists in Los Angeles, two married artists, the one a sculptor, the other a painter. You have guessed it—the artists are Julia Bracken Wendt and William Wendt.

The wonder is that this happy conjunction in exhibitions has not come to pass before. Now that it is really before us, in Exhibition Park, in the same gallery that houses the Pushman pictures, it appears a thing so perfect and so inevitable that we are surprised that it was not thought of years ago. But perhaps, the "time was not ripe." Perhaps the artists themselves preferred to wait the hour and the day.

The hour and the day are here, without a doubt, and we must be content. Nay, we are content, for the two artists have given us of their very best in paint and bronze, their choicest and noblest thoughts in art. Or, at any rate, they have given us the best of what they had on hand. No artist may keep what he makes—which is no doubt well for him, and it is certainly well for the world. The artist's joy is in creation, not in possession.

This joint exhibition ranks among the most delightful, the most significant of the year. It marks a high achievement in two lines of art, it points the way for other and younger painters and sculptors. The very fact that few of the landscapes and bronzes are absolutely new, since the most of them have been seen before in other Los Angeles exhibitions, makes our happy task of appreciation simpler and more intimate. We are greeting and appraising old friends, friends already so familiar and so well liked that they need no recommendation and no introduction.

I will therefore neither recommend nor introduce, but merely mention a few of them to you—a few that I myself like particularly well for their beauty and truth, their constancy and strength. They have other qualities inherent in the big and significant things of life and art, but you will, of course, find out these for yourselves.

William Wendt's spring greens—who is there that paints them with equal lusciousness and purity? They are as alive as the greens of nature itself, and as subtle and tender. We find them in "Green Pastures and Running Brook," a picture with wonderful rhythms in its sloping pastures; in "Morning," where they are as bright as massed emeralds; in "The Mantle of Spring," where the pliant brushwork gives a woodsy effect with amazing ease and skill. Then we come to the winey hues of "A Sombre Spring Day," the subtle and close scheme of yellows and greens in "The Oaks in the Pasture," where the oaks have a movement as of men climbing hills; the rich and mellow color, the halcyon beauty and peacefulness of "The Canyon Road;" the bigness of the out-of-doors in "Hills in Spring," the beauty and tragedy of "Vandalism," a row of eucaluptus trees, graceful and stately, above some trees that have been felled by the ax of the "practical man."

From Julia Bracken Wendt we have more than a score of significant portraits of men, medallions of men and women, delicate and searching interpretations of children, graceful figures full of thought and poetry, modelings that suggest a hundred things they do not say. Among the notable portrait busts are those of Charles F. Lummis, Perry Weidner, Rhodes Hervey, Edward B. Butler, and the acutely characteristic and searching smaller ones of Henry P. Lantz and Jack Wells. Mrs. Wendt's children are always delightful, and she has done nothing more charming than those of Blythe and Evelyn. Her medallion portrait of Carl Oscar Borg is one of the most beautiful I have ever seen anywhere—besides being a most consummately true delineation of character. Nor will we fail to linger over the rhythmical grace of "Mermaid Fountain," the strength and beauty of "Pan Fountain," and the group of medals and medallions that are not portraits.

As I said before, a significant exhibition, one of the most attractive of the year.

Alhambra.

Gladys Brockwell, the Fox star, heads the triple bill at the Alhambra, starting today. "Her One Mistake" is the title of her newest "crook" play, which is the work of George Scarborough, who has turned out so many brilliant plays for the spoken stage and the screen. In "Her One Mistake" Miss Brockwell presents again a dual role—two characters that are entirely dissimilar. Those who view the picture will be surprised by the change in Miss Brockwell's appearance. In her second character she has changed her appearance almost entirely by making up her nose. The transformation is said to be startling. William Scott, who scored heavily with Miss Brockwell in "The Devil's Wheel," is again seen as the crook in the new picture. Henry Lehrman's latest fun producer, "His Neighbor's Keyhole," is promised to be the biggest laugh-making comedy he has made, and it abounds in thrilling situations and is overflowing with pretty girls.

Miller's.

The grand William Farnum revue, the long-heralded return of all of his biggest and best pictures, is to start at Miller's today. During this revue a different Farnum picture is to be shown every day, starting today with "When a Man Sees Red," a picturization of Larry Evan's famous novel, "The Painted Lady." As Luther Smith, William Farnum is said to give a forceful and virile impersonation of a rough and ready sailor who rises above his surroundings and always keeps in mind the boyhood teachings of his mother. It is an elaborately staged production of the usual high Fox standard. On Monday Mr. Farnum will again present his splendid production, "The Conqueror," which was written by the well-known local critic and author, Henry Christeen Warnack; Tuesday, "The Price of Silence," Wednesday, "A Tale of Two Cities," on Thursday "The Heart of a Lion," and on Friday and Saturday "Les Miserables."

Clune's Broadway.

Coming to Clune's Broadway Sunday is wee and winsome Billie Burke in her newest Paramount picture, "Eve's Daughter," an adaption of the stage play of that name with which Grace George opened the present season in New York. So great was the success of the play on the dramatic stage that it immediately suggested itself for screen honors, and it was a very apt selection that cast Billie Burke for the stellar part. Director James Kirkwood, whose very excellent work has been apparent in numerous photoplays, has given it a strong cast and staged it in his usual consummate style and attention to detail. By way of good measure the management has added another of those clean and enjoyable comedies of the James Montgomery Flagg series, under the title of "The Screen Fan."

Symphony.

"Mother," a highly interesting melodrama, based on the theme of mother-love, and starring Elizabeth Risdon, the charming young American actress of international fame on both stage and screen, will be next week's offering at the Symphony. "Mother" is a screen version of the novel of the same name by Eden Philpotts, and was directed by George Loane Tucker. Miss Risdon's most recent success was "The Manxman," which enjoyed an extended run at a leading local theater. The happy blending of comthe strongest points in its favor, edy and pathos which Director Tucker has so skilfully intermingled in "Mother" has proven to be one of according to eastern critics who have been fortunate in seeing a preview of the film.

Garrick.

Coming to the Garrick this Sunday is one of the most talked of photoplays of the year, "Redemption," starring Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, her son, William Russell Thaw, and Jack Clifford, her present husband. Critics have summed up the production by declaring it to be the visual crucifixion of a woman's soul. The story is based on the former life of the star, yet is distinctly away from it, and it is worked out so beautifully that one would hardly realize it is her life. Her little son, Russell Thaw, and her husband, Jack Clifford are brought into the picture. Russell Thaw is a precocious youth who has an especial appeal to women, and Jack Clifford does a modern dance with Miss Nesbit with excellent effect.

Palace.

"Blue Blazes Rawden," a thrilling story of the great Northwest, starring William S. Hart, will be the coming week's attraction at the Palace. The entire action of the picture takes place in the frozen North, and some of the most beautiful scenes ever used in a motion picture are said to exist in this, Hart's latest production. "Blue Blazes Rawden" presents the famous star in the role of a hardy lumberjack in the forests of the North, a role entirely different from those of the usual type for which Hart is famous, but nevertheless one which he assumes with as great an ease and finesse of portrayal as any of his cowboy or "road agent" types. Added attractions on the coming bill, will be Ford Sterling in the Keystone comedy, "As Desperate Scoundrel," and the Christie fun fest, "Their Breezy Affair."

Quinn's Rialto.

A week ago there appeared on the screen at Quinn's Rialto Reginald Barker's latest cinema drama, "Carmen of the Klondike." Clara Williams, Hershall Mayall and Edward Coxen were the featured stars in Monte Katterjohn's story. The Los Angeles critics in a body declared the production one of the most unusual and thrilling that the silversheet has offered in many weeks, and there is no doubt that this great story of Alaska is the one drama that will live as one of the foremost pictures of the Far North. "Carmen of the Klondike" will begin a second week today at the Rialto. There will be no advanced prices. See this terrific hit. J. A. Quinn has refused to take advantage of the extraordinary nature of this picture, and is giving the show at the same admission rates that have always prevailed at the Rialto.

Riviera.

"Wolves of the Border," Triangle's latest western melodrama, with Roy Stewart, the ever-popular cowboy daredevil as the star, and Josie Sedgwick as his leading woman, comes to the Riviera this current week, and promises to be one of the biggest attractions the popular Broadway theater has played since becoming one of the Cauifield enterprises. The raids of Mexican bandits across the California, Arizona, Texas and New Mexico borders have been the subject of many news stories in the daily press, but it remained for the Triangle scenario department to create an absorbing romance around the activities of these nefarious marauders. Roy Stewart, the star, is called upon for more than his usual number of daring feats, and for some real dramatic acting as well.

Superba.

Hailed as even a greater snow picture than "God's Country and the Woman," which ran four weeks at the Superba a little more than a year ago, "The Guilt of Silence," Bluebird's first big Alaskan melodrama, starring Monroe Salisbury and Ruth Clifford, comes to the Superba this Sunday. It was taken at Truckee in the heaviest blizzard in seven years. Director Elmer Clifton has woven a red-blooded romance of the frozen north in with a background of scenic grandeur. Virgin snows, untracked by man or beast form the curtain before which this melodrama of gold and love is staged. Like a streak of crimson on the virgin canvas, so vividly stands out this red-blooded romance of two souls far from home on the great white background of the winter snows. Salisbury has never had a more compelling role. Ruth Clifford has never been more appealing.

The Reason.

MASHERS KEEP AWAY FROM MORGAN DANCERS.

THIRD season in major vaudeville for the Greater Morgan Dancers, and any one of the vigorously beautiful young women, nearly all local girls, by the way, has yet to receive her first mash note!

Does it startle you? Seems odd, doesn't it—that not one of these Southern California maidens, all of them charming, should have never been annoyed by the stage-door pest so well known to every chorus girl in the world.

"Why should the Johnnies have singled your girls out as forbidden ground for their operations?" was the question put to Marion Morgan, director of the act.

Herewith her answer:

"It is the new feminine psychology that is responsible for it—the girls themselves, and nothing else. Barefooted and barelimbed, wearing the meager gauze drapery my girls are less uncovered than the average musical comedy chorus girl with the exaggerated decolette and the abbreviated skirt. That is because their expression is free from sex, it is that of the buoyant spirit of the child, youth, with the freshness of spring flowers and as evanescent. Such an attitude cannot help but be a discourager and a rebuke to the lower minds."

"But doesn't that discourage romance?"

"No!" was her positive reply. "True romance, a fine comradeship of the spirit, is inherent in every nature. But by the new feminine psychology a woman no longer leans—she stands erect. The ivy as a symbol of womanhood is vanishing. The lily, erect, stainless, beautiful, has taken its place. I expect my girls will marry, but such has been their training that they are physical thoroughbreds, and I believe they would not look twice at a man who is physically inferior to them. They would see right through the hollow-chested masher. When they marry, I believe their marriage will be permanent. They will see more clearly the true value of life."

CONDUCTED BY GORDON RAY YOUNG

GERMANS EXPECT OUR BOYS TO ABSORB KULTUR IN PRISON.

Ambassador Gerard Lost His Temper When Told That—Sidelights on the Huns—How the Death's Head Hussars Originated. Victory will Come When Germans Reach the "Suicide Point."

FACE TO FACE WITH KAISERISM. By James W. Gerard. George H. Doran Company, New York.

MR. GERARD says that the only time he lost his temper during his four years in Germany was when a presumably intelligent Teuton man of affairs invited him to contemplate the benefit that would accrue to the world when the hundreds of thousands of prisoners in German camps were released to their own countries and carried with them Kultur. This man was in earnest. He thought Germany was doing her enemies a great service by taking prisoners, stowing them in pig pens hedged about with barbed wire and bayonets.

When nations fight against foemen with such psychological processes as that running through their heads the arguments for peace, honor or decency must be made not at the point of a bayonet, but after the bayonet has been thrust home.

Mr. Gerard says that since he has come home, "I have been like Cassandra, the prophetess fated to be right, but never believed. I said then (March, 1917,) Germany would never break because of starvation, or fail because of revolution, and that her man power was great."

He now repeats that she will not starve or be torn by revolution; she must be beaten down by sheer man power.

But "there is a suicide point in the German character. The German has been sustained since the war by victories somewhere. No defeats were brought home to the German people. . . . With the exception of a very small bit of Alsace, the war is being fought far from German territory. The German can swagger down the streets of the capitals of his enemies." However, when it is brought home to Germany by blow on blow that her successes have been futile and that victory is a mirage, her people will reach the suicide point. "Revolution," says Mr. Gerard, "will not come during the war, but after it, unless it closes with a German peace, or unless in anticipation of revolt rights are granted to the people."

"Face to Face with Kaiserism" is an illuminating book. Perhaps it is because it did not awaken such expectations as "My Four Years in Germany" that it seems to tell more.

For some busy weeks while still in Berlin, Mr. Gerard did not write to Washington the weekly letter that is supposed to pass from Ambassadors to the home government inviolably; but Zimmermann, at last exasperated at being unable to find the letter in the mail bags, blurted out: "Don't you ever write reports to your government?"

Spies haunted Mr. Gerard from the time he left Germany until he arrived in New York, and such was their "subtility" that one big fellow continually stalked about six paces behind him—hoping no doubt to catch Mr. Gerard off his guard! But the spies are more clever than might be inferred from that. Germany employs more, he says, than all the other countries put together.

Mr. Gerard has so much variegated information, so many incidents and illustrations, that it is not easy to give the gist of his book. He relates that the Kaiser uses silver wine glasses so no one at the table can detect how little he drinks; that the Crown Prince is not the robber and libertine he is generally credited with being, but a rather agreeable and intelligent young fellow who happens to love war; that the famous Black Hussars "owes its black uniform and white death's head to the thrift of Friedrich II, who utilized the black funeral hangings at the elaborate funeral of his father to make uniforms for this regiment;" that the Junkers are making money out of their estates and the Kaiser is growing richer from the profits of his interest in the Krupp plant; that Sweden, forced by her aristocracy, would probably long ago have joined the Central Powers except that the exchange of wounded prisoners between Germany and Russia was made via Sweden, and the people were made too familiar with the frightful maimed to yield to the pressure of the pro-German court; that German officials were unable to understand why America did not take advantage of the war to seize Mexico; that German propaganda in America has reached such an extent that books in Chicago public schools are stamped with the Prussian arms and contain passages praising the Kaiser; and that the Hohenzollerns acquired their "divine appointment" to rule by foreclosing a mortgage.

This vivid bit of history may be of interest, placed in the book after a quotation from a conservative German newspaper, which said: "The German Emperor is not our 'mouthpiece,' but our truly beloved Emperor sent to us by God."

Mr. Gerard adds: "Does the German-American ever stop to consider how the Hohenzollerns obtained possession of the Mark of Brandenburg, the basis of modern Prussia? Five hundred years ago the Hohenzollerns were Counts of Nuremburg, then as now a rich trading city. Sigismund III wanted ready money and this was advanced by the Hohenzollerns, Counts of Nuremburg, on the security of the Mark of Brandenburg pledged as collateral to the loan, which totaled only $100,000. Later the Counts of Nuremburg foreclosed their mortgage and took possession of the Mark of Brandenburg and have held it ever since."

Another curious bit of information illustrative of the German brain is Mr. Gerard's statement that people may be subjected—when they enter Germany—to trial for lese majeste, because of remarks made in other countries. From which it may be taken that Mr. Gerard does not intend ever to revisit the "Fatherland."

Mr. Gerard visited France before his return. He says if there is any sign of weakening it is among the financiers, not among the poor and the men in the trenches. And this suggests something of the spirit of France, and may tend to explain the grim fortitude that she is showing:

". . . I talked with a blue-clad French solider. . . . He said: 'My family comes from the east of France; my great grandfather was killed by the Prussians in 1814, my grandfather was shot in his garden by the Prussians in 1870, my father died of grief in 1916, because my two sisters in Lille fell into Prussian hands and were taken as their slaves with all that that means. I have decided that we must end this horror once and for all, so that my children can cultivate their little fields without this constant haunting fear of the invading Prussian."

And let Germany win, let her have peace without defeat, and the children of America will learn just what it means to have "this constant haunting fear of the invading Prussian."

FICTION.

"The Amazing Interlude."

Mary Roberts Rineheart seems to have put a little more effort into "The Amazing Interlude" (George H. Doran Company) than went into any of her books of recent date, and she appears to have struggled against her fascination for sentimentality—or perhaps it is merely her consciousness that her readers are fascinated by that sort of thing. Anyway, she keeps the sentimental readers in the throes of trepidation lest the ending will not be happy, then compromises with her artistic sense by leaving it to be inferred that Sara Lee eventually marries Henri—whose last name we may not know, but who seems to be attached by blood to Belgian royalty.

However, it is a story that women cannot fail to like, and Sara Lee's naivete and simplicity is charming. She leaves her fiance and friends behind her and goes to Europe to start a relief station, dependent on the scanty funds pledged by the people of her village. She meets Henri, the mysterious, who not only aids her in a hundred different ways, but falls deeply in love almost at the first glance. Henri is a gallant character, but even his faint intimations of love are rejected by Sara Lee, who abruptly goes back to the States because Harvey, the fiance, says she must if she still wishes for the honor of marrying him.

It is at this point that the story becomes tense. We shall content ourselves by saying that Sara Lee goes home, but interest in the tale does not end with that development.

In many respects it closely approximates a thrilling story, with spies, escapes and all that sort of thing, and it gives as good—if not better—picture of war conditions as Mrs. Rinehart's pretentiously descriptive books, "Kings, Queens and Pawns," which she wrote from the viewpoint of a lady correspondent.

"The Devil to Pay."

Frances Nimmo Greene has turned from conventionalized "hero" fiction to write a detective story, one of the kind with a "punch." And in "The Devil to Pay" (Charles Scribner's Sons) there is much italicized hysteria and a hodge-podge of complications about a situation which Alfred Henry Lewis has already made much of in a semi-authentic short story, basing it on a one-time famous New York murder.

The story is told largely from the viewpoint of a young boy whose sister is loved by the District Attorney and by the bank cashier accused of being implicated in a murder for which one man has already been hanged. It is all very complicated and tedious, with a lot of hypodermically injected "mystery," and the reader is supposed to be rewarded for plowing through some 270 pages of hysteria by the denouement in which it is shown that dead men may tell very convincing tales.

The only really surprising thing about the book is that Charles Scribner published it.

"The House of Intrigue."

When Arthur Stringer wrote "The Prairie Wife" from the viewpoint of the woman he succeeded with a distinctive bit of feminine psychology that he has attempted to duplicate in "The House of Intrigue" (Bobbs, Merrill Company.) Baddie tells the story. She is a different type of woman from the Prairie Wife, but Mr. Stringer impersonates the female narrator about as well as Julian Eltinge does her form and fashion.

Baddie has more or less grown up in the company of crooks without actually becoming one. She tries to "reform" by becoming a detective, but cuts loose from the respectable life because the men are not respectable, and at once becomes involved in a very complicated plot that includes the impersonation of an heiress, blackmail, robbery, various kinds of swindles and "true" love.

The motive behind Wendy Washburn's incomprehensible responsibility for those complications are scarcely less plausible than the incidents themselves (for Wendy is a very proper rich young man!) but the story is exciting. Baddie is vivacious, blessed with a sense of humor and an entertaining narrator.

CRITICISM.

[Current Opinion for May:] The bane of modern literature, especially of modern criticism, is cleverness. It is a vice that grows and grows upon one until truth and balance and justice and the sense of moral responsibility are all swallowed up in the one effort to be brilliantly clever.

That, we fear, is what ails Mr. H. L. Mencken. He is accounted one of our cleverest critics. He is undeniably interesting and diverting. But cleverness is becoming his ultimate aim and that is fatal. It distorts one's sense of values. It makes one especially fond of half-truths. It plays with the surface of things. The pen that always scintillates is not necessarily superficial but it is very apt to be.

We have been reading Mr. Mencken's essay in the New York Evening Mail on "Poetry and Other Vices." The title is clever and false. The essay is full of clever half-truths presented with no critical conscience whatever as whole truths. The opening sentence is a sample. He writes: "The objection to poetry is that it is far too personal and confidential; the poet falls inevitably into the position of a man complaining about his bad stomach or of a woman bragging about her sickening adventures in surgery and obstetrics." Bright? Yes, and silly. As if all the poets write about is their diseases. The article is full of such things. He speaks of "lyric poetry, the only kind worth a hoot or even worthy a name"—a remark we might enjoy coming in casual conversation from an impulsive college boy, but from a grown-up critic, no. "I doubt that there are in the whole world a thousand men who actually read long poems"—any poem of over 100 lines is a long poem to Mr. Mencken—"with pleasure, and these are chiefly senile." What then, one wonders, keeps these long poems alive century after century with nothing but senility standing sponsor for them? He keeps on in this way: "The finest poetry, reduced to straightforward propositions, would reduce even a servant-girl to snickers." Even a servant-girl—as if her snickers are the very finality of judgment. Again: "All poets should be killed at twenty-six. Poetry would be vastly better if they were. . . . All the genuine poetry of the world"—all, mind you—"has been written by youngsters and is full of their youth."

And this is the writer E. Howe tells us is the foremost of American critics. Oh, shucks.

Every Chinese junk has an eye carved in the bow in order to "see" where it is going.

SLIGHT COMMENT.

"Reincarnations."

In a new book of verse, "Reincarnations" (The Macmillan Company,) James Stephens, author of "The Rocky Road to Dublin" and "Here are Ladies," says that his book by rights should be called "Loot" or "Treasure-Trove," "or some name which would indicate that it had been inspired by the Irish of from one to three centuries ago, though the word translation would be a misdescription. . . . Some of the poems owe no more than a phrase, a line, half a line, to the Irish, and around these scraps I have blown a bubble of verse and made my poem. In other cases, where the matter of the poem is almost entirely taken from the Irish, I have yet followed my own instinct in the arrangement of it, and the result might be called new poems."

"Reflections on War and Death."

A little book issued by Moffat, Yard & Co., called "Reflections on War and Death," by Dr. Sigmund Freud, about whose theories there has been much noise of battles, perhaps quite incidentally presents the state of mind of the more philosophic "enemy" students. Dr. Freud mentions the inevitable racial bitterness that wars create and refers to the Allied people's effort "to cast one of these great civilized nations . . . out from the civilized community as though it were barbaric," and he adds: "We live in hope that impartial history will furnish the proof that this very nation, in whose language I am writing and for whose victory our dear ones are fighting, has sinned least against the laws of human civilization."

That from an eminent Austrian regarding Germany. We may therefore judge how very little the rank and file of Austrians have become familiar with the rape and looting, the brutality and faithlessness of that nation for whom their "dear ones are fighting."

Dr. Freud, growing psychological, says that perhaps the real secret of heroism is when the idea of death finds no acceptance in our impulses, and that heroes believe themselves—for the time—deathless.

"Psychology and Preaching."

Charles S. Gardner, professor of homiletics and sociology in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, "undertakes to do for preachers what volumes on educational psychology have done for teachers" in "Psychology and Preaching" (the Macmillan Company.) How times have changed since the pulpit thunders set the sinner quaking may be seen in the remark that "the preacher should strenuously strive against the habit of dogmatism." And the pious voice of the preacher, which but a few years ago marked him as distinctly as the cloth is explained as "the tendency to a merely habitual and superficial gravity of tone and manner." This, more naturally than the layman generally perceives, is due to the fact that the preacher "is dealing almost continually with the most sacred and awful realities—sin, salvation, the religious meaning of life, death, eternity, God." Another sentence from this book which would fall harshly on the old-time theologians says "there is no precinct, however sacred, which can successfully resist the entrance of the great questioner . . . Science."

HARRY LAUDER.

A MINSTREL IN FRANCE. By Harry Lauder. Hearst International Library Company, New York.

This is literally a book of tears behind laughter, a book of vengeance, for while Harry Lauder, with songs, jokes and flashes of impassioned eloquence, has toured his own and other countries urging men into the army, urging war money into the Ally coffers, there has been with him, in vivid memory, his "one and only boy," slain by the Huns. He was the first entertainer to go into the fighting lines—right up against the edge of battle—to sing to the boys that had fought with his own son, Capt. John Lauder.

When word came of the boy's death, Harry Lauder thought to retire from the platform and go into the army and do his bit with a rifle; but the army heads would not hear of it. They said he was worth a division as a recruiter and inspirer. So he set the army heads awag by demanding that he be allowed to go up to the front.

"I wanted," he says, "to go up to the battle lines themselves and to sing for the boys who were there in the thick of the struggle with the Huns. I wanted to give a concert in a front line trench where the Huns could hear me if they cared to listen. I wanted them to learn once more the lesson we could never teach them often enough—the lesson of the spirit of the British army, that could go into battle with a laugh on its lips."

Harry Lauder went. He sang and told jokes to the boys, he toured the war districts of France; also toured England, Scotland and America, carrying on the war in his own way and never forgetting "the one and only boy" who died at the hands of the Huns.

He tells it all in "A Minstrel in France," how the last words of Capt. Lauder were "Carry on," and his father has taken it as instructions to fight on and laugh on. It is a poignant book, not one with literary finish at all, but simple and often sentimental; yet it has in it that intangible gripping quality which has made Harry Lauder one of the most popular of men.

Otherwise Afflicted.

When soldiers are sent to the base hospital for treatment they are taken first to the receiving ward, where they turn in their clothing and valuables and receive pajamas and a bathrobe for hospital wear.

A negro soldier was brought in, and while a record was being made of his clothing and personal effects, an orderly asked him if he had pajamas. The darky grinned painfully and said:

"No, sah, it's mumps!"

BLASTS OF A SILVER TRUMPET.

THE SILVER TRUMPET. By Amelia Josephine Burr. George H. Doran Company, New York.

TO WHAT are the poets coming if the war lasts? The change is no more apparent in any poet than in Amelia Josephine Burr as shown in this latest volume, "The Silver Trumpet." Some of those who enjoy the sweet, musical lilts of verse perhaps remember her "In Deep Places," which was properly awarded some kind of a prize in England. Prizes, I fancy, are meant to confer as much honor on the judgment of the awarder as upon the rewarded; so whoever conferred the prize deserved the honor. But that was in the early, if not prewar days. Out of "Deep Places" one would never envision "The Silver Trumpet": here is war, war, red war. Some of the verse is thrilling indeed, most of it poignant. No doubt it is too much to ask singers to continue in these clangorous times the melodies of peaceful days.

No. The poets have heard "the old stern cry," which Miss Burr celebrates:

"We thought that reason had mastered men,
That peace of the world was lord,
That never the roll of the drum again
Should quicken the thirsty sword—
But our bubble broke with a sudden blow
And we heard like the trumpet's din
That leveled the walls of Jericho
The old stern cry—'Fall in!'"

The last three lines must impress many people as among the most vivid that the war has evoked. The poem does not quite rise to the dignity of Kipling's cry:

"Who dies if England live!"

but then, that master has ever been a vigorous writer of war, and Miss Burr was deservedly prominent among the lyrists.

But "The Silver Trumpet" sounds martial blasts of stirring appeal. One of the most suprising is "The Whistle and the Drum," written with fine spirit and embodying in its meter something of the tramp, tramp of tired feet.

From some source or other the information has come that Miss Burr took all of the incidents she has treated of from authentic reports, from correspondents or books; and though, as one English officer has said with feeling, "war is damned dull, damned dirty and damned dangerous," this poet has gleamed certain bright incidents and in a most distinctive way when she sings:

"God bless the Irish wit of him,
The lad who by the grit of him
Made history with a whistle and a drum."

The poem begins:

"It was back, back, back
With the graycoats on their track.
All shriveled by the battle's deadly breath,
And pressed, pressed, pressed
Till they only longed for rest
Though the waking were to capture or to death.
The stones had gashed the leather
And the aching flesh together.
Two hundred men and fifty wholly broke—
But an Irish major found them when despair was closing round them,
And he brought them back to courage with a joke.
Just a penny whistle and a wee toy drum,
And haggard ruins all but dead were stumbling onward where they led,
Laughing as they went, although their lips were numb
And every footprint marked the road with red.
All the way to Roupy in the slaughtering heat
The plucky little playthings beat new life into the bleeding feet
Ah, never was a royal band could make a music half so grand
As did that penny whistle and that wee toy drum!"

There are a few poems that might well have been omitted for not all that attempt the delicate sentiment which by a shade of overstressing becomes sentimental are so felicitous as "The Woman at Home:"

"Each at her post we women stand:
Mine is the safer, easier part—
And yet there is an iron band
Of envy round my heart
For her, the weary nurse who spent
Those last dear moments at his side,
The woman who in pity bent
And kissed him when he died."

Much of the verse is occasional, and it is not often that a collection of occasional verse has much of an appeal for the discriminating or is long remembered by anybody. But if many of the selections in this do not permanently add to Miss Burr's eminence then I shall pawn my prophet robes. There is a flaming quality here that fewer of the war poets than it is pleasing to remember have attained; a sheer intensity that takes the shrill notes of war without break or tremor. The impression is that Miss Burr feels what she writes and has simulated nothing: the grimness and horror of such as "The Costly Game" could be marred with a false syllable, but it isn't. There is also in the poems the strength of reticence, the subtility of the unvoiced, as "Taken for Granted," and a deft dealing in the narrative of "Father O'Shea."

The war has done strange things with Amelia Josephine Burr. She has discarded the pipes of Pan for the silver trumpet; and though a personal preference finds more gratification in the lyrics and wind flowers of "the era golden before the birth of Mars," these battle shouts and trumpet blasts have a vigor, spirit and rhythm eminently fitted to the harsh times of war.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Rebecca West and Mary Webb.

Rebecca West, the mysterious Englishwoman whose articles in the New Republic and whose recent novel, "The Return of the Soldier," have attracted much appreciative attention in this country, in a symposium in the New York Sun on the most significant book of the year awarded that glowing prize to Mary Webb's "Gone to Earth," published in the United States by E. P. Dutton & Co. "The year's discovery," she says, "has been Mary Webb, author of 'Gone to Earth.' She is a genius and I shouldn't mind wagering that she is going to be the most distinguished writer of our generation." An atmosphere of mystery, at least in this country, envelops the personality of Rebecca West. The only things that are known about her are that Rebecca West is not her real name, although it is the name under which she receives her mail at two English addresses, that she is one of several sisters and that her sympathies are passionately with the working people.

Braithwaite's Anthologies.

Messrs. Small, Maynard & Co. (Boston) announce that they have taken over from a New York concern the publishing right of William Stanley Brathwaite's "Anthologies of magazine verse for 1914, 1915 and 1916." Small, Maynard & Co. published last year Mr. Braithwaite's anthology of magazine verse for 1917, so that his complete series of anthologies (which the New York Times declares "are signs of the times and milestones upon the way") are now issued from Boston, on the list of that company.

Fooling the Boche.

A curious development of the war in the villages near the front is described as follows by Preston Gibson in "Battering the Boche:" "As the Germans and French have a perfect system of listening in on a telephone by means of an instrument which is stuck in the ground and which enables you to hear conversations going along on the other side of the trenches, all villages near the lines have been renamed. The street names are comic. Here in this village, a mile from the firing line, we have the street of New York, the street of Chicago, the street of Paris; it is also necessary that curious numbers and foolish codes be employed. Thus when sending for small ammunition a message will sound something like this: 'Send to New York street five baskets of grapes,' which would mean five wagonloads of small ammunition. The detail of the war is almost greater that the war itself."

"Confessions of the Czarina."

"Confessions of the Czarina," by Count Paul Vassili, published immediately by the Harpers, is the title of a book dealing with the dethroned Empress' life and the intrigues of the Russian court. The book gives vivid pictures of her unhappy life. The opening chapters show her as the young Princess of Hesse-Darmstadt; then follow her marriage to the Czar, which was to be the cause of much bitterness shown toward her; the appearance of the famous Anna Wyrubewa at court; Col. Orloff's strange suicide. Count Paul Vassili is already well known for his earlier book, "Behind the Veil at the Russian Court," which was published in the United States two years ago. No one is better able to tell of the strange happenings that took place at the court of the Czar than the author of "Confessions of the Czarina."

"To Hell with the Ladies."

Sergt. R. Douglas Pinkerton, author of "Ladies from Hell," war experiences of the famous London Scottish regiment, so-called by the Germans, tells of a friend of his, a lady, who was asked to go into a certain New York store to get a copy of the book. When she got to the store she found she had forgotten the title, and all she could remember was that it had "hell" and "ladies" it in. So she asked for "To Hell with the Ladies." And she got the right book!

Sensible Sincerity

—"I have reached the conclusion that this will be a great book year—more books will be read than in years before.
—"The psychological influence of this war is creating a longing to know more of the elemental truths of life—of the Beginnings of Things that are maturing into such frightfulness today.

—"For consolation—for inspiration—for relief from the tension of the times, certain sensibly sincere books will be sought.

—"And it is just such books that That Different Book Store at Bullock's—with its highly developed Service—its eminent booklore ability—will help you to select.
—"Perhaps the best in History, Biography, Travel, Essays, Poetry, Drama, Art—the important Fiction—the accredited war books—inspirational and religious books, etc.

Quite out of the ordinary was the birthday surprise given the president last week at the conclusion of the section meetings. Mrs. Cleason's class in parliamentary law ended its year's study with a lesson on elections. Mrs. Ellen French Aldrich, chairman of the civics section, then presented her last programme for the year, when Mrs. Estelle Lawton Lindsey, former Councilwoman, gave an entertaining talk on "City Officials." The meeting then adjourned to the top floor of the Brack Shops for an informal party in honor of the natal day of Mrs. Gilman. There was a birthday cake, masses of flowers, gifts and toasts.

On Friday evening of this week the annual social night of the club will be observed at Goldberg's Academy. Under the leadership of Mrs. Chester Smith, a special entertainment has been planned for the pleasure of the men, relatives and friends of members. Wednesday Morning Club.

The Wednesday Morning Club is doing its Red Cross bit in different ways. The song "Way Back Home," music by Mrs. Hallie Swartz and words by Inez Townsend Tribit is being sold to help the cause.

Wednesday being reciprocity day a number of presidents from other clubs were present and enjoyed Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith's programme of "Great Messages in Prose and Verse," and her sketch of the community pageant to be staged at Exposition Park on the 29th inst.

Last night the music section of the club presented an "over the top" music festival, followed by dancing to "jazz" music, for the Liberty Bond fund. Soldiers and sailors were admitted free.

On next Wednesday Mrs. Gertrude Follansbee will dramatically interpret "The Will Barrie." Miss Mary Pech will sing a group of songs and Mrs. H. L. Gottchshall is luncheon hostess.

The Ramblers will "ramble" to Fish Canyon on the 23rd.

Catholic Women's Club.

The Catholic Women's Club held its meeting at the Columbus Auditorium, No. 612 South Flower street on Wednesday.

The programme consisted of a talk by Rev. William Power on the life of Francis Thompson, which proved replete with interest.

Miss Louise Gude sang two songs in a most pleasing manner, including one by request "God Protect Our Boys Tonight."

The programme was in charge of the programme chairman, Mrs. William P. O'Meara.

The club gave several cases of milk to the relief ship to France.

Inglewood Woman's Club.

The Inglewood Woman's Club heard an interesting talk by Mrs. John J. Abramson of Los Angeles, who chose for her subject, "The Value of Words in Songs." She ably demonstrated her subject by singing in a charming manner, a group of songs, consisting of lullabies, children's songs, and a sacred song. After this talk, the annual election took place, which resulted in the following officers for next year: Mrs. Frank Parent, president; Mrs. G. M. Green, vice-president; Mrs. M. B. Mosher, second vice-president; Mrs. Evan Lewis, recording secretary; Mrs. W. D. Crow, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John Brewer, federation secretary; Mrs. H. J. Anderson, treasurer; Mrs. W. C. Stevens, historian; directors, Mrs. S. A. Barron, Mrs. W. W. Gardner, Mrs. T. G. Stevens.

Woman's City Club.

At the meeting of the Woman's City Club next Monday in Hamburger's auditorium at 1 p.m., the speaker will be Lieut. S. P. Kimmel, who will tell of his experiences with the French Ambulance Corps.

After a year of this work Lieut. Kimmel was given a commission in the Auxiliary Army Reserves, and sent to the United States on furlough.

The women's clubs will be gallantly represented in the enchanting "Son of the Southland" pageant which will take place at Exposition Park on the evening of the 29th inst. under the direction of Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith. MILITARY RITES.

First American Woman Killed on Line of Battle Given Soldier's Burial.

Miss Marion G. Crandell, whose home was in Alameda, Cal., is the first American Y.M.C.A. worker to be killed on the line of battle. News has been received in Paris of her death and burial.

Miss Crandell was a worker in the Foyer du Soldat at Sainte-Menehould. She was killed by a shell which burst in her room, tearing off her left hand and inflicting injuries from which she died soon afterward. She was buried in a French military cemetery, being the only woman interred in this spot where thousands of French soldiers have been buried.

Miss Crandell landed in France February 15. She was a companion on the voyage of Miss Winona Martin, the Y.M.C.A. worker who was killed during an air raid on Paris while a patient in a hospital. Miss Crandell was a teacher of French in the Episcopal convent at Davenport, Iowa, prior to her coming to France. She was educated in the United States and in France. She was born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in 1872.

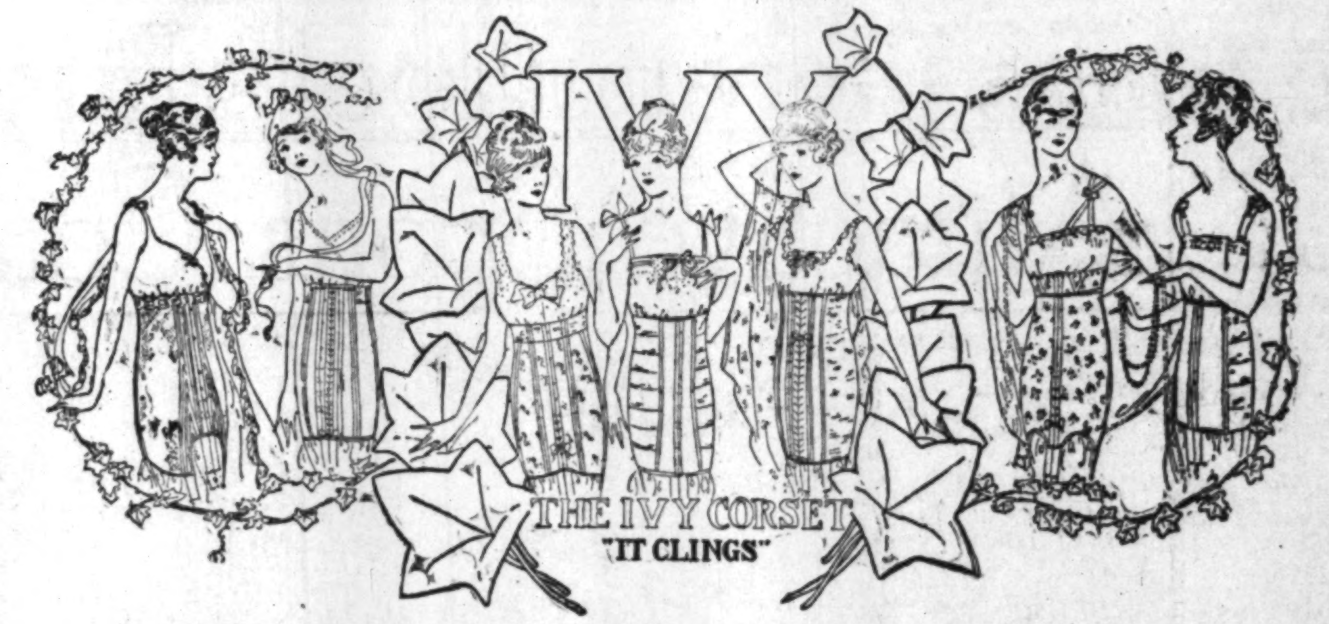
The appended letter was received in Paris recently from the director in charge of the Foyer du Soldat work in the vicinity where Miss Crandell was engaged in her labors:

"Miss Crandell, our directress at S——, was struck by a shell yesterday, before her Foyer. The first shell fell on the Foyer, and a second one, soon after, in the room of Miss Crandell. Miss Crandell was struck on the arm and neck by parts of the shell. She was taken immediately to the ambulance, and died without recovering consciousness.

"The American director of the Foyer at La Grange-au-Bois, arranged for a military carriage to come for her. A chaplain of the army corps held a service in the little hut, as a chapel, draped in black. There was also there the coffin of a soldier who had been killed. Thus Miss Crandell, who came to France to serve the French soldiers, was treated as a soldier, with the same honors as for those who fell fighting. A large flag, with the three colors covered her bier, and some friends had brought a crown and flowers. The same carriage and horses which are used for the soldiers, passing by side streets to avoid the shells, took her body to the military cemetery. This was indeed her place, beside 6000 tombs of soldiers 'dead for the country.' Miss Crandell has 'died for France.' The head doctor tells me that this is the first woman buried in this vast cemetery, the very sight of which moves the heart.

"The discourse of the chaplain was punctuated by the cannon. The speaker recalled that the evening before the catastrophe, a Catholic aumonier visiting the Foyer, asked if she were not afraid. Miss Crandell replied: 'Oh, no; I pray, and after that I haveno more fear.' "—[European Edition of New York Herald.

A group of European electricians decided, after experimenting, that better results were obtained by placing the carbons in arc lamps horizontally and one slightly above the other.



—It should be simple enough, Probably it is but the trouble with so many problems is that they are so simple that we do not see them in their true light and therefore do not work properly towards their solution—

—My name is Advertising—Last Sunday I introduced myself to the readers of this paper and stated

My Problem

—This Sunday I am repeating myself in order that I may be clearly understood—perhaps, by even more readers—some may have failed to meet me last Sunday—

—My problem is this—the Advertisement of Ivy Corsets, which, stated in advertising terms of one syllable—is to attract the attention of women to, and to arouse the interest of women in Ivy Corsets to that point where women will desire to know Ivy Corsets—

—Now, I have been to a certain degree successful—I have directed the minds of many women to Ivy Corsets and many, many, many women are now wearing Ivy Corsets because of the particular goodness of Ivy Corsets.

—But when I speak of women—I recognize within my mind that Women means Every Woman—and I accept it as my responsibility to inform Every Woman of Ivy Corsets—

that is the problem—

—There are so many good corsets that so many women have their favorite corset to which they give such friendship that they see no reason why they should investigate another corset—Perhaps there may be no such reason, and yet again perhaps there may be a very good reason why they should investigate another corset—and it is so easy to investigate.

—Then there are so many styles in corsets—perhaps I had better say models—that it is well within the bounds of possibility that one may not be wearing the very best corset for one's own figure—And it is so important to be sure.

—Then there are such different standards of design and manufacture that have to do with the very heart of the corset itself—with its character and its quality—and it is so inexpensive to be careful—

—Wouldn't you think for the sake of one's very own satisfaction that one could hardly afford not to be careful, and sure and that one would investigate?—

—Now here is this Ivy Corset designed and made by a woman for women, —this Ivy Corset that has built itself up to a foremost position of prominence in short years, by sheer merit, and few words—this Ivy Corset that is eminent because of the accuracy of its design, because of the high standard of its workmanship and construction, because of the extensive variety of its models—because of its intrinsic value.

And Women Should Know

—Why, those famous Ivy Corsets with elastic tops are just one group—a boon to certain women; then the Boneless Ivy Corsets, and the semi-boneless Ivy Corsets—Notable families in themselves and in styles for many figures; then the maternity Ivy Corset—and the Ivy Corsets for large figures and the Ivy Corsets for misses and girls.

—And these are but a few—If women, every woman, could know—

The sincerity, and thought, and skill, that is put into the Creation of each Ivy Corset model!

—That is the point—

—Have you an idea? Can you give it to me?—Perhaps the closer knowledge of Ivy Corsets themselves may be an advantage—They are on the 4th floor. At Bullock's exclusively in Los Angeles.

BITS OF VERSE.

WAR WORK.

What art thou doing, sister of mine?
What is thy work for this country of thine?
Knitting and sewing,
Freely bestowing,
Largess and laughter,
Though grief comes after?
See that thou give them all of thine heart,
Thankful and glad to be doing thy part,
Sister of mine!

What art thou doing, brother of mine,
Since thou art spared from the firing line?
Toiling and saving,
Poverty braving,
Gallantly living,
Ceaselessly giving,
Though never bullet be aimed at thine heart,
Still art thou acting a soldierly part,
Brother of mine!

What art thou doing, free land of mine?
What is thy task for these children of thine?
Keeping them pure,
Strong to endure,
Teaching them right,
Yielding them might,
Holding them close to the pulse of thine heart,
Bearing them, nursing them—blest be thy part,
Free land of mine!
—[Nora Archibald Smith, in Good Housekeeping.

MID-APRIL IN VERMONT.

From out his heavenly sallyport
Again Apollo sallies,
And leads his cuirassiers of light
Through these deverdured valleys;
The frost king flies, the sun king wins,
And human nature rallies.

What joy to see the yellow sun
Sweep through the gulfs and gullies,
And disinfect the lanes and lawns
That winter's rudeness sullies!
He even dries the road between
Our place and Uncle Cully's.

He warms and lights the deepest dell
And cleanses every dingle;
The meadow runs and rills resolve
With distant seas to mingle;
The lily-of-the-valley bells
Will soon begin to jingle.

The lady's slipper entertains
Less selfish thoughts and kinder,
And acts as if she'd like to leave
Her former life behind her;
I b'lieve she hopes some poet pale
Will come along and find her.

The green at last begins its march Toward Equinox's summit;
A bird note drops direct from Heaven
Belike a choral plummet:
If anybody knows a song
He now begins to hum it.

The last year's mullein stalks stand stiff
In death's unlovely rigor,
But 'round their lifeless roots the grass
Starts up with greening vigor:
The willow fence begins to grow,
The oxen's eyes are bigger.

I wish I lived where Horace did,
Or owned that home of Tully's,
That I might see the sun advance
Through Anio's gulfs and gullies;
But I don't know—we like our place
Right here by Uncle Cully's.
—[Daniel L. Cady, in Burlington Free Press.

THE COMING OF HOPE.

A patch of moonlight glimmered in the cell,
With stripes of shadow where the grating came,
As if all things must share the taint of hell,
If they but enter in that place of shame,
And even moonlight bear the brand of blame.
The man who crouched behind that stony wall
Lifted his head. A voice pronounced his name.
The eyes which joyed to watch a lizard crawl.
Lifted, and saw a woman, lily white and tall.

As soft as starlet ripples flowed her hair;
As bright as starlet marble glowed her face;
She seemed a thing of starlight standing there,
A shining vision in a sunless place.
And he who was condemned, who knew disgrace,
Who looked on good as something dim and far,
Who, from his baseness, deemed the whole world base,
Believed he dreamed until he touched the scar
That seamed his roughened hand and felt an iron bar.
—[Lydia Walker, in Boston Transcript.

GAMER OR TAMER?

Time was when, had somebody raised
The price of foods on which we'd grazed
For years, until we thought them staples,
As far as Chilkat Pass or Naples,
Our cries of pain would have been heard.
Yet now we do not say a word,
But cinch our belts a little tighter
Around the lunch that aye grows lighter,
And pungle up the hard-earned scads,
The well-known dollars of our dads!

. . . .

It may be we are growing gamer,
Or, like as not, we're merely tamer.
—[Strickland Gillilan, in Judge.

A NEW SLIPPER FOR PRETTY FEET ONLY.

Before very long when a lady goes into a shoe store to buy a pair of slippers the clerk will ask her, "Do you want Gladys Brockwell slippers or the old kind?"

The Fox star has great individuality, and one of the ways in which it appears is in the manner of covering her dainty feet. She does not believe in housing them up in shoes that conceal them. She is perfectly willing that the world should know that her feet are pretty and shapely and the only reason she wears anything like a shoe at all is just to keep them from the cold and bumpy pavement; hence, "the Gladys Brockwell slipper." It consists of merely a platform following the outline of the bottom of her foot and the smallest place possible for her toe to slip in. The heel is rather high, but practically all of the foot is visible as she walks, and there is perfect freedom of movement.

The trouble with the Gladys Brockwell slipper is that it is designed only for pretty feet.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 300 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to this work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. SEE THE SAND GAZER.

DR. MUNDO-DARE, ORDAINED.

DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS.

SPECIAL READING, THIS WEEK, 50c.

The only member of INDIA'S MYSTIC BROTHERHOOD to ever visit this country. First in America to introduce this MYSTERIOUS ART employed by PROPHETS OF OLDEN TIMES. His remarkable disclosures are pronounced "PHENOMENAL" by thinking people who have consulted him. Any Clairvoyant can tell your name, the past and present. If wives, husbands, sweethearts or friends are true or false, and many other things of more trivial importance. All these things the SAND GAZER tells at a glance. What you want is to be successful and make the most of a life that is passing ALL TOO FAST. To get what your Creator promises, you must know your strongest points. Your future possibilities, physical condition, how to gain the one you desire, how to be magnetic, etc., etc. To acquire these things, you MUST SEE THE SAND GAZER SOONER OR LATER. So COME TODAY.

IN HIS DEPARTMENT HE STANDS SUPREME.

You need not speak for him to call your name in full, names of those you wish to know or what you came for, how to make business pay, whom you will marry and when, every possible advice regarding love, travel, changes, speculation, divorces, lawsuits, sickness, etc. All of life's active principles are minutely analyzed by THIS WIZARD OF THE SHIFTING SANDS. The Only Psychic who really demonstrates the mysterious power to help you. Come. Test him and be convinced. Hours, 12 to 8 daily and Sundays. Maid in attendance, 1920 S. FIGUEROA ST. Phone 23141. PROF. J. A. MURDOCK,
THE INCOMPARABLE
PSYCHIC.

THE BEST KNOWN AND WIDELY CONSULTED PSYCHOLOGIST IN CALIFORNIA.

References—The press, banks, business men and social leaders of Los Angeles and Southern California.

EFFICIENCY FIRST, THEREIN LIES SAFETY FIRST.

How many times you use the word Efficient; how many times you hear it without a thought of its meaning, or effort on your part to become Efficient.

ARE YOU EFFICIENT?

Efficient in your business, in your home, in your social affairs. Or do you drag along from day to day, a machine or toy in others' hands. ARE YOU DISCOURAGED, or in trouble? Do you wish to obtain Health and Happiness? Have you ever wondered why you were not successful in business, love and family affairs? Many people capable and talented, ernest and industrious, are sick and discouraged, are failing nevertheless to utilize Nature's Gifts, Failing to get the most out of life. Many are in wrong vocations, wrong locations and wrongly placed in life. Many are sick, ailing and in doubt playthings of chance and the prey of circumstances instead of Masters of Destiny. The matter of making the most of one's self is a most vital question. PROF. MURDOCK will help you get the greatest efficiency out of yourself.

CONSULT THE MASTER MIND.

HIS EXTENSIVE PATRONAGE AND GREAT SUCCESS IS THE ENVY OF ALL COMPETITORS. HE IS NEVER IDLE. HIS MOTTO IS "WORK AND WIN."

MURDOCK is not a psychic from choice, but because fate has so decreed it. His ancestors were powerful psychics, and have for ages handed down their wonderful gift from generation to generation, so he has received the rich inheritance, together with combined knowledge and priceless experience of generations. No matter what your personal trouble may be, or what your past experience has been, you will save time and avoid disappointment by at once consulting MURDOCK.

His practice and professional reputation are built upon honor and reasonable charges, fair dealings. Faithful service and speedy success for his clients have won for him the largest practice in the State of California. His superior knowledge and power give him the advantage which warrant him in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere.

To do a thing and do it right is the aim of all. To entrust an important commission to some one and have it result in a failure is what we all strive to avoid. Many a failure could have been avoided and valuable time saved had PROF. MURDOCK been consulted. He has no equal in bringing about your every desire, and the more complicated it may seem to you the easier it may prove to be.

Your present, your entire future lies within yourself, and can be revealed by consulting the world-eminent

I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to this work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. The BELMONT Apts., Figueroa at 10th st. The BELCAMP Apts., 2407 W. 9th st.

"Not how little, but how much we can give our guests," is our motto. We cater to their individual needs; try to think of ways and methods for making them contented and happy; endeavor to anticipate their desires as far as we may. In fact, we do all in our power in the effort to make each of our houses, in every sense of the word,

"the place like home."

Our entertainment programme is unequaled. There is something doing all of the time, our programme being replete with pleasing, unique and novel features, which include swimming parties, picnics, visits to moving pictures, parlor vaudeville, and automobile excursions, as well as ordinary entertainments, such as card parties and dances—and our entertaining continues during the summer as well as through the winter months. In our big, fine lobby we have billiard and pool tables, piano, phonograph and an excellent library. Besides current periodicals, we have a library of over 300 volumes of popular fiction, which is being constantly renewed and increased. And we have another important factor in both our houses—an atmosphere of cordiality, congeniality and friendliness. We have the recipe for the manufacture of this atmosphere, and we use it with very satisfactory results. Many permanent friendships have been and are constantly being made here.

On Friday evening our folks were guests of the management at the Kinema Theater, where we saw the thrilling war picture, "The Unbeliever."

We are now trying to locate a site for a camp-house on the ocean beach, close to the Pacific Electric, on which we intend to erect suitable quarters for the use of our guests for week-ends and little outings.

All guests at the BELMONT, BELCAMP and BELNORD are eligible to all entertainments.

We have a couple of double apartments ready for occupancy at the BELMONT, at $60 and $65; singles $35 and up.

At the BELCAMP we have one double for $40—a bargain; singles at $30 and up.

Studebaker will offer the most wonderful bargains in used cars Los Angeles has ever seen. Our series 19 cars are now being shipped to us in quantities, and we must have room.

REMEMBER:

First—These cars are sold absolutely without profit.

Second—They are inspected, some overhauled, even rebuilt when necessary. Some are repainted, and the new popular tops with plate glass installed. It would take an expert to tell some of those from new cars.

Third—we give liberal credit terms to reliable parties.

We are naturally interested in creating more CHEVROLET users—more CHEVROLET buyers and therefore our service facilities and our assurance of SATISFACTION to the buyer stand back of every CHEVROLET sold.

FOR SALE—CHANDLER SIX.

You do not dare to purchase a Chandler until you have investigated the REBUILT—REFINISHED—FULLY GUARANTEED—ones that we are offering at a range of prices from $450 to $1550 on TERMS. You cannot respect yourself as a wise purchaser unless you at least learn about those values and what CHANDLER SERVICE and CHANDLER GUARANTEES will mean to you for the next YEAR to come. Our business is the sale of new Chandlers, this has been our business since the CHANDLER was first placed on the market. We KNOW practically every CHANDLER owner in this city and we know quite a bit about the way he has used his car. We will not accept his car in exchange on a new one if he has abused it. We do not have to. We cannot get all the new CHANDLERS now that we can sell, so you may rest assured that we are particular about the used cars we take in trade. If you don't believe this, try us out with some car that is not up to standard and see how quickly we will refuse it. We are NOT independent but we are careful of our reputation and we do not want to be forced to offer a poor used car for sale. Used Car Dept. for the CHANDLER SIX, 1136 S. Olive or 1034 S. Main. Phones 60695 or Main 3459. OPEN Sundays 11 to 4 p.m.

Subsea Warfare.

ALLIED WARSHIPS TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF U-BOATS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

LONDON, May 18.—Attacks on German submarines increased tremendously during the past month.

"We are at liberty," says the Telegraph, "to mention at least one fact. During the first fifteen days of this month 126 separate attacks were made upon U-boats, and a large percentage of these attacks were successful. Quite a number of U-boats were definitely accounted for and terrorized.

"The view U-boat crews take of the new and vigorous British anti-submarine offensive may be gathered from the fact that a couple of Germans rescued from a destroyed submarine said that eight heavy-depth charges were dropped about them. Our sinkings of U-boats are now improving every month."

DRAFT EVADER FOILED.

Seeks to Escape Army by Arrest but Bond Holds Him.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, May 18.—Benjamin L. Salmon, pacifist, convicted in Federal Court of violation of the Federal law for failure to fill out and return his questionnaire, made an unsuccessful attempt late today to surrender to the United States Marshal and cancel the bond of $2500 under which he is at liberty pending appeal.

Salmon is under orders from his draft board to report at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon to be inducted into the army. If he had been permitted to surrender to the Marshal, Federal officials explained, he would have been locked in the County Jail and would have been unable to respond to the draft call.

United States District Attorney Harry B. Tedrow, who was consulted, ruled that the Marshal had no authority to release Salmon's bondsmen and take him into custody without an order from the court and Salmon was informed that he was at liberty to go but must report to his draft board as ordered on Monday.

STUDENTS MEET TODAY.

War Work of the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Will be Told at First Congregational Church.

The latest reports from the Students' Friendship Fund, of money contributed by the students of North America to the war work of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, have just been received in Los Angeles. The figures show that the State Normal School has paid all its pledges, while Occidental College and the University of Southern California stand near the top of the list.

To crystallize the interest aroused by this campaign, the Metropolitan Student Committee of the Young Women's Christian Association will hold a mass meeting of all the students of this vicinity today as the First Congregational Church, on Hope street at 3 p.m. The meeting will be open to students of the various local schools. The programme will consist of a report of the war work of the Young Men's Christian Association given by Harry Hill, student secretary, and of the war work of the Young Women's Christian Association by Miss Helen Fulton, secretary for that organization. The main address will be given by Dr. Daniel Fox of Pasadena on "Trained Leadership of Tomorrow." The glee clubs from the various schools will furnish special music.

PROHIBITION SERIOUS MATTER WITH MINERS.

COURT APPEALED TO IN MOTION "PASSED UNANIMOUSLY" TO RESTORE BEER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) May 18.—Vincenzio Boaze, president, and Leo Poll, secretary, of Local Number 6044, Blanford, Ind., United Mine Workers of America, reported today that the local had passed a resolution to send to the Indiana Supreme Court a memorial containing the following appeal:

"That the respective locals request that we be not deposed of our rights to keep beer in our homes for family use. Since the State went 'dry' our people have been falling sick and the condition of the water is bad. Beer has been used instead of water so we ask due consideration. We do not care for saloons or whisky, but we believe that beer is a necessity, as has been heretofore proven. We earnestly appeal to the courts to restor us our beer. Motion carried unanimously."

CANNING PEACH MEN ASK RECORD PRICES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VISALIA, May 18.—A record price for canning peaches was set for Tulare county and probably for California today, when members of the Canning Peach Growers' Association turned over to its selling committee the entire crop with the price recommended as $45 per ton for freestones and $75 for clingstones.

Last year's association price was $27.50 and $50 respectively. The association will handle, it is estimated, between 8000 and 10,000 tons, the crop being reported 70 per cent. normal on the 1500 acres bearing.

TIGERS BOWL OVER THE BEES.

Chech Pulls Himself Out of Some Tight Holes.

Vernon Starts in Early to Capture Game.

McCredie Scores Only Runs in the Seventh.

BY EDWIN F. O'MALLEY.

Vernon finally went and did it, with the assistance of Charley Chech, toppling over McCredie to the melody of 4 to 2. The day was just a shade too warm for Charley to heave 'em over at his best, but he managed to pull through without resorting to his famous scuff ball. Charley was in trouble in the fifth, seventh and eighth frames, but apart from the seventh he got that old noodle of his to working and yanked himself out of tight holes. Hosp, in going after Penner's hit to right in the seventh, failed to handle the ball, but touched it enough to deflect it out of Alcock's reach. The ball went almost to the right-field fence, allowing Sheely and Sands to score. Otherwise Chech had a good chance to shut out the visitors.

McCredie scored his only runs in the seventh. Orr went out, Mitchell to Mathes. Sheely singled to left and Sands to center. Konnick flied to Alcock. Penner then hit toward right. It looked as if Hosp would nail him at first, but the ball was deflected when Hosp partly handled it and sped far into right field, allowing Sheely and Sands to score. Farmer popped to Mathes. Two runs and three hits.

THE START.

The Tigers started in like a homestead ablaze. The game was really put in cold storage in the very first canto. Daley and Mitchell walked. Chadbourne sacrificed, Penner to Sheely. Alcock singled to right, putting Daley and Mitchell over the plate and going to second on the throw-in. Mathes walked. Wisterzil singled to right, scoring Alcock, and Mathes also scored when Chapelle threw slowly to the infield. Wisterzil went to second on the throw. Hosp flied to Ryan. De Vormer was safe at first on Orr's error and stole second. Chech fanned. Four runs, two hits and two errors.

After the first inning Penner settled down and heaved a swell article of ball, keeping the Bengals down to two hits. It was a lucky thing for Bill Essick that he grew hoggish in the opening canto, or else Penner might have chalked up another game to his credit. Herbie is peculiarly susceptible to the Bees' new rooting slogan, "The camels are working." This was plainly evidenced in the seventh frame, when his sharp hit to right went for a triple, by courtesy of Franz Hosp.

WORKING FOR FAIR.

As he turned second those very camels began working for fair, and he just had enough lung juice left to blindstagger his way into the third canvas. As he sank to the bag, visions of the Sahara with dromedaries undulating everywhere flitted across his blinking eyes. It really seemed as if Herb could have circled the bases again before Alcock returned the pill. McCredie in desperation cried "Come on, Herb," but how can a man come on with a package of ships of the desert holding him to mother earth as if chained there?

Those pesky camels were still doing their fell work when Penner went to the crag in the last of the seventh. One of them bit him on the arm as he wound up to pitch the first ball, and away flew the pill almost up into the reporters' box. Bite No. 2 sent the sphere kerplunck against the wire screening, and the third snap shot the ball almost into the grand stand. By this time, however, the camels had squatted to be relieved of their loads and Herbie found his bearings. After this, McCredie declares he will have roller skates placed under these camels so as to neutralize their pernicious influence. These desert babies can lope like thunder, but when it comes to scampering they are simply in the Dad Meek class.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—For the third time in four days, Chicago and Washington played extra innings, the visitors getting an even break in the four games by winning in the thirteenth, 5 to 3. FITTERY HIT HARD BY THE SENATORS.

FOUR ERRORS ACCOUNT FOR FOUR OF SOLON'S TALLIES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, May 18.—Sacramento won a featureless game from Los Angeles this afternoon by a score of 9 to 4. Fittery for the visitors was hit hard and in addition he was supported poorly. Four errors, two of them coming in one inning, accounted for four of Sacramento's runs. Fournier started the booting when he made a miserable effort to get Wolter off first. Pepe, Caldwell and Cooper fell in line and helped the locals to win. Gardner pitched for Sacramento and allowed thirteen hits. He scattered the attack, however, and the best the Southerners could do was to get four runs. Fournier, Killefer, Boles and Crandall of the visitors each got three hits. Fournier made two triples and one double. It was Sacramento's fourth straight win over the Angels. The score:

FACT AND COMMENT.

A number of complaints have come to the Fact and Comment man about the poor car service maintained by the Pacific Electric Railway on its Santa Monica-boulevard line. Such complaints, of course, should be taken up with the Board of Public Utilities, but, because the complainants seem to have such good grounds for their assertions, a few comments here would appear justified.

A man living in the vicinity of Santa Monica boulevard and Western avenue wrote last week that he considered it an imposition that citizens and taxpayers in the heart of the northwest residence section should be compelled to live like [illegible]." Hundreds of persons in this comparatively close-in and built-up district, he averred, wait all the way from a quarter of an hour daily, morning and evening, standing on street corners waiting for their particular red cars to come along. He declared that he had bought a lot and built a home in this part of the city because it was high and sightly and in every way attractive, but that he was ready to sell out and move to some other section that had "decent car service."

It seems rather strange that the railway company should have been so neglectful of this part of the city. [illegible] of Los Angeles has made great strides in building and general development in the past two or three years than this South Hollywood and Colegrove district. For years there were many gaps in the form of great open spaces between Hollywood proper and the old Colegrove settlement and between Colegrove and the Wilshire section, but these have now largely been filled with new houses and flats. The development is continuous in most places from Wilshire to Hollywood and Santa Monica boulevard has come to be an important thoroughfare for the best built-up part of the whole area between these two once quite distinct districts.

But all that seems to be left to the people of the section that were once so isolated is the poor car service, which is still just what one would expect to find in a new, new district.

On the face of it, at least, it would appear to be poor business for the railway to fail to take cognizance of the changes that have come about in this part of Los Angeles. The district served by Santa Monica boulevard has been going ahead [illegible] simply because of its desirability as a place of residence and in spite of the inadequate transportation facilities. With good car service there is every reason to believe that it would build up still more rapidly. The railway, needless to say, would enjoy the benefit of this increase in population. The Pacific Electric has usually been quick to see the advantages of fostering the growth of different sections with more cars and better service, but has evidently failed to realize just what has been going on along Santa Monica boulevard in the last year or two. A better understanding between the South Hollywood people and the railway, it seems, would prove to be of benefit to both.

Improvements.

There are many in Los Angeles who have felt that the municipal officials and people of this city were in a much better position to judge what were essential and what non-essential public improvements here than the San Francisco subcommittee of the Capital Issues Committee, who has been rather freely offering us advice on the subject. This kind of criticism with [illegible] tirely commenda[illegible] Capital Issues [illegible] er as a prot[illegible] sonal solicitude [illegible] San Francisco [illegible] as to the doings [illegible] Angeles is as we[illegible] its own affairs [illegible] own responsibili[illegible] tion as is San [illegible] way in which Lo[illegible] the top in the r[illegible] drive furnishes [illegible] that this city is a[illegible] awake to its dut[illegible] in connection w[illegible] any other place i[illegible] many in Los Angeles felt that the municipal people of this city were better position to judge essential and what non- public improvements here San Francisco subcommit- the Capital Issues Com- has been rather freely offering us advice on that important subject. This is not said in a spirit of criticism with respect to the entirely commendable purposes of the Capital Issues Committee, but rather as a protest against a too-personal solicitude upon the part of San Francisco or San Franciscans as to the doings of Los Angeles. Los Angeles is as well able to look after its own affairs and to adjudge its own responsibilities toward the nation as is San Francisco and the way in which Los Angeles went over the top in the recent Liberty Loan drive furnishes conclusive evidence that this city is as patriotically wide awake to its duties and obligations in connection with the war as is any other place in the United States.

The Bay City subcommitteeman is doubtless acting with the best of motives in urging that Los Angeles dispense with this or that or the other set of public improvements, but he would do well to confine his advice closer home where he is more familiar with conditions. His efforts to tell this city what not to do have, in fact, given rise to a rather embarrassing situation, for the City Council, although quite determined to do its own thinking and form its own judgments, has been equally desirous of maintaining a courteous attitude toward the San Franciscan on the Financial Advisory Committee.

There is a feeling upon the part of many people in Los Angeles that San Franciscans as a whole would be rather pleased than otherwise to see improvement work of all kinds held up in this city and this feeling has not been conducive to an entirely amiable acceptance of the Bay City man's suggestions. The great cause in which America is now arrayed has, of course, largely swept away local differences and conflicting considerations throughout the country and perhaps the feeling is based on suspicions now unjustified. All this, however, is really beside the point.

Even had San Francisco always and unselfishly teamed with Los Angeles on every question affecting the best interests of both cities, there would still be no good reason why representatives of either city should constitute themselves advisers as to the internal and strictly private affairs of the other. Los Angeles has not for a moment dreamed of advising San Francisco as to the proper or expedient administration of its financial affairs during the war and Los Angeles cannot quite get over being surprised that a San Franciscan, whatever his capacity, should be offering so much gratuitous advice to our city and its officials.

BUY RICE LANDS.

A tract of 805 acres adjoining the south city limits, of Merced, in Merced county, has been purchased by T. J. Douglas and others of this city from Judson Rent of San Diego. The land is in the midst of a district that is rapidly coming to the front in rice growing.

Shaping.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR LIBERTY FAIR GROUP.

PLANS for the main building of the California Liberty Fair, to be held in this city October 12 to 26, inclusive, were accepted by the fair directors last week. The architect's perspective of the structure, showing the approved design, appears on this page. The building will cover approximately an acre of ground, being about 200 feet square, and will be one of the three structures to be erected at Exposition Park expressly for the fair.

Two of the buildings have already been provided for, one to go at each end of the present State Exposition Building, in which is now housed a complete and attractive display of the manufactured and agricultural products of California. These structures will each be 180 feet square.

The method of construction will be unique. About June 15, a special saw mill will be erected under the Exposition Park Grand Stand. Here the material for the buildings will be turned out in twenty-foot units. Not later than September 25, the erection of the buildings themselves will begin, and it is estimated that only a week or ten days will be required to complete the work. The structural units will be set up as a unit-system book case is built up. Everything, it is expected, will be in readiness for the reception and installation of exhibits at least ten days or two weeks before the opening date.

The buildings will be well ventilated by lattice work. This open-work construction will also provide ample light during the day. Electric lighting on the interior will make them as light as day until 11 o'clock p.m., up to which hour the buildings will remain open to visitors.

One of the features of the buildings will be their arrangement around courts or patios, in which will be placed magnificent displays of growing and cut flowers, palms and other greenery. In the courts, also, will be erected band stands and refreshment booths.

A beautiful model of the three fair buildings may be seen at the general headquarters of the California Liberty Fair Association, just established on the west side of Hill street, between Fifth and Sixth streets.

APARTMENTS TRADED.

Fine Westlake Holding Exchanged for Large Tract of Land—Two Hotels Leased.

Three important transactions are reported for the past week by E. W. Cason & Co., the properties involved being the Montclare apartments at No. 2007 Ocean View avenue, the Reynolds Hotel at Riverside and the Ocean Park Hotel at Santa Monica.

The Montclare was acquired by Herman D. Eberle, at a given valuation of approximately $100,000, from John G. Staub, representing the principal owners. Mr. Eberle was represented in the transaction by E. W. Cason. In addition to paying a cash consideration, Mr. Eberle traded 620 acres of land south of Bakersfield, which Mr. Staub and his associates expect to put into improvements soon. The apartment-house was erected about five years ago and is a modern, 103-room, four-story, brick building. It occupies one of the sightly locations of the Westlake district, and is leased at present to C. C. Colyear. The new owner recently purchased the Formosa apartments in Hollywood through the same agency.

The Reynolds Hotel has been taken over by C. B. Hamilton of Denver, Colo. The house was completed about four years ago and contains 150 rooms. It is the first of a group of hotels which will be operated in Southern California by Mr. Hamilton and associates.

The Ocean Park Hotel was leased by Harry Gonden, who is also proprietor of the Fuller-Golden apartments in Los Angeles. He purchased the furniture from Charles J. Lick, who operated the house for four years. The lease runs over a period of six years.

GRAMERCY HOME SOLD.

WEST ADAMS SALE.

Fine Place Bought by Local Man. Two Windsor Square Corners Are Sold.

R. A. Rowan & Co. and the A. B. Hastings Company report having sold a large residence at No. 636 West Adams street for Ida B. Lindley to Albert Hastings. The house occupies a site having a frontage of 100 feet and extending back to Twenty-seventh street, a depth of 360 feet. The following additional sales are also reported by R. A. Rowan & Co.:

To L. W. Denison of Mason City, Iowa, large lot at the northeast corner of Fourth street and Plymouth avenue, Windsor Square; and to Dr. S. Berman Friend of Chicago, corner in same subdivision. Both purchasers, it is understood, contemplate building fine homes.

PATRIOTIC KEYNOTE.

William M. Garland of Los Angeles, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, has been in Washington, D. C., for nearly two months, getting in touch with various governmental departments, in connection with the offer of the national association of service of its members in appraising, gratis, any property offered the government during the war and to act in an advisory capacity regarding the adaptability of such property. Mr. Garland, recently, in discussing the coming convention of the association at St. Louis, expressed the belief that it would be different from any other yet held by the organized realty men. The whole "atmosphere," he predicted, will teem with the spirit of loyalty and patriotism, which every feature on the programme will emphasize.

INTO LATIN COUNTRIES.

Representation of a Los Angeles industry in South and Central American countries is to be furthered through the efforts of the Pacific Portable Construction Company, manufacturers of ready-cut houses. The local house-building firm has decided to print its large house catalogue in the Spanish language and to distribute several thousand copies in Latin-American countries.

TO LARGER OFFICES.

The real estate offices of Edwin G. Hart and his associates have been removed from 518 Van Nuys Building to 729 of the same structure. The new quarters are more commodious than the old.

THINKS IT'S UNJUST.

Finkle Protests Action of Local Vigilance Committee in Letter to Congress.

Asking that Congress pass a law forcing citizens to buy Liberty Bonds in proportion to their net incomes, F. C. Finkle, recently reported by the Vigilance Committee as a loan slacker, yesterday forwarded a message to Congressman Osborne in Washington.

In his letter, Mr. Finkle explains that he could not buy Liberty Bonds to a large sum on account of the loss he has sustained through the adoption of the Gandier anti-saloon law, and declares the action of the "so-called" Vigilance Committee an injustice. He continues with the suggestion if Congress should pass such a measure as he suggests, controversies such as he had with the local committee would automatically be ended.

I own about 60 half-acre plots in one of the best developed suburban sections close to Los Angeles. These little half-acre farms sold for as high as $650 before the war. I am going to sell these for practically what they cost me, on terms of $10 per month. I will pay no commissions nor give any free rides or lunches. I will supply those who are interested with a plat and tell them how to get to the property. All these half-acres are priced the same; some are better than others. It is the kind of property you can live on and work in the city. My reason for making this a blind ad is that I don't want to be bothered with a lot of agents. If you are interested I will mail you a plat, price list and complete description. Nobody will call upon you or bother you in any way. You will have to go and see the property yourself. "Orange Groves That Pay."

The best are the cheapest. We only handle groves which will bear the closest investigation. Twenty-five years' experience growing oranges and lemons here, we know the industry from the ground up.

A FEW CHOICE BARGAINS.

51 acres, magnificent grove on Foothill blvd. 20 acres lemons, 20 acres Valencias, 11 acres navels. Ideal location near Upland. This property has never changed hands, it was planted and cared for by an expert, his widow wishes to be relieved of the care. 15 acres, one acre Valencias, balance navels, good house and barns. Every year there is a record breaker of a producer, one mile from Claremont. 150 shares of water. Price $30,500. Will take $10,000 Pasadena residence, balance cash.

Five acres lemons, mostly 9 years old, $3000 crop on trees. Close to Foothill boulevard, Claremont. The best value for the money on the market. Price only $9000 clear.

8½ acres, all navels, one of the choicest groves in Glendora district, cheap water. Bargain at the price, $13,000.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling with large and expensive machines. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "Square of its diameter."

So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 feet to 2500 feet deep. Write us for particulars and circular.

OATS PRICES GO UP ON WINNIPEG BULGE.

CORN BEARISH, DUE TO GOOD PLANTING OUTLOOK; PROVISIONS STRONG.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 18.—Conditions likely to facilitate planting had a bearish influence today on corn. The market closed unsettled, ⅛c net lower to a shade advance, with May 1.27¾ @ 1.27⅞ and July 1.40¾ @ 1.41. Oats gained ⅛ to 1⅛, and provisions 15 to 55 cents.

Downturns in the price of corn began soon after the opening, and although several rallies took place the finish was at virtually the bottom figures of the day.

Oats ascended because of a sharp bulge in values at Winnipeg. The Canadian rise was attributed to coverings by shorts.

Firmness in the hog market gave strength to provisions. Indications were that hog arrivals here next week would be a good deal less numerous than during the corresponding time last year.

Oranges and Lemons.

THE CITRUS MARKETS: WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

SHIPMENTS of miscellaneous varieties of oranges will clean up this coming week with the shipments of about a dozen cars of sweets from the San Antonio district. Sweets have been selling remarkably well having averaged as high as $5.95 in the auction markets.

The market on Valencias is strong and higher with f.o.b. quotations on a basis of $5.50 to $6, according to district. The Valencia situation is gaining in strength daily in view of the extremely light crop remaining for shipment. After this week it is estimated that there will not be over 5600 cars of oranges remaining for shipment as against 16,000 on the corresponding date last season.

Valencias are giving excellent satisfaction and under existing conditions are expected to show record prices throughout the balance of the season.

LEMONS.

The lemon market is soaring and each succeeding day shows the trade willing to pay higher prices. The raising of prices seems to have no effect on the flood orders being received by shippers and the prospects are that prices will continue to soar until they reach a prohibitive price that will cut down the demand. The buying is mostly speculative and is being augmented at this time by the shortage in the supply of foreign lemons, there being but one cargo of 50,000 boxes afloat and no fruit in ports unsold. The light supply is attributed to the heavy losses recently sustained by importers as a result of low sales, the general average being around $2.50 on fruit that cost around $4.25 laid down in New York. With lighter supplies, higher averages in foreign lemons are anticipated and will undoubtedly result in increased imports during June.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

While the exception of fluctuating prices in poultry no changes were made in market quotations yesterday. On account of the Red Cross parade the Produce Exchange held no meeting and business generally was cut down in the afternoon to the minimum at all markets.

Cheese prices showed declines last week, several staple varieties dropping from ½ cent to 5 cents, Swiss wheel, however, strengthened on account of scarcity to a point where it was eliminated from the quotation. Egg prices apparently unable to overcome the dragging effect of unusually heavy storage holdings showed a substantial loss. Holdings in storage are about 15 per cent. heavier than last year with 80,000 cases now in the coolers as compared with 68,000 cases this time last year; 4500 more cases of Petaluma eggs are in storage than last year, the balance being nearly all local production, augmented by light shipments from the East. Students of the situation state there is no cause for alarm and add that a considerable portion of the amount in storage are from private warehouses of firms who put them in public refrigerating plants needing their own space for other things.

Stocks of local potatoes are cleaning up and Northern and Idahos showed gains for the week. New potatoes are coming in rapidly and the price will continue to move down until the seasonal level is reached. Receipts of new onions weakened onion prices, the new crop being reported as being of excellent quality.

The dry bean situation should be materially benefited by the lifting of the government's embargo allowing the bean trade to be resumed in a perfectly normal manner with permission to ship out of the State. Beans have been weak of late, but inasmuch as the government took all but about 15 per cent. of the white varieties, the market should be stronger in view of conditions just mentioned.

The first arrivals of cantaloupes from the Imperial Valley came in last week and also the first cars of barley were received from the same source.

Storage holdings in butter are far heavier than last year in the neighborhood of 300,000 pounds being in the coolers, but considering the size of local consumption this is not a large amount. Butter prices have been very firm for the past week.

MARINES, SPECIALTIES LEAD IN WALL STREET.

Week on the Whole Very Busy, Mostly at Mounting Levels.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 18.—Shares of the steamship companies and a few specialties monopolized the bulk of today's stock dealings for the bull account. Industrials and equipments indicated further liquidation on unexpected trade developments, while rails of the better class were almost ignored.

Prospects of the early sale of the Mercantile Marine's British tonnage on advantageous terms brought further extensive gains to those issues, the preferred rising 4½, the common 2 and the 6 per cent. bonds 4½.

Other shippings denoted moderate strength, the remaining features on the constructive side including Royal Dutch Oil, Sloss Sheffield Steel, American Linseed and secondary rails such as New Haven, St. Paul, Baltimore and Ohio preferred and Western Pacific.

Extreme declines in United States Steel and rail issues ran from one to two points, the setback being ascribed to the controversy now pending between producers and the government respecting control of output. Short covering effaced most of these losses at the end. Sales amounted to 500,000 shares.

The bank statement in no way reflected the week's financial operations, including payments for account of the new Liberty Bonds. A decrease of about $55,000,000 cash of members at the Federal reserve bank accompanied a contraction of $56,600,000 in actual reserves, wiping out the greater part of last week's gain.

Bonds were irregular; Liberty issues displaying variable tendencies. Sales, par value, aggregated $3,100,000.

United States 2's and Panamas gained from ½ to 3 per cent on call during the week.

FINANCIAL REVIEW.

Five consecutive days of trading, which ranged from 1,100,000 to 1,750,000 shares, mostly at mounting levels, tells the story of another busy week on the stock exchange.

There were times when the market seemed to get out of hand, but heavy liquidations for profits, together with admonitory warnings from the financial powers, caused a wholesome check toward the end.

Many causes contributed to the week's activity and buoyancy, notably the absence of disturbing advices from abroad, cumulative evidence of a closer understanding between the government and leading business interests, the excellent crop outlook and easier money, albeit relaxation applied only to call loans.

Rails participated only to a nominal extent in the upturn, but the entire list was sentimentally affected by prospects of a substantial advance in rates. Metals held back, pending the fixing of the new price schedule by the war board.

At their best prices many steel and allied shares were at maximums for the year, while in several noteworthy instances the higher records were unmatched for two years. Specialties of the war group registered almost equal gains, with extensive dealings in oils, motors, tobaccos and leathers.

Shippings were in a class by themselves, all the marines making substantial advances in connection with the proposed sale of the company's ships of British registry, presumably on a satisfactory basis.

OIL STOCKS LEAD LAST WEEK'S TRADING.

SHORTING OF LIBERTY BONDS ON LOCAL EXCHANGE TO BE PROHIBITED.

Anticipating action by the board of governors of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, who meet tomorrow, President F. H. Pettingell announced yesterday that no trading would be allowed in Liberty Bonds except legitimate transactions for cash with immediate delivery of the bond. In other words no sales with deferred delivery will be allowed, which makes it impossible for brokers to "short" Liberty Bonds. The same action is being taken on all the important exchanges of the country.

The dividend board announces a 6-cent per share dividend on Yellow Pine, to be paid on June 15, next, to stockholders of record June 1. Yellow Pine is the big mine of the Good Springs (Nevada) district and like Boss Mining in the same district is a consistent dividend payer.

For the week just past oil stocks were the most active and showed the greatest strength. Union Oil reached a new high at 109, but weakened Friday and yesterday, closing the week at 107.50, with 108 asked, 75 cents per share higher than last Saturday's close. National Pacific Oil was the most active stock in shares dealt in, around 87,000 shares being sold. One sale of 13,000 shares of National was made yesterday at 5 1-4, the stock closing 5 1-4@5 3-8. Mt. Diablo made a net gain of 7 points during the week, closing yesterday at 1.40 as compared with 1.33 the previous Saturday. Mascot Oil made a net gain of 5 points in the same period closing yesterday at 1.73 with no stock offered. One sale of Mascot was made yesterday at 1.74. Columbia Oil remains steady at 1.00, 2 points higher than Saturday a week ago. Ten shares of Western Union Oil sold yesterday at 110.00, $4 over the close of the week before. Jade oil sold at 7.

Consolidated Reality appeared in the list of sales again, 53 shares selling at 50.00, which has been the market for some time. No other sales were made yesterday in the Industrial list.

Mining stocks were dull all week, showing a loss in nearly all issues, trading in with the exception of the Good Springs mines, Boss and Yellow Pine. Boss was remarkably firm around 50 and Yellow Pine made a net gain for the week of 9 points on Friday's closing bid at 1.29, there being no bid yesterday while the stock was offered at 1.32½, the previous Saturday's close was 1.20. Hecla Mining in the Coeur d'Alene district was another notable exception, closing the previous Saturday at 4.37½ and yesterday at 4.75, a net gain of 37½ points, having reached a high of 4.87½ on Friday of last week.

TRUE OIL
Par $1.00
Fully Paid, Non-Assessable
Any part of 5000 at 7c.

The well is said to be over 1930 feet deep and the blue shale, which has been so hard, is softening. It is anticipated that they will reach oil bearing sands within a short time. The stock being offered at the company's office is 15c per share, and if they only get a 100-barrel well—with their enormous holdings consisting of 960 acres—they no doubt would be justified in raising the price of the stock to 50c or $1.00 per share. For a real speculative gamble—BUY this stock at present prices. Remember, they are only about 15 miles from the great LAKEVIEW GUSHER, which is said to have produced over 40,000 barrels of oil per day. Can you imagine the price TRUE OIL stock would sell for should they get a 1000-barrel well? Why not take a chance and become a stockholder in a live company that has excellent oil indications? You can't become rich drawing 6 per cent. on a small capital. Prompt attention given to mail orders. TRY TO BUY TRUE OIL

In any fair sized quantity and note how difficult it is to pick up. The only large blocks are held by the Company and its insiders, who state they will shortly advance their price to 15 cents in case they sell any at all. Considering that the conclusion of drilling operations are apparently near at hand, does not good business judgment recommend purchase of True Oil at 7 cents for an unusually promising speculation? A few thousand shares are still available at this price.

TROIT, May 16.—Because of the policy of reticence which is observed ties to the recent con- between representatives passenger automobile turers of the country War Industries Board ington last week, it has easy to obtain authen- mation as to just what d, but the following is of the situation aft- to sources of unques- authority.

O BLACKLIST.

finite percentage cut in passenger production agreed upon or di- and there has been no of the industry as ial. The motor truck however, comes with- specific classification passenger car indus- ced in the category the legitimate non- , for example, as business, which and important but themselves a part of the gramme.

Bernard M. Baruch, War Industries Board auto men that there the slightest intention against the pas- manufacturers as a single out their busi- cial-reduction. The plain truth of the matter was, he explained, that progress in certain lines of our war activities, like the building of ships and airplanes, had not been what the public expected and demand; the government was therefore doubling its energies to score 100 per cent. production.

WANTS STEEL.

In view of this policy the government will have to insist upon 100 per cent. of steel for its war requirements and the industries not strictly within the war classification will have to get along as best it can.

The automobile men were urged to think the situation over among themselves and to work out plans of making their factories contribute more and more to the acceleration of the government's output of war materials and supplies. This suggestion the committee representing the auto industries will endeavor to carry into effect. The trend of developments after this explanation, speaks for itself. The passenger automobile industry is not to be stopped or cut in two at one fell swoop, but it is warned that it must readjust itself in accordance with the fact that the direct war needs of the government will receive preferred consideration to the full extent of those needs so far as steel is obtainable from the steel makers.

It was brought out in the meetings that the consumption of steel by the automobile factories of the United States is by no means so large as is generally supposed, not more, in fact, than one-twentieth of the total. The importance of the industry in the financial business and economic structure of the nation is colossally out of proportion to its comparative status among the industries when the amount of steel used is the criterion.

OPPORTUNITY.

Another instance in which the auto men "showed the War Board something," was with regard to idle material. Walter E. Flanders suggested that it would be a good thing if the government would turn about 4500 motor trucks, now awaiting shipment at certain points, but for which cargo space will not be available for some time, to transportation uses in relieving the congested railroads in the sections adjacent to these ports, particularly in New England. This will be done, it is said.

Much interest is shown in local motor circles in the announcement of the Essex Motors that its new four-cylinder car will be placed on the market. The new car will be marketed by Hudson dealers and distributors, but operated by a separate organization. The company is composed of officers of the Hudson Motor Car Company.

INTERESTING.

The four-cylinder will be a lower priced car than the Hudson super-six, and has many attributes not common to four-cylinder automobiles. The engine has a counter-balanced crank shaft, the fuel is fed into the cylinders from the top to get even distribution. The frame is of unusual design and has great strength to make for easy-riding qualities. The manufacturers do not claim more performance than for other cars of this class but they claim unusually low fuel consumption and an unusual combination of features that make for comfort and dependability that are not usually found in this grade of motor car. The engine is rated at fifty horse power and the shipping weight of the car is under 2400 pounds. When organized last fall the Essex planned to occupy the old Studebaker plant No. 5, but this was discarded to employ the manufacturing facilities of the Hudson factories.

Effective June 1, the price of the Dodge touring car will be advanced $100 to $985. Other Dodge models will cost $75 more. Demand is on the increase and production has not been able to meet the demand from dealers during the past three months, it is reported. The situation applies to the commercial car as well as the passenger vehicles.

L. A. Keller of the Studebaker Corporation had been made manager of branches, with headquarters at the general office at South Bend. He was formerly branch manager in Los Angeles, also Portland and Omaha.

MORE SAFETY SIGNS COMING.

By special resolution, the City Council has arranged with the Automobile Club of Southern California for the erection of more than 600 advance railroad warning signs in the city of Los Angeles. These warning signs will be of special benefit to motorists and will go far to safeguard the motoring public and prevent the loss of life.

According to Secretary Mitchell, the club crews will have all of the signs, numbering 660, in place within thirty days, which will be a record for this kind of undertaking. Every railroad crossing in the city will be marked. The offer was made for the work by the club, and was accepted by the Council.

CLEAN WELL BEFORE PAINTING ON BRASS.

Unless care is taken to have the surface absolutely clean, considerable difficulty is encountered in attempting to paint over polished brass. To insure a satisfactory job, the brass should first be scoured with a mixture of salt and vinegar to remove all grease, after which the surface should be washed with hot soap suds and wiped dry with a clean rag. Thereafter the paint may be applied without risk of its running while wet or chipping off after it has dried.

HE TENT-O-BED

Tent-o-Bed is the most compact bed and tent combination on the today; easily erected and taken down; may be carried on the board of any automobile, allowing doors of auto to be opened carrying Tent-o-Bed.

Class B Liberty Truck Motor Makes a Big Hit Here.

Husky.

STURDINESS IS FEATURE.

First Time Ever Exhibited in the West.

Hundreds Throng to See it at Local Plant.

Is Standard Power Plant for Government.

The government class B Liberty truck motor, which has been on exhibition the last three days at the plant of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, has attracted a tremendous amount of attention and hundreds of local motor experts have called to look it over. It is the motor with which all government trucks of class B are being equipped and it has been O.K.'d by Gen. Chauncy B. Baker, officer in charge of the transportation of the army.

PREMIERE.

This is the first time that this motor has ever been seen west of Chicago and it is due to Mr. Watt Moreland's efforts that the public exhibition is possible. Mr. Moreland with Mr. F. Church of the Packard Motor Company, Mr. Younger of the Pierce-Arrow Company and Mr. H. Riker of the Locomobile Company, was called to Washington in consultation during the designing of the first of these standardized Liberty motor trucks.

"The great value of a standard military truck lies in the matter of repairs and maintenance. The problem of repair has been so severe that in actual engagements the number of effective trucks has fallen as low as 25 per cent., while it is seldom possible to keep more than 60 per cent. going at one time," says Mr. Moreland.

STANDARD.

"The standard military truck of the American forces has been developed for the purpose of meeting all the requirements of military service. The army had the assistance of the Society of Automotive Engineers—the combined experience of authorities of truck engineering in the country. The experts called upon for this undertaking were divided into eight groups, charged, respectively, with the development of engine, transmission and clutch, axles, chassis, electrical system, springs, radiator and cooling system, and miscellaneous parts. A chairman was designated and the specifications issued by the Quartermaster Corps.

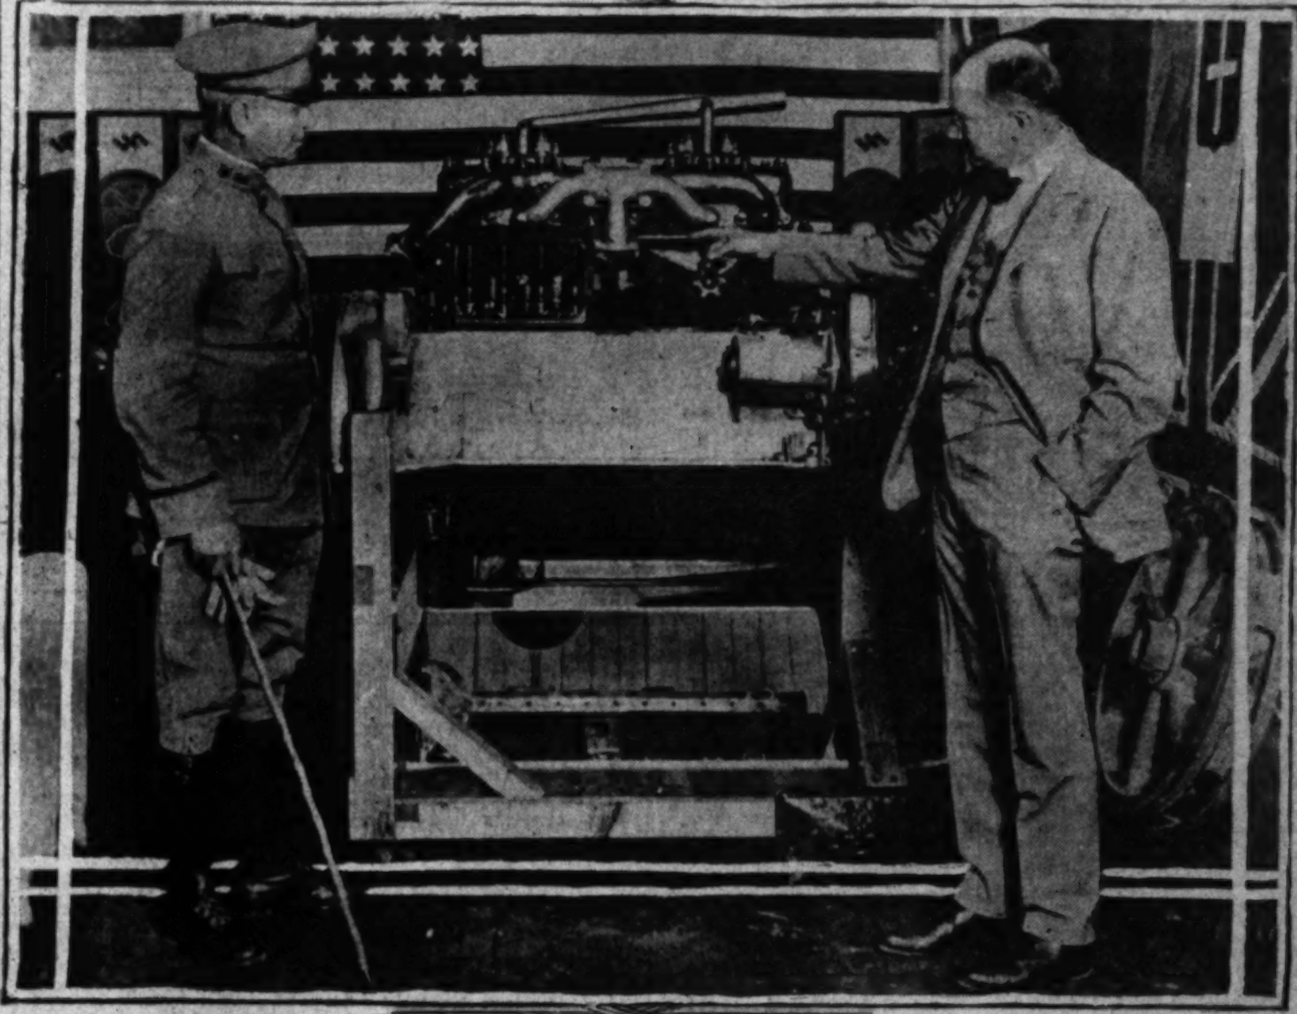
"Each group laid out its unit to accomplish the best results possible from the specifications. So completely unselfish were the contributions of the members that there were incorporated valuable features, which had been intended, by the several companies represented, for use as the basis for future sales. The idea on which the groups worked was to produce the most reliable truck possible, and preference was accordingly given to all points in which greatest reliability was certain. Thus, while the truck was designed to give the best economy possible, it was deemed of great importance that the engine be one that would run with certainty on the worst fuel possible.

THE START.

"After spending a month in discussion of design and the elements which enter into the making of a truck, the different groups started to lay out the class B design on September 1. This truck, while rated at three and one-half tons, was to be built to take a load of five tons. Starting on the above date, the drawings of all parts were to be completed by the tenth, all parts were to be completed by October 1, and by October 10 the two sample trucks were run on their own power.

The following recognized motor truck authorities and automotive experts played an active part in the designing and construction of the Liberty motor: H. L. Horning, chairman and general manager of the Waukesha Motors Company; Charles Balough, Hercules Motor Company; R. J. Broege, Buda Motors Company; W. A. Frederick, Continental Motors Company; C. C. Hinkley, Hinkley Motors Company; A. F. Milbrath and R. A. Weinhardt, of the Wisconsin Motors Company.

The public has been welcomed by Mr. Moreland to inspect what has been pronounced one of the finest mechanical achievements of the war—at the Moreland factory, No. 1701-1731 North Main street. The motor will be on exhibition tomorrow and Tuesday.



Looking over the class B Liberty truck motor.

The first public appearance west of Chicago of the class B Liberty truck motor took place Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week at the plant of the Moreland Truck Company. Col. H. L. Steele, Depot Quartermaster, U. S. Q. M. C., and Watt Moreland are looking over the power plant in the photo.

AUTO THIEVES GETTING RUN FOR THEIR MONEY.

Motor Snatchers are Run to Earth in a Snappy Manner.

BANG—and another annoying automobile thief bit the asphalt! In fact, for the first four months of this year Southern California has hung up the most amazing record for this type of thief-catching in history.

According to a report issued yesterday by the Theft Bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, there have been 121 motor car snatchers arrested in and near Los Angeles alone—by the theft bureau, the police and the Sheriff's office.

It has been a busy four months for all concerned—thieves, chasers and Their Honors, the judges. With the development of greater perfection in the art of stealing cars, tires, internals, gasoline and plate-glass has come an even greater development of art in the perfection of nabbing these modern Fagins of the road.

And what has become, individually, of these 121 gentry of unsavory occupation who were smart, but not smart enough to escape the artful "dicks" of the Automobile Club, the police and the Sheriff? Here is what the statistics of the club theft bureau show, in regard to the disposition of the theft problem in 1918:

Thirty-two of those arrested are now serving jail and prison terms of from thirty days to the intermediate sentence of from one to ten years. Twenty-six were granted probation, and the remainder stand as follows:

Of fifty-five arrested on charges of grand larceny, (stealing cars to sell or for other commercial purposes,) ten thieves were convicted and received sentences of from one to ten years in prison. Eleven were put on probation, nine were dismissed and twenty-five are now awaiting trial in the Superior Court.

Nine arrests were made here of persons in possession of cars stolen from other cities.

For embezzlement (selling cars not paid for) there were eight arrests. Of these, seven were dismissed at their preliminary hearing and one was held to answer in the Superior Court.

Tire stealing netted three arrests, of whom one is now serving a jail term and two were released for lack of evidence. These two very possibly would not have been released, point out the officials, if the tire owners had preserved the serial numbers on their property.

For receiving stolen automobiles, there was one arrest and one dismissal—apparently a fifty-fifty proposition.

Joy-rides in cars stolen for that purpose were productive of forty-five arrests in four months under the violation of Section 28 of the State Vehicle Act. Twenty-one of these merry thieves are now serving jail terms of from thirty days to one year each. Fifteen were placed on probation to see if they could act nice and keep their hands off other people's steering wheels. Nine were dismissed for lack of evidence and soft-hearted owners refusing to prosecute.

Here is a significant fact shown up by the Automobile Club's figures: Of the 121 arrests made this year, only sixteen of that number were juveniles. According to Club Detective John Powell, the tide has turned in this respect, as previously the majority of arrests were of juveniles. It is an older and wiser class engaged in the unhappy vocation of stealing motor cars now.

It takes from three to six months now before an automobile thief comes to trial in the Superior courts, and this is quite disastrous to their prosecution, according to Automobile Club officials, as many important witnesses cannot be located when the trial does come up on the calendar. The reason that it takes so long for these to come up, is found in the fact that the Criminal courts are so crowded.

One of the most notorious auto thieves in America this year was arrested here by the Automobile Club Theft Bureau, and he is now serving from one to ten years in the "pen."

ECONOMY RUN ANNOUNCED.

THE second annual Camp Curry-Yosemite economy run for Los Angeles automobile dealers has been planned for June 14-15, with cups offered for three classes of cars, as last year, according to an announcement early last week by Mark A. Erwin, local manager for Camp Curry.

"We received a number of inquiries from dealers or their representatives before the announcement was forthcoming from Foster Curry. I believe the test this year will be even more successful than the one held last year. The same general provisions are to obtain this year as last," said Erwin, who further stated that all detailed information and rules will be available next week.

Although the setting of the dates for the run were only casually made known last week, eleven dealers have already signified their intention of entering cars.

"The Los Angeles dealers need to get together more than they have. I shall do my best to win in my class, but if I don't I'll whoop it up for the fellows who do. This offers an excellent opportunity for us to really know each other," said H. C. McVey of the H. C. McVey Company, distributors of the National and Oakland cars.

THE VALUE OF TIME

AUTOMOBILES are chosen and bought now because they represent the most convenient, time-saving, get-there-direct method of transportation. They are used because the time they save is worth more than their cost.

Because of safety, comfort, plus-power and long life the Packard Twin Six is the accepted standard of automobile sufficiency and value. Twenty thousand Twin Six owners will tell you so.

DESERT WATER HOLES MARKED BY SIGNS.

BOY, page a monument for the pathfinders of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Out on the Arizona desert this week at a point where civilization absolutely refuses to exist, a little group of weatherbeaten men grouped about an almost strangled water hole and breathed a tremendous sigh of relief.

To the world in general it was but the end of another day, but to the hardy adventurers sipping a refreshing drink and the historic oasis, the period and season thereof was most epochal, as they had just completed the colossal task of post-marking the desert wastes through the Imperial Valley to that particular zone, the remotest point.

A trip across the Arizona desert a few weeks ago was great sport providing the pilot didn't weaken on the journey across. Insurmountable sand dunes have constantly blotted out trodden paths with bewildering frequency and experienced drivers of late have become so thoroughly befuddled that searching parties from the Sheriff's office in El Centro have been actively engaged. The cry for "beacons" of some illuminating character has been terrifyingly urgent. It was almost necessary to take out life insurance before crossing the intervening wastes between the valley and Yuma.

The water holes are few and far between. Shifting sand dunes are the curse of the desert. What might be an automobile route today develops into a glistening surface of shining sand tomorrow, with no tangible method of accuracy in the way of determining distance or direction.

Thus it was when the workers of the Automobile Club descended on the desert and began the laborious work of sign-posting a route from Imperial county to Yuma. The procedure has been long and tedious and the hours out under the hot sun but seething reminders that there was work to be done, something that had to be accomplished without delay.

Now, as the desert tourist scouts his way over the sand he is constantly confronted by the friendly blue arrow of the Automobile Club, which points the way across, and, perhaps, many are the little tingling prayers that go out to the man who first conceived the brilliant idea of so aiding the ambitions of mankind.

It is also interesting to note that the board highway, an effectual method in combating sandy stretches, is being extended a considerable distance from the old point of beginning, and that both California and Arizona are lending their efforts in straightening out and making more passable this treacherous expanse of desert highway.

Water holes are beginning to spring into existence here and there. The old stage coach that used to wind its tortuous way from Julian to Carrizo Creek and thence into Yuma has passed long ago, but in its place are countless automobiles that daily thread their snorting way over desert roads, all of which have been made doubly safe and certain, owing to the good work of the Automobile Club.

Los Angeles Much in Need of Public Camping Ground.

Suggestion.

CRYING NEED OF BIG CITY.

Los Angeles Without Free Auto Camp Grounds.

Visitors Quickly Realize Lack of Service.

Innovation is Urged on City Council.

Free camping grounds in Los Angeles for visiting motorists—why not? They have them elsewhere. This city, that boasts of the largest number of automobiles per capita of any large city in the world, is one of the few in the country that has not made some provision for touring motorists, where they can camp and stay as long as they care to. Certainly a satisfactory place could be made available, and as a means of encouraging motorists to come here, it would prove a real asset.

The issue has been raised. It even has been brought to the ears of City Councilmen, it is understood, but nothing further has been done. Meanwhile, visitors from the East, who follow the route and guide books and learn by reading them that there are no free camping grounds here, but that Pasadena and Long Beach offer such, continue to "stop over" in the neighboring cities rather than here.

When the subject was discussed among a gathering of motorists a few days ago, Franke Splane, of the sales department of Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., the Chandler six distributors, said he understood there was a free camping ground in Griffith Park. He even drove a Chandler demonstrating car to the park to ascertain the correctness of his contention, and learned he was wrong. In fact, he was all wrong, as the Griffith Park regulations bar travel therein after 8 o'clock p.m., and heavy barriers are placed across the roads. They continue fast until 6 o'clock a.m.

Tourists, who have included this city in their itinerary while crossing the continent, have remarked about the lack of a municipally-conducted and regulated camping grounds here. It now is possible to travel by motor from Chicago to Sacramento via Yellowstone National Park, and stop each night in a free camping grounds provided especially and exclusively for the use of motorists.

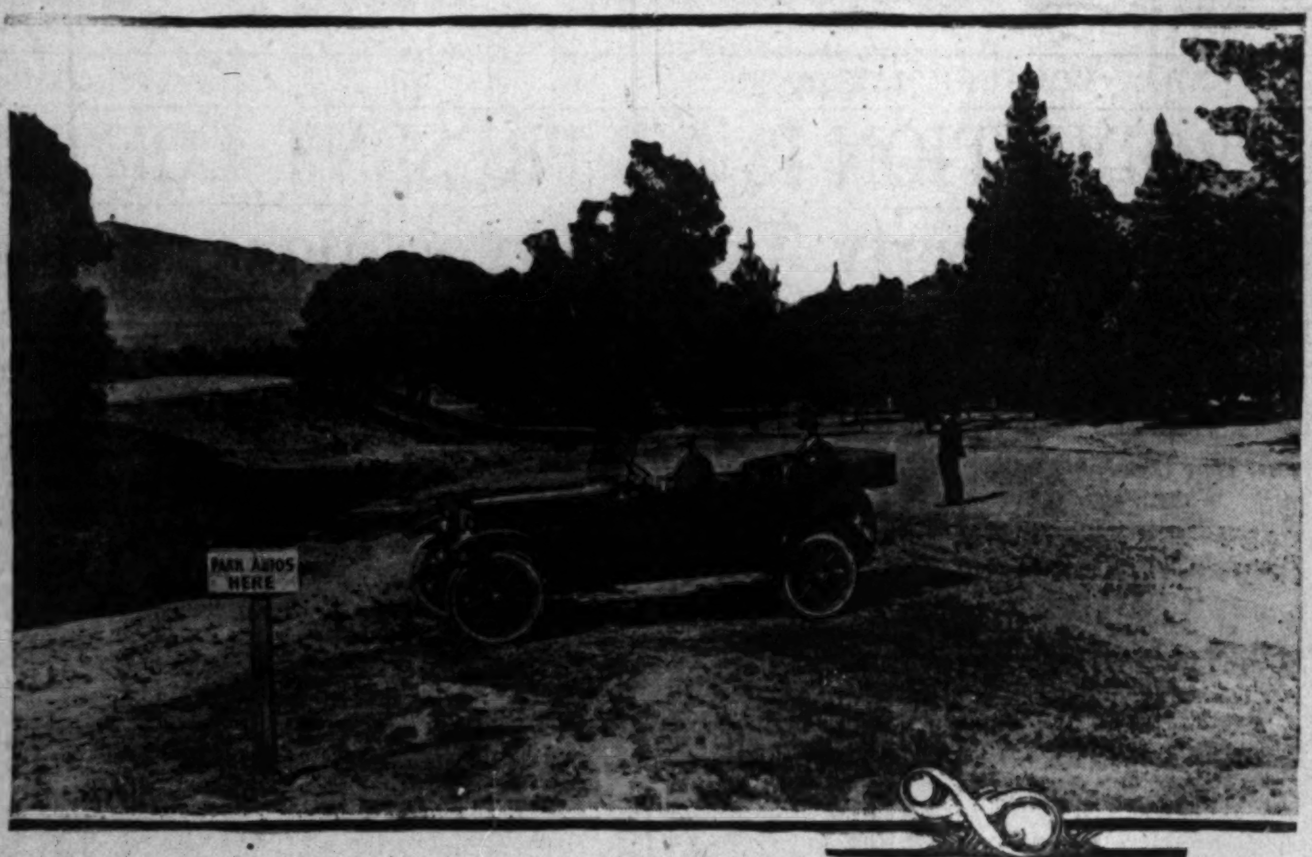
Steps have been taken to attract motorists here. Advertisements have been run in national magazines proclaiming the pleasures of driving on the wonderful boulevards of the Southland. The roads have been sign-posted all the way here from Chicago. An actual campaign has been conducted to attract visitors here over certain roads from Salt Lake City.

But, upon arrival here, the visiting motorist finds his welcome ends, so far as it is manifested in the way of accommodations provided, unless he pay for his lodgings or camp some place beyond the confines of Los Angeles. He can drive up some stream bed that is named on his map, but probably is dry in July and August, but before pitching his tent and lighting a fire permission has to be obtained from a ranger, and the ranger is not always waiting around conveniently located. If the traveler prefers bacon and eggs first and seeking the ranger later, he may be subjected to violation of the forest preserve code of ethics.

It is to be said of Griffith Park that it is admirably located for a free camping grounds. Inclosed by low mountains on one side and a magnificent fertile valley on the other, the scenic grandeur is unsurpassed, and truly typical of Southern California. There are plenty of level places or sloping hillsides that would be excellent tent locations. There are furnaces where the meals might be prepared community fashion, and water is available in many parts, either a natural spring or by pipe line. Motorists are not miscreants, and in view of the accommodations privided there need be no fear they would commit depredations. They would not tie horses to the trees, cut the grass for feed, nor chop limbs for tent poles. Nor would there be any fear of them stealing the bears or shooting the bison.

With all its thousands of acres, it is reasonable to believe that Griffith Park might spare a few to make pleasant the stay of visiting motorists. The park is municipally controlled, and the authorities probably would be amenable to public opinion.

Motorists, what say you?



Los Angeles sadly needs free camping grounds for motorists.

This photograph shows a Chandler six on one of the beautiful parking plots in Griffith Park, which are practically useless as far as tourists are concerned because the park is closed in the evenings. Los Angeles is the only city along the transcontinental highways which has no free camping grounds for motorists.

LOCAL TIRE MAKES GOOD IN A HURRY.

"THAT the motorists of the Southwest recognize in Samson tires a product that is splendidly adapted to western conditions is evidenced by the fact that our Southern California factory forces are being taxed to the utmost capacity in order to meet the ever increasing demand," said President Schleicher of the Samson Tire and Rubber Corporation yesterday. "California can supply her motorists with just as good rubber tires as are made anywhere in America. It is simply a matter of the California manufacturers' willingness to purchase the best materials that the markets afford. Everything must be done for the sake of quality. This is the secret of the almost phenomenal selling success of Samson tires. We made a super-drive for quality. It has been costly, but it placed us quickly among the top-notchers. And when letters telling about astounding mileage records began to pour in, we felt that our efforts were supremely worth while. We are so proud of these letters that we are reproducing them in our current advertisements."

Reward.

REPUTATION WINS; TRUCK SELLS SELF OVER PHONE.

THERE are times when you can profit by the other fellow's experience. Big concerns with facilities for getting at the facts often point a safe path for others to follow. Most large concerns that buy motor trucks on the basis of known, proved, low-cost hauling, steadiness in operation, durability, low fuel and oil cost, low upkeep and depreciation, prompt service, know the points that count. The initial cost is only considered in relation to the service that a motor truck gives. Concerns that know and are able to determine the truck that provides low-cost hauling are buying more and more motor trucks every year.

The average motor truck purchaser is not so much interested in how a motor truck is built. What really interests him is how much mileage is he going to get out of the truck for every dollar invested, hauling the load the greatest distance with the least expense.

These are a few of the points that lead one of the largest retail chain of stores in Los Angeles to purchase a model G two-ton International motor truck.

Bob Weaver, general sales manager for the S. F. Seager & Co., local distributors for the International motor trucks and the Grant and Jordon pleasure cars, answered a telephone call one morning and the following conversation ensued: "Hello, I saw your ad regarding the International motor truck and am interested. I want to get a good, reliable motor truck as soon as possible of two tons capacity. Quote me prices and how soon you can deliver it."

Mr. Weaver stated that they could deliver a model G, International Motor Truck, in a few days, as there were several carloads on the way from the International Harvester factory. Mr. Weaver further stated that the International Harvester Company's production was a motor truck "every seven minutes," and that they had no fears whatever at not being able to supply him.

"Hello," said Mr. Weaver, when he got the call, "who is this talking, please?"

"Mr. Sam Selig of the Sam Selig chain of retail stores," was the reply.

"All right, Mr. Selig, I'll send a man right down to get your order."

CONFIDENCE.

When Mr. Selig was seen he expressed his confidence in purchasing an International motor truck from the fact that International reputation is known all over the country. He emphatically stated that several other concerns were negotiating with him for motor truck equipment, and that he was on the verge of giving his order when he noticed an announcement of the International motor trucks. His interest lead him to call by telephone for further information, which resulted in the adoption of International motor trucks for service in this well-known large concern that believes in efficient, dependable, and serviceable equipment.

Since purchasing his initial International motor truck, Mr. Selig made the statement that he has replaced four smaller delivery cars with his model G, two-ton International motor truck. There are times when you can profit by the other fellow's experience. This is one of the times that the Sam Selig chain of stores profited by concerns that have been using and standardizing on International motor trucks. Their engineering and purchasing departments guess at nothing and take nothing for granted, they know.

AUTOS HELP RAILROADS CUT PASSENGER TRAVEL.

RAILROADS throughout the United States have been enabled to reduce their passenger service largely because of the increased use of automobiles for summer travel, for commuting, and for business trips, according to Walter M. Brown, the distributor here of the four-cylinder sixteen-valve Stutz.

"In order to relieve freight congestion," said Mr. Brown, "the railroads under government control are throwing aside all competitive barriers and are reducing superfluous passenger service. Automobile owners are proving of great assistance to the nation by co-operating with the railroads in using motor cars for travel and transportation wherever possible.

"Some years ago the automobile as a means for travel and transportation amounted to little. Today, with the present state of automobile efficiency, splendid roads and the great durability of tires, the motor car has become a vital force in the nation's life. Because of this fact and co-operation of car owners, the railroads are better able to carry on their work.

"For some time the freight car congestion has been a great handicap to the industrial and economic life of this country. But now the railroads are bending every effort for the relief of that condition."

Idle Truck.

WHAT LACK OF PROMPT SERVICE OFTEN COSTS.

BECAUSE of his long experience as owner and operator of a big fleet of heavy duty motor trucks, F. G. Mott, Republic sales manager for Harold L. Arnold, has some very distinct ideas as to the importance of prompt service for the truck owner. Mott has had ample opportunity to appreciate the feelings of the truck owner who is losing valuable time through the fault of the service department of the house he bought his truck from.

"The most striking incident of this sort that I ever knew happened last summer when a small part for a carburetor that was worth possibly 80 cents cost $144," said Mott last week.

"A fleet of heavy duty trucks was operating in Napa county last summer, hauling calcined magnesite ore from a mine in the mountains some thirty miles to the railroad. The guide for the check valve in the carburetor of one of the trucks wore out, putting it out of commission till a new one could be obtained from San Francisco.

"It was thirty miles from the mine to the nearest telephone, and it was necessary for the driver to go that distance to order the guide. After waiting a day and a half, a package came from San Francisco, but it contained a spring for the check valve instead of the guide. It was necessary to telephone again and wait another day and a half. As a result the truck was out of commission for three days, waiting for an 80-cent part.

"That particular truck was earning $42 per day. It carried ore each day to the value of $480, and the market for the ore was at a point which made the mine owners eager to get every ounce they could to the railroad. The drivers were being paid $6 per day. The mine owners lost $1440 income from their property, due to the idle truck, and the trucking contractor lost $144, a good share of which was due to the delay in getting the right part from San Francisco at once.

"Sooner or later any truck is bound to need replacements. It is up to the service department of the house that sells the truck to see that those replacements are made in the shortest possible space of time. An idle truck might frequently mean much more of a loss than happened to occur in this particular instance. At any rate, we intend to see that Republic owners receive service in such a manner as to eliminate every moment of unnecessary delay in the operation of their trucks."

Over the top with a Knight motor.

When the British Engineers designed the famous "tanks" they knew it meant annihilation for these machines if their motors failed.

Unprejudiced, seeking only the most dependable motor to meet the most desperate conditions a motor could be called upon to meet, they chose the Knight Sleeve-valve type motor because in every test it had repeatedly proven itself far superior in dependability and stamina to every other type of motor.

Long Term Durability Records Prove that Moreland Trucks Are the Most Serviceable and Economical on the Market

We will supply operative cost records submitted by Moreland owners, who have been working trucks for the past five years, which will prove that the stand-up qualities of the Moreland are non-duplicated.

The stamina of the Moreland product as demonstrated by the recent speed tests made from Los Angeles to Oakland and return, are substantiated by the reports we have received from a large number of owners.

The most noteworthy event in motor truck history took place when a Moreland 2½-ton truck, loaded over capacity, established a non-stop record from Oakland to Los Angeles, the time being 17 hours 32 minutes.

Our records are official and are not of the typewriter variety.

The Patterson Transfer Company has a fleet of three Moreland trucks, the first of which was obtained early in 1913. All last summer this truck pulled a heavy trailer, the majority of its work being confined to heavy hauling in the hay fields. Three different sizes are in the Patterson service, they being three, four and five tons, respectively. The latter is the famous "Hound Dog," which was used on a number of grueling test runs.

According to Mr. Patterson, these Moreland trucks have performed admirably. Upkeep expense has been nominal and considering the number of years they have been working, their records are exceptional.

The James Schultz Lumber Co. has operated two five-ton trucks for the past six years. These trucks are subjected to the hardest kind of hauling, and all have been completely satisfactory, declared Mr. Holm, manager of the company.

The above are reports from only a few of the hundreds of satisfied Moreland owners. We encourage you to investigate records of our trucks that have been in use for a number of years. Owners will tell you that the Moreland represents the acme of truck equipment. Let us show you this wonder truck and records we have from Moreland owners.

HUGE WORKSHOPS BUILT FOR WAR TRUCK REPAIRS.

THE day of the horse has passed and the motor truck is coming into its own more rapidly now than ever before. The horse is paying toll on the battlefields of the great war and for him there are no countless substitutes such as the truck can be furnished with. A horse with a broken leg is done for, but a truck with a broken wheel can be put back on the road in a few minutes. It takes absolute annihilation to destroy the modern motor truck and thousands of parts of damaged trucks have been collected and huge workshops installed in France so that repairs are a matter of but a short time.

It is figured that 1,490,000 horses and mules were exported from the United States during the last three years, states W. O. Gates, manager of te Smith-Form-a-Truck Sales Company, distributer of the Smith unit for converting passenger cars into trucks. The value of the horses exported between August, 1914, and the last of July, 1917, was $215,000,000 and that of mules $66,000,000. As a consequence the business man in almost any line of endeavor, who formerly used horses in his work, is now coming to rely on trucks, the lumberman, the road builder, the miner and many others have learned of the practical utility of trucks and the government, as far as possible, is gradually motorizing the army. In fact, members of a battery of field artillery now are required to learn motor mechanics as a part of their instruction.

VELVET TREAD IS NAME GIVEN TO LATEST INVADER OF LOCAL MARKET.

The Cleveland Standard Tire and Rubber Company announce an addition to their "Famous for Mileage" Cleveland Standard line. The new tire is known as the "Velvetread" and is manufactured by the builders of Cleveland Standard tires.

The Velvetread line contains all the special features of construction found in the Cleveland Standard, such as: double wrapping of the bead; pure gum friction; long staple cotton fabric and above all they are hand made.

This new line has been thoroughly tested for over a year and is fully guaranteed. A full carload of Velvetreads have just been received and the public is invited to call and see just how good and carefully these tires are made.

HOW ABOUT THAT RATTLE AND SQUEAK?

LOOSE RIMS ARE THE CAUSE NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN.

Many automobile owners are aware that something is wrong when a rattle or loud squeak is emitted by a wheel. Quite often a loose spoke is given as the cause, but in 99 per cent. of the cases it is caused by a loose rim, says L. G. Gilleien of Nelson & Price, tire dealers.

The rim in this condition moves over the felloe and the continual slapping often gives indication of lack of safety. If the rim is loose merely because the lugs are not tight, it is a simple matter to tighten them. But if it is caused by the lugs being worn or the rim slightly oversize, it will mean much work to keep the rim in place for any length of time.

Fairly good results for short periods can be obtained by driving wooden wedges between rim and wheel near the points of lug attachment, and also by shimming the lugs.

Swinging in on his semi-annual visit to Southern California, Sam S. Core, western representative of the Racine Rubber Company, was here last week making his headquarters with the Osler-Racine Rubber Company, distributors for the Racine Country Road and the Multi-Mile cord tire.

When asked about the outlook of the tire situation Mr. Core answered by telling of the confidence his factory has in the future as shown by the vast outlay of money it has recently made in large additions to the factory, adding over 100,000 square feet of space and more equipment.

The volume of business through the factory during the past year is greater than a year ago, not only in dollars and cents, but in the actual number of tires manufactured and sold, and today the Racine Rubber Company is turning out 1000 more tires a day than it was a year ago.

Toft won the light car race the same day and Ellingboe tied in the southern dirt track championship time trials with George Clark. Ellingboe's time for fifty miles was 47:31 and in the final heat of thirty miles covered the distance in 28:31.

ANGELENO RETURNS FROM TIRE CENTER.

TRIP LEAVES HIM CHEERFUL OVER OUTLOOK FOR THE TRADE.

After an extended trip throughout the East gathering first-hand information regarding the tire situation, M. M. Robertson, of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, distributors for Mason tires, returned last week and is optimistic over the outlook for business.

Besides visiting other tire factories Mr. Robertson, spent considerable time at the Mason factory and was agreeably surprised to find such tremendous activity where the output runs well into the thousands every day.

I really believe, says Mr. Robertson, that the Mason Company is the fastest growing tire company in the country today and it now ranks as the fourth largest producer of tires in the world's greatest tire center, the Akron district.

GET GOOD ADVICE BEFORE RETREADING.

BE SURE CARCASS IS STRONG ENOUGH TO WARRANT EXPENDITURE.

"Retreading or recovering tires is a saving to the motorist, providing the carcass is sufficiently strong to warrant the expenditure," says B. F. Wade of the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, distributors for the all-red Tyrian tire. "But one great trouble is that while there are many who know how to repair tires, there are comparatively few who are competent to judge whether or not a tire is worth repairing.

"However, there are ways of reconstructing the carcass from the interior which will enable the old tire to give wonderful service, even without a retread. No matter how good a tread or vulcanizing job on the outside of the tire is, if the old fabric blows out all is lost, therefore special attention should be given to the reinforcing and reconstruction of the carcass."

TIRE LOGIC FOR THE HOT SEASON.

KEEP AIR PRESSURE NORMAL WHEN TEMPERATURE IS HIGH.

That tires in hot weather should always hold their normal air pressure instead of being deflated, is the contention of R. R. Colby, manager of the Oldfield Tire Company, 1211 South Hope street. "Take a piece of wire and bend it back and forth until it breaks and then feel of the ends at the point of parting. You'll find they are hot as a result of the friction caused in the bending process," said Colby. "The same condition holds good with rubber.

"Heat caused by the bending of an under-inflated tire will destroy the friction rubber that cements the plies of fabric together and often cause a perfectly good tire to burst while running at ordinary speed on a smooth road. The less air in a tire the more the fabric bends and consequently the hotter it grows. Whatever anyone else may tell you, think this over and see if it is not logical.

TO PREVENT SCALE.

The motorist may take a hint from steam boiler engineers, by mixing a little glycerine with the cooling water to prevent the formation of scale, in which capacity it is said to be very efficacious. The glycerine should be used in proportions of half a pint to each five gallons of water.

Unusual Economy
Without Sacrifice

THE Chandler Six has always been famous for its economy of operation—economy without the sacrifice of reserve power, without the sacrifice of roadability, without the sacrifice of beauty of design.

Thousands of Chandler owners all over America tell of gasoline mileage of fifteen to seventeen miles per gallon.

Tire mileage of seven thousand to nine thousand miles per set of tires is commonplace among Chandler owners.

Chandler owners and Chandler dealers say that the service upkeep of the Chandler car is much less than that of other good cars which they have owned or sold.

In the ownership of a Chandler Six you will possess a really great automobile—great not merely from the standpoint of economy of operation and maintenance, but, even more important, from the standpoint of mechanical excellence and daily performance.

The Chandler motor, designed and built in our own factory, distinguishes the Chandler chassis, marked throughout by its simplicity and its sturdiness. The life, pick-up, get-away and endurance of this motor will astonish you quite as much as it pleases you.

Bodies of most attractive design and of unusual comfort are mounted on the Chandler chassis.

As Light Goes Through Glass

Just as light rays penetrate through glass, so current passes freely through Threaded Rubber Insulation. Nearly 200,000 tiny threads in each insulator mark the path for the current flow.

The hard rubber stands guard against the formation of short circuits between battery plates.

There's another reason why the Still Better Willard Battery with Threaded Rubber Insulation is worth so much more than its slightly higher cost. It's the one and only battery with the "Bone Dry" principle that is your absolute assurance of getting a battery as new as the day it left the factory.

GIANT TEST IN MOUNTAINS.

Newspaper Man Vouches for the Demonstration.

Car Makes Long Trip Without Replenishing Water.

San Francisco to Merced Journey is Made.

One of the most interesting, as well as one of the most spectacular demonstrations of the cooling efficiency of a modern motor car such as the Cadillac eight, was made last week at the time of the opening trip of the California State Automobile Association's officials into the Yosemite Valley.

A Cadillac "8" four-passenger phaeton, carrying a newspaper man as an observer was driven from San Francisco to Merced, from there over the Wawona road to Camp Curry, Yosemite Valley, and from there back to San Francisco without once being refilled with water and at the finish there was just as much water in the radiator as in the start.

Although there are miles and miles of hard climbing, the car did not show the least sign of heating and did not use so much as a spoonful of water for the entire trip.

No extra preparations of any kind were made, as there was no original intention of making such a demonstration. In fact, the car was driven hard over the hills and it was not until Camp Curry was reached that the occupants realized that they had made the trip without using water. For years motorists have considered this one of the hardest tests for the cooling efficiency of a motor car and when the radiator cap was taken off in the valley it was with the intention of putting in water.

RETURN TRIP.

The return trip, although not as hard as that going in, is nevertheless a test on a car and the performance of a Cadillac clearly demonstrated that it is possible to run a car thousands of miles without refilling the radiator.

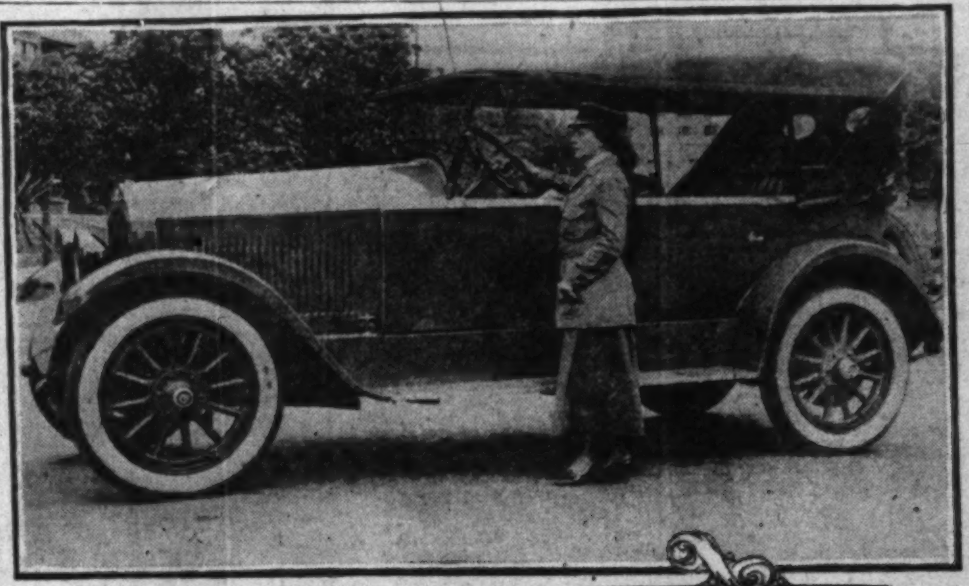
In the party that went into the valley from Merced was a Cadillac landaulet carrying San Francisco newspaper men, the four-passenger Cadillac, a Cadillac touring car driven by John R. Graham, director of the Automobile Association, and a 1916 Cadillac driven by Foster Curry. It was the same story with all of these cars, not one finding it necessary to refill with water upon their arrival in the valley or at any stage of the trip.

The trip of the Cadillacs also demonstrated that it is practical to make the run from the valley to San Francisco or from San Francisco to the valley in one day. The running time of the cars averaged ten hours and allowing for stops it can easily be made in twelve hours. For motorists coming from the south it is a very easy one-day run from Fresno to the valley. The goverment checking stations were not in operation last week, but the schedule regulations will soon go into effect as traveling is getting heavier every day.

IMPROVEMENTS.

With the possible exception of fifteen miles, the road from Merced to the valley can be said to be in good condition and is being improved every day. The Cadillacs made the run from Merced to Wawona in a few minutes over three hours without any effort to make fast time. The run from Wawona to the valley was made in a little over two hours with numerous stops for pictures and sightseeing. The first forty miles of the road from Merced to Mormon Bar is over a newly graded dirt highway. There is some work yet to be done on this, but the road can be said to be in first-class shape. The road is wide most of the way and there is plenty of room for cars to pass. Ten days ago a heavy rain made the road throughout the mountains a bit soft, but they have dried out since then and road workers are rapidly putting it in very good condition. On the Chowchilla grade there are a number of water breaks which makes touring more or less uncomfortable, but it is understood that these are to be removed within the next few days. The roads on the floor of the valley are in first-class shape, but more or less work is to be done on the hills. The road from Chinquapin to Glacier Point is not open yet on account of the deep snow near the summit. The road itself is also in bad shape, due to the winter storms, but this is to be improved and will be opened within a very short time.

The Yosemite Valley is open earlier this year than ever before and the roads are in better shape. The beauties of this great National Park can now be seen to the best advantage and preparations are being made to entertain thousands of motorists during May and June. Practically all of the horse trails are open and animal trains will be going to Glacier Point within a few days.



A real chance for the women drivers.
Here is Mrs. Ralph Starkweather and her new Cole Aero Eight. She is head of the local emergency drivers' organization, a body, the members of which volunteer their services to act as chauffeurs for army officers who may wish to go somewhere in the vicinity on important business. It is an organization nationwide and doing more than its bit to help the war.

WOMEN DRIVERS NEEDED TO HELP WIN THE WAR.

ATTENTION, women drivers of Los Angeles. Here's your chance. Opportunity to prove Mr. Murphy did not know what he was talking about when he challenged your skill at the steering wheel, is now presented.

The emergency drivers' organization needs recruits. In fact, it wants them badly. At present there are fifteen members and Mrs. Ralph E. Starkweather, of the Savoy Hotel, who is at the head of the body, says she would like to see the membership doubled. You will get to wear a military-looking uniform, cap, puttees and everything that goes with it. You will get recognition on the streets and male drivers will have to make way for you.

These women have pledged the use of their service as drivers and the loan of their cars whenever called upon to transport an army or navy officer or representative of the Federal government when he desires transportation in a hurry on official business. The organization is national in scope, having originated in New York. The women of that metropolis and Chicago are said to be crazy about it, and there is a long waiting list of applicants for the honor.

Mrs. Starkweather recently purchased one of the new Cole aero eight, four-passenger sportster models for use especially in connection with this work. It is the seventeenth car she has owned, and she says she likes it better than any other. It has the zip and answers every command with alacrity. Then, too, it is a military-appearing car.

Some women there are who will admit they do not like to knit socks or sweaters, and neither do they get much pleasure in sewing bandages or making hospital garments for the Red Cross. They do like to drive an automobile though, and to them Mrs. Starkweather directs her appeal that they join the emergency drivers as their part in helping to win the war.

NEW BOOK GIVES TIPS ON EXPENSES OF TRUCKS.

"EVERY successful business is based on records. The successful motor truck operator knows to a cent just what every item is costing him, the mileage he is obtaining from his tires, etc. In order to assist in the keeping of intelligent records, the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company has compiled and printed a book which it calls its Motor Truck Expense Record."

So spoke George G. Crackel, manager of the Akron Rubber Company, sole distributors for Goodrich solid tires. "The book contains thirteen sheets, one for each month, and a recapitulation sheet. These are ruled into columns that cover every possible item of expense. There are thirty-one lines to the page, one for every day of the month. The sheets are 16x11 in size, bound, and fold once into a neat, compact book.

"It is the same interest in the car owner that prompted it to establish its nation-wide touring service that led the Goodrich company to compile and print such a book and offer it free to truck owners. Thousands of concerns and individual owners throughout the country are using the record book, and many pronounce it the most comprehensive publication of its kind.

"A. A. Perkins, president of the Perkins Oil Well Cementing Company, operating a large fleet of trucks in the oil fields, is one of the local business men who has found the Motor Truck Expense Record of great assistance.

Every truck owner is welcome to a copy of the record — no matter what kind of tires he uses," said Mr. Crackel. "This can be obtained by calling in person at our establishment at No. 1317 South Hope street, or by writing."

WAY FOR CLEANING BRASS CASTINGS.

Brass castings may be cleaned in an instant by dipping them into a solution of three parts of sulphuric acid and three parts nitric acid, to which after they have been mixed there has been added one quart of common salt, the whole being stirred until the salt has dissolved. If this mixture is placed in an earthenware vessel the brass castings can be dipped in it, removed immediately and rinsed in clear water. The castings can be made as bright as new by this method, and little labor is involved.

ACTION OF GASOLINE UPON FIBER WASHERS.

Do not forget that fiber washers should never be used in the fuel line or in any part of the engine where the gasoline can get at it. The action of gasoline upon the fiber washer has a tendency to make the motor run sluggishly by forming a deposit of minute particles from the fiber. For this reason lead washers should always be used in the fuel line, and similar locations.

EASY TO LOCATE SUSPECTED LEAKS.

An excellent way to locate suspected leaks in the carburetor float is to immerse the part in hot water. In this way any gasoline in the interior will be vaporized and will force its way out of the hole, which may be located by watching for the bubbles to rise. The float should of course be removed from the water the instant the bubbles cease arising.

HOW ABOUT THAT SQUEAKY SPRING?

RIGHT BRAND OF LUBRICANT IS NEEDED FOR EFFICIENCY.

Ones of the most annoying things about an automobile is a squeaky spring. When a motorist complains about it to his garage man or to the dealer who sold him the car, it is evident that the motorist has not been using the right kind of lubricant. Plain oils and greases squeeze out and permit friction between the bare metal of the leaves. The proper lubricant is one that will form a tough, enduring film between the leaves, preventing metal-to-metal contact.

The Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, manufacturers of Dixon's Motor Graphite, give this advice about lubricating the springs. Jack up the car so that all the weight is off the springs and spread the leaves apart with a screw driver or instrument provided for that purpose. Then smear a creamy mixture of kerosene and motor graphite between the leaves. Springs thus treated will ride much easier and will be entirely free from squeakes. If the graphite is of pure flake variety, it will adhere to the surfaces, filling up and smoothing over the minute irregularitis, and will not squeeze out.

CLEANING BATTERY BOX IS IMPERATIVE.

Sometimes it is necessary to use temporarily or permanently a set of dry cells in a compartment, where a storage battery was formerly housed. In this case the compartment should be carefully cleaned to remove all traces of the acid left by the battery. Otherwise the dry cells will be attacked and quickly destroyed.

BOOTS SHOULD HAVE REGULAR INSPECTION.

It is very important that regular inspections should be made of the leather coverings or "boots," which protect the universals and other parts. Flying stones or sticks are apt to destroy these boots, permitting the lubricant to leak out and giving entrance to dust and dirt. Look them over once a month anyway.

Accomplishment.

YANKEE ARMY MOTORIZED TO HELP CRUSH THE HUN.

racle Wrought is One of the Greatest of War-Time Achievements.

EN peace is restored to the battling nations of the world and Teutonic frightfulness is a horrible memory, the American automobile and allied industries back upon the role played saddest and most stupendous 's dramas with much pardonable pride.

accomplishments forecast a ation of such a prediction.

the last thirteen months, a period largely devoted to belated preparations and the mobilization of men, material and resources, Uncle Sam had the united and invaluable cooperation of the builders of motor cars and the makers of automobile equipment. Not only have they worked in their accustomed ways to make the world safe for democracy, but they have given of their skill and experience that America might be supreme in the air.

In this year and a month, the American army has been motorized. Mule and horse, faithful but obsolete as agents of military transport, have been replaced by gasoline.

"The motorization of our army is one of the most marvelous wartime achievements of the past twelve months," said George M. Dickson, president of the National Motor Car and Vehicle Corporation of Indianapolis. "A comparison of conditions a year ago and now is eloquent proof of the truth of such a statement.

"It was just a year ago that William Guy Wall, our vice-president and chief engineer, resigned from the National company to accept a major's commission in the ordnance department and take charge of the motor equipment section, responsible for the design, purchase and maintenance of the armored cars and tanks that will support Gen. Pershing's infantry in their drives to German trenches. He was the first of the many automobile engineers to volunteer for military service.

"At that time there were only two army officers in the ordnance department that were specializing in motor transport. They cannot boast of the same exclusiveness today. Hundreds of men have been assigned to this same work. A building of fifty or more offices is required to house the officers in this department who are now detailed at Washington.

"Uncle Sam provided a motor equipment for his army that will astound the military world. He is about to invest $54,000,000 in 31,345 vehicles for use at the thirty-three divisional camps. These include passenger cars for officers, light and heavy trucks, special machines and motorcycles.

"The motor equipment of a division costs about $1,500,000, each division having four closed cars, three seven-passenger cars, twenty-nine five-passenger cars, ten roadsters, ten light trucks, 343 three-ton trucks and 112 motorcycles.

"In the past year 9950 trucks, 3520 passenger cars and 6126 motorcycles were purchased for the immediate needs of the quartermaster's department and to supplement the equipment already on hand, consisting of 3000 motor trucks, 450 passenger cars and 670 motorcycles that were acquired for the Mexican expedition and border patrol.

"Ten thousand heavy-duty trucks of standardized design are now in course of production. They will be used for hauling ammunition and supplies. The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Bill also calls for the purchase of 13,261 motor vehicles for the artillery and 1122 roadsters, trucks and tank wagons for the truck companies.

"For maintaining this equipment 160 garages and shelters already have been built. Three million dollars have been appropriated for heating these buildings. Repair shops costing $5,700,000 are to be constructed. Each of them will cover four acres of ground and require the services of 1200 mechanics. Orders have been placed for small machine shops mounted on truck chassis, each employing twelve skilled artisans, to render first aid to disabled vehicles, make minor replacements and salvage wrecked cars.

"At the outbreak of the war French taxicabs and motor busses saved Paris. Thousands of American motor cars and trucks also will prove equal to the Homeric task of halting the Hun."

Gee, I feel tough today.

Guess I'll take a chew at this tire.

Holy smoke, I didn't know it was a "Thermoid"!

This was rather tough on the dawg.

This photograph really explains itself, but in case it doesn't make its meaning clear we will state that the tough looking bulldog thought he would like to gnaw on something and made the sad mistake of trying his teeth on a Thermoid tire. Note the sad, "It can't be done," expression on his canine phiz in the lower photograph.

AGENT PREDICTS TIRE SHORTAGE.

DECLARES SITUATION WILL BE BETTER AS SHIPS ARE BUILT.

"There is no use in trying to camouflage the fact that there is going to be a shortage in tires. The government regulation regarding rubber means that only 25,000 tons are to be imported in the next three months. Of this amount the government needs about 9000 tons for its own use. The remainder is to be divided, I understand, among the rubber companies which manufacture many things besides tires," stated A. Koehler of the Pacific Rubber Company, distributor of Horseshoe tires in California and Arizona.

"Of course, there are some of the tire manufacturing companies that have a considerable supply of crude rubber on hand, but this will not last long enough to overcome the reduction on imports. It is not unlikely that when the shipping programme has been advanced to the point where there are more ships for commercial uses the embargo will be removed. Roy R. Meads, president of the Pacific Rubber Company, is at the factory in Racine and will not return until the latter part of this week."

SEVENTY-MILLION MARK THEIR GOAL.

BIG COMPANY WELL STOCKED WITH CRUDE RUBBER FOR TIRES.

Tire sales of the United States Rubber Company during 1917 amounted to more than $55,000,000 as compared with slightly less than $40,000,000 for the preceding year, according to a report that has been received by J. B. Magee, district manager for the company with headquarters in Los Angeles.

"Although the company estimates that more than $70,000,000 worth of tires will be sold by it this year, it is possible that these figures may be somewhat reduced as a result of the restrictions placed upon the importation of crude rubber. However, I believe, we are well stocked on crude rubber and if such is the case, the above mentioned figures may not be far from the mark set," said Magee.

Eventually, it is expected, tires worth approximately $20,000,000, will be made annually in the new plant recently acquired by the United States Rubber Company at Providence, R. I. For the first three months in 1918, the company showed a gain of 40 per cent. in sales over the corresponding period of 1917. This gain, according to officials, was well distributed over all departments.

RECIPE FOR MAKING GOOD BODY POLISH.

The car owner who would rather produce all his own "ingredients" at home may be glad to know that an excellent body polish may be made from the following: One pint of turpentine, one pint of wood alcohol, one quart of distilled water and one quart of paraffine oil. The alcohol and turpentine should be mixed, after which the water and paraffine oil should be added. The best way of mixing the latter two is to place them in a bottle and shake them briskly. The solution should be applied with the soft side of a canton flannel cloth and polished with a dry cloth.

Hustle.

PLANTS KEEP UP WITH PRODUCTION DEMANDS.

THE big "spring drive" has been launched against the factory of the Chevrolet Motor Company of California at Oakland, and the "home forces" have defended their positions.

In other words, in spite of the tremendous demand for Chevrolet automobiles occasioned by the coming of real spring all over the Pacific Coast—the territory supplied by the Oakland plant—the production department of the company has kept up with the rush, and figures submitted to Vice-President R. C. Durant show a total of 1277 machines delivered to dealers during the thirty-day period. Added to the normal popularity of the Chevrolet was the fact that transportation difficulties beset those bringing in motor cars from the East, while the Pacific Coast was entirely clear of any serious congestion.

The principal task confronting Chevrolet production chiefs was to secure sufficient man power to keep factory equipment running to capacity. This difficulty was solved by high wages, with the result that no surplus remains to decorate the Chevrolet warehouses in Oakland, Portland, Los Angeles and Spokane. Present production estimates call for a continuation of the manufacturing pressure for at least another month, for Chevrolet dealers have already filed orders for more than 1200 cars to be delivered during the month of May.

According to Vice-President Durant, the Chevrolet Motor Company of California is keeping its dealers and their patrons satisfied at the risk of injuring future business. Should the government order a curtailment of production, as has been rumored, or should the big Oakland plant meet with an accident that would force it to shut down for even a single day, there would be no surplus to fall back upon, and Chevrolet enthusiasts would be forced to wait until the factory could catch up to secure cars.

Be Patriotic.

EVERY MOTORIST SHOULD AID IN SAVING GASOLINE.

"THE matter of the conservation of our gasoline supply keeps bobbing up and despite rumors and counter-rumors, it is a subject that is receiving the serious attention of the government. Because we evidently have a plentiful supply on the Pacific Coast and particularly in Southern California, we are, I think, prone to treat the matter rather lightly," said P. H. Greer.

"We learn that the government has commanded that California save 1,000,000 gallons of crude petroleum annually. Of course, other oil producing fields must save toward a reserve supply in proportion to their outputs. As gasoline is manufactured from the crude oil the directions of the government can only mean that the nation-wide act of conservation means a reduction of the gasoline supply.

"I cannot see wherein this should perturb motorists. Instead, it should prove advantageous, for by driving cars that are economical in the use of fuel and practicing economy here and there, car owners will be in in pocket and they will at the same time, be performing a patriotic act. There are approximately 5,000,000 cars and trucks in the United States. Assuming that the owner of each saved one pint every day in the year, the total would be in the neighborhood of 400,000,000 gallons annually.

"For several weeks we have been burning distillate in our Chalmers demonstrators and the results have been better than what we had expected. Owners of Chalmers are also burning distillate and the reports which they make to us show equally as good results, if not better. Some are burning a composition of one-half distillate and one-half gasoline. With the amount saved daily in burning distillate one can buy Thrift Stamps and Liberty Bonds.

"The now noted 'hot spot' which cracks up and heats the raw gas into a cooked condition and the Ram's horn manifold, both Chalmer's devices, are responsible for Hooverizing some of the gas supply. The ram's horn manifold is used by the United States government on Class A, AA and B trucks, which fact indicates its great value. It takes the gas from the 'hot spot' and carries it to each cylinder without sharp turns. At the moment of sparking, the gas is ready for 100 per cent. returns. There is so little that comes out of the exhaust in the form of unburned gas, as to be negligible."

AUTO PRICES IF WAR LASTS.

Ford will Sell for One Thousand at Factory.

Predictions Outlined by a Keen Sales Manager.

Material for Repair Supply is Big Problem.

There have been frequent and conflicting rumors for the past three months relative to the curtailment by the government of motor car production, but so far there has been no Federal regulations of the industry, and government officials have repeatedly stated that none is needed so long as the manufacturers continue to co-operate with the government as they have been doing.

That there will be fewer cars built than last year is a foregone conclusion for the manufacturers have voluntarily cut down production to handle war contracts, which makes it harder to get materials or men for motor vehicle production.

F. H. Akers, sales manager of the Reo Motor Car Company of Lansing, Mich., has been making a survey of Pacific Coast conditions and for the past ten days has been visiting the stores and branches of Earle C. Anthony, Inc., the California distributor of the Reo lines. He expresses the opinion that cars will be higher in price and much scarcer by summer time.

"We are bound to cut down our production of passenger cars and trucks," said Akers, "for a large part of the energies of the Reo factory are being devoted to building several million dollars' worth of tractors for the government. These will be used to haul heavy artillery on the European fronts and as we feel that the primary business of the nation is winning the war we are letting all other matters take second place."

THE OUTPUT.

"As the government will, in all probability, control the entire output of steel it will become increasingly difficult to get sufficient quantities to maintain even an appreciable production of motor cars. The smaller plants, of course, will suffer most, but the industry is so large and affects so many hundreds of thousands of wage earners that anything which hurts it has widespread influence.

"The one thing that makes labor costs so high is the fact that those manufacturers who are working on war contracts only on a basis of cost plus a fixed percentage of profit, are bidding for skilled labor against the manufacturers who have their regular lines to maintain. As the profit is based on costs the war contractor makes more money when it costs more to manufacture the goods. We have lost at least 800 men since the war began and most all of these are skilled workers. Tool makers, who had been getting 75 cents an hour are offered from $1 to $1.10 to work on war contracts, and if we held these men by raising the scale we would have to do the same in all other lines of skilled labor. This makes it hard for us to keep skilled labor without paying such prices as would materially boost the price of our cars. That we will have to do so in the near future is certain and that is one reason why we say that automobiles are going to sell for more money.

THE NEED.

"I feel sure that if the war lasts two years, and it probably will, that the Ford will sell for $1000 at the factory and other cars will sell in the same proportion. There has never been a greater need for automobile transportation than exists at the present time, for the auto is the only vehicle available to afford practical relief for the railway freight congestion. We cannot expand our railway systems fast enough to take care of the traffic and we will soon find that the motor trucks will have to be handled in a more efficient manner to get the maximum relief.

"Another problem that every manufacturer faces today, and one which occasions quite a bit of worry, is getting materials with which to maintain the supply of repair and replacement parts. We are prepared for a two years' supply and the parts department gets first call on all materials now coming in. We feel a deep obligation to keep the Reo cars that have already been sold, going, more so than to furnish new cars to those who wish them, for it is only by getting higher efficiency out of the cars now running that we can do with less new ones."

BOOSTS SEDANS FOR LONG AUTO TRIPS.

"Just finished a trip from Spokane to Los Angeles, and I want to say that a Sedan is the only type of car for long trips," was the statement made to W. D. Dunham, the Ford dealer, recently by a person who came in for some little repair work.

This customer, Frank Beard of Spokane, has become a Ford Sedan enthusiast, in the past few weeks, as he was one of those who had never really given the Sedan type much thought for every day use.

"I tell you people are making a mistake by not looking into this type of car for year round service," says Mr. Beard, "and I really believe that it will take the place of the touring car to a certain degree when its advantages become more fully recognized."

USE TALC IN PLENTY IN NEW TIRE TUBES.

"When replacing tire tubes it is essential that talc or French chalk should be thoroughly distributed over the inside of the casing. This operation is greatly facilitated by the use of a small blower, such as is used for spraying insect powders," says Frank Price of Nelson & Price, tire dealers.

A blower of this kind may be obtained in any drug store, and its use results in the talc being evenly distributed all over the inside of the casing, a very important matter.

REAR DOOR SOLVES LONG-FELT WANT.

INNOVATION DESIGNED FOR CAR IS PLEASING TO BUYERS.

Following out their usual policy of distinctiveness and exclusiveness in both motor and body design the manufacturers of the Stearns-Knight have adapted a new feature in their four-passenger roadster which has apparently been overlooked by other manufacturers.

This innovation, which has been adopted on all of these Stearns models, is a rear door on the curbside permitting easy accessibility to the rear seat in addition to the aisleway between the two divided front seats.

The one drawback of unpleasant feature of the four-passenger roadster is the inconvenience of getting in or out of the rear seat while the front seats are occupied, says Lynn C. Buxton, and through medium of the rear door on the curbside of this car, this one outstanding drawback has been overcome.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF SERVICE STATIONS.

DETAILS OFTEN OVERLOOKED ARE LOOKED AFTER BY EXPERTS.

When Henry Ford established his service stations all over the country he did so because he realized that to get the maximum amount of service from a gasoline engine motorists must have the right kind of treatment. And every Ford motorist should take advantage of this service.

The seemingly little details which are overlooked by the majority of motorists are the ones that cause a great deal of trouble later on, says J. B. Fahy of Fahy-Atterbury Company, Ford dealers, located on Grand avenue. For instance, the crankcase of a new car should be drained of absolutely all oil after the first 1000 miles and cleaned out with kerosene, because small particles of metal wear off from new parts and are mixed in with the lubricant, and if allowed to stay in the crankcase will wear out different parts.

Another reason why it should be drained and cleaned out thoroughly is that new cars have a tendency to overheat, which tears down the body of the oil and makes it useless as a lubricant.

MOTOR BUS SERVICE MAKES INSTANT HIT.

TRACKLESS STREET CARS ARE POPULAR WITH PUBLIC OF BAY CITY.

Cities are taking a keen interest in the municipal motor-bus service that was recently placed in operation by San Francisco and the inauguration of which was accompanied by ceremonies conducted by officials of that city. The busses, especially built by the White company, are modern in every detail and the innovation is such an important step forward in solving the transportation problem that they still attract attention on every hand.

According to the superintendent of San Francisco's municipal street railway system, three of the White busses during the first five days covered, respectively, 728, 669 and 576 miles. Street cars are not allowed to cross Golden Gate Park, but the busses can do so and operate on a ten-minute schedule at each end of the line. These trackless "street cars" operate at a much lower cost per passenger mile than electric cars, it is declared.

TIRE MAN BRANDS REPORT ABSURD.

PLAN LIMITING TO SEVEN SIZES NOT LIKELY TO BE ADOPTED.

A recent dispatch from Washington, D. C., stated that a movement was on foot to limit the tire manufacture in this country to seven pneumatic tire sizes. It was stated that such a plan would result in conservation of man power at the factories and also be a saving in materials. Conservation was assigned as the sole motive for making such a recommendation.

When asked if he believed any such proposition stood the least chance of becoming adopted, J. B. Wood, exclusive distributor for Century Plainfield tires and tubes in Southern California and Arizona stated that in his opinion the plan was absurd.

"This appears to be the time for a lot of senseless movements that are not warranted by conditions nor substantiated by facts," said Mr. Wood. "There could not possibly be any conservation in discontinuing a large number of tire sizes and compelling owners of cars equipped with the banned sizes to buy new wheels suitable to the sizes of tires necessary. Certainly a storm of protest by these car owners would result. Nor could there be any conservation in man power by standardizing on seven sizes. It does not take any longer or any more men to turn out a 37x5 tire than it does to make a 30x3½. The whole idea seems preposterous."

BUSINESS OUTLOOK BETTER THAN EVER.

The adding to, as well as the bettering of equipment already in service by individuals and concerns engaged in the transfer and transportation business in and around Los Angeles is pointed out by J. B. Rauen of the United States Spring Company, as a strong indication that general business conditions are better than ever.

The United States Spring Company only recently filled a spring order of no small proportions for the El Dorado stages which ply between Los Angeles and Bakersfield. The company operating these stages is increasing the capacity of its vehicles to meet the heavy demand for passenger space and the spring work was not the least important part of the work.

Progress.

ENGINEERS TO HOLD BIG TEST.

Convention to be Held in Ohio Next Month.

Automotive Apparatus to be Put in Operation.

War Work will be Given Most Attention.

The international aircraft conference held recently in London between representatives of all the Allies, was characterized by a wide interchange of engineering information. The delegates from the United States included several members of the Society of Automotive Engineers, who recently returned to this country with a storeof information regarding condition on the other side. Some of this, of course, for military reasons cannot be made public, but the report of these representatives, which will be presented at the summer convention of the society, will be of the greatest value to all engaged in any war phase of the automotive manufacturing programme.

The automotive engineers' convention this year will be held June 17 and 18 at Dayton, O. Practically all the members of the society are now engaged in war work, so that the entire convention will be devoted to the engineering features of the automotive apparatus used by our navy and army. The most important part of the meeting will be the actual operation of foreign and American automotive war apparatus, such as aircraft, tractors, motor trucks, motorcycles, etc. In additon a number of technical papers will be presented by well-known authorities among the S.A.E. membership, dealing with the operation and design of the different types of automotive apparatus on exhibition. These papers and the exhibition features as well will be arranged solely to educate S.A.E. members so that they can render more efficient service to the nation in its conduct of the war.

AUTO RIDING SURE CURE FOR COLDS.

MOTORIST CERTAINLY HAS IT ON THE OLD-TIME PEDESTRIAN.

"There is a decided difference between a motorist and a pedestrian from the standpoint of health," said George Reilly, local Moon agent. "The man who drives a Moon 6-36 or any other automobile stands a better chance of outliving his brother on the pavement, for many reasons. A great health specialist asserted that 'a motorist has the advantage of moving air, and this,' he asserts, 'is great.'

"There was a time when we believed that fresh air was only valuable for the oxygen in it. Today we know that good air and plenty of it is absolutely essential, not only for the lungs, but for the skin as well. The skin needs moving air and you can only get that to the greatest advantage in an automobile. Automobile riding is a sure preventative of and cure for that great American malady, the bad cold."

TRAVELS IN AUTO ON SELLING TRIP.

To cover Pacific Coast territory between Los Angeles and Vancouver, B. C., by motor car, W. H. Damon of the Damon Specialty Company, manufacturer of Nonolio polishes for automobiles, left this city last Thursday. Damon is accompanied by a crew of salesmen. Upon his return in about six weeks, he will leave for Chicago in connection with the establishing of a branch in that city.

"We have been increasing our factory capacity to meet new demands made upon us for Nonolio, but it now appears that we will have to make more extended enlargement of our facilities. Through the winter months there was no falling off in business along the Pacific Coast and since then it has increased steadily in volume. We're getting our proportion of the business that has naturally gravitated this way," declared Damon.

If You Want a Super-Six
Get It Now

There Is No Certainty How Long
Prompt Delivery Can Be Made

You have read in the newspapers how automobile production has been reduced. And you know how further curtailment is planned for the future.

In fact, it is already in force, for we last week received a notification from the Hudson factory stating that our allotment of Hudsons for the present season had again been reduced—this time to little more than half the original number of cars we were to receive.

Furthermore, the letter stated that there was no certainty that the factory would be able to fulfill the terms of this twice-reduced schedule.

Increased uses for cars, because of reduced railroad facilities and other needs, keep up a demand that it will not be possible to fulfill much longer. Prices of some cars have already been advanced for the second time within the past six months.

It is likely that buyers will soon be offering premiums for prompt delivery of Super-Sixes.

This is the situation of the Super-Six.

For two years it has been the most popular fine car.

More than 53,000 have been sold.

No dealer has been able to accumulate stock during the past winter and the present demand exceeds the output.

Hundreds of cars are being driven overland to points of sale because freight is so uncertain and buyers want prompt delivery.

Today we can let you drive away in certain models. We might not be so fortunate tomorrow.

It is needless to tell you anything about Super-Six reliability. That quality is an accepted fact with all motorists.

There are ten different model types—There is one standard of reliability. If you get a Super-Six it will serve you well throughout the period now before us, in which it may be impossible to get new, reliable cars.

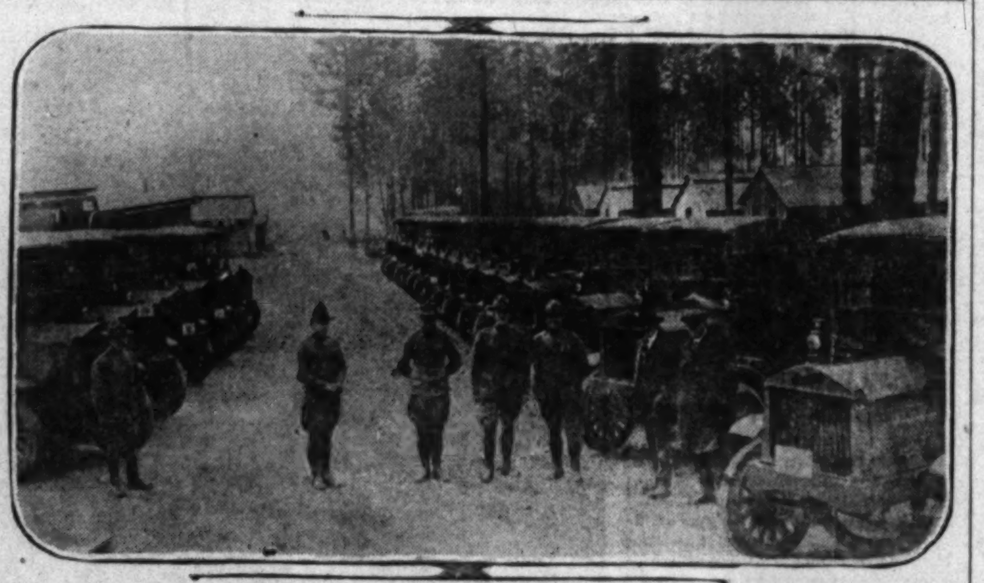
nomic by-product of the is of unusual significance is the introduction of labor in the great motor car Brought about by necessity and the urge of patriotism, competent observers have come to the conclusion that it is proving to be an excellent development from every viewpoint.

"The Paige factory is now employing a goodly number of women," said Stanley W. Smith of Smith Bros., Paige distributors. With thousands of men drafted into the army and the extraordinary demand made on man power for purely industrial purposes, there has developed in Detroit alone a shortage of skilled labor now estimated at 20,000, and which will soon reach 33,000, it is declared.

"This condition has necessitated a readjustment. It gives trained workers a greater opportunity and it has opened the way for new labor in positions where training and skill are not so greatly needed. As a matter of fact, it was absolutely necessary to get additional labor if the work on government contracts was to be kept up to schedule, and also if ordinary industrial activity was to be maintained at a reasonable rate of speed. Consequently the employment of women in certain departments was a logical and natural development.

"At the Paige they are employing women largely in inspection work where they do not displace skilled mechanics, but yet find a congenial occupation which they are entirely competent to follow. In fact, in this line of work they are especially efficient, and because of their temperament they are even more conscientious than men. The consequence is that the work is being done as well as or better than before, the men are able to take up their military duties or move up to more responsible jobs, and the wheels of industry are kept turning. It seems to be the logical solution of the problem and one that is proving advantageous to all concerned.



Doing their big part to help win the war.

Over There.

TELLS OF LIFE IN TRENCHES.

Former U.S.C. Athlete Now on West Front.

Sees German Aviator Dive to His Death.

"Over the Top" Gives Him Some Thrills.

Interesting glimpses of life in the trenches are contained in communications from Jack Elmore, former full-back of the U.S.C. varsity and popular college athlete of Southern California. Elmore is serving as a second lieutenant of field artillery, having crossed the water after completing his course in the officers' training school at Leon Springs last August.

The following excerpts are taken from letters written to friends and relatives in Los Angeles:

THE WRECK.

"Aside from this (my birthday) nothing of great importance happened except the wreck of a German plane, which fell from a height of about two miles and landed near my dugout. It is the nearest home the war has come to me yet, and it left a bad taste. I fear I am too chicken-hearted, but for the two young Germans who had so gladly made the great sacrifice I could feel nothing but sympathy and admiration. But the thing which cut the deepest was the unconcern and heartlessness of the spectators. They had hardly hit the ground when they were surrounded by souvenir seekers who took their hats, gloves, medals, pieces of the machine, the machine gun, and, in fact, everything movable. The French plane that brought it down came down itself. The French officer got out, took a picture of the dead Germans and wrecked machine and cut the shoulder straps off the German officers, smiling and receiving the congratulations of the Frenchmen present."

PLAN RAID.

"The French had a raid planned for 3 this morning, and I got them to take me along. Of course, I didn't go over the top, but I had thrills enough, at that. I got to where the raid was to start from. Everything was still except the occasional burst of a shell. . . . At 3:17 hell broke loose (excuse the expression, but there is nothing else describes it.) . . . The shells came over as thick and fast as if they were being sprayed from a giant hose. The machine guns reminded me more of hail on a tin roof than anything else. At the end of ten minutes the fire of the French shifted, making a curtain around this zone and the infantry went over the top with a yell. After what seemed hours, but was in reality only about fifteen minutes, they came streaming back. With them were fifteen German soldiers and one officer."

STATES TRYING TO CURB BAD LIGHTS.

THAT the distributors appointed by the Torrance Glass Company to handle the "Glareless Auto Lens" are getting on the job in a forceful manner is shown by a letter just received by this company from the McMurtry Manufacturing Company of Denver and is typical of ones received from other eastern agents.

The McMurtry company has a rather large territory, says J. W. White, manager of the Glareless Lens, as the concern covers Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico, Texas, and Western Nebraska, but they have a large force of salesmen which is covering it thoroughly.

Los Angeles and Southern California seem to be lax in this regard and it seems as if the only way to have this law enforced is to have public opinion aroused to such an extent that they will demand that the police do their duty.

a—Black could have played B-Q2, Q-Kt3 or Q-R4 ch, but played the text under the impression that he would get sufficient attack by his next move in reply to PxP to compensate for the break up of the position on the queen's side.

b—Well played, in fact, the saving move, as B-Kt5 ch was threatened.

c—White again chooses the best move. 12—P-K4, BxP; 13—Q-Q2, KtxR; 14—Q-K3 looked tempting, but would be answered by KtxP with advantage to Black.

d—White might have played 15—P-B7, QxP (if Q-B5; R-R2 and the knight is still imprisoned); 16—Kt-Kt6, Q-Q1; (best) 17—KtxR, KxB; 18—BxP and now P-Kt4 could be replied to with Q-Kt4 ch, K-Kt1; B-Q6.

e—White threatened Q-Kt7. The text is to prevent this and give Black's knight a chance to develop at B3 if White does not continue as in the actual game. P-Kt4 would have been answered by KtxP, PxB; Kt-B6 dis ch, K-B1; KtxB, RxKt; Q-Kt7.

f—White could have safely continued with P-Q5, as Black could not play R-Kt7 ch, K-Kt3 and take pawn with either rook or bishop. However, the move made is also a good one, as if the pawn is not taken it will hold Black from making full use of his forces, and if it is White gets a winning end game.

g—R-K1 should have been played, holding back the king's pawn. After the text move, Black's game is lost. This seems to indicate White should have played 26—P-K4.

h—Not a good move on general principles.

i—P-Q5 ch would have won more quickly.

j—If now P-Q5 ch, Black would play BxP and draw.

k—K-Q6 was somewhat quicker.

l—B-B6; K-Kt6, K-B1 would have made it more difficult. White could then win by P-B7, B-Q2; K-B5, B-R5; P-K6, B-Kt6; P-K7, B-B2; K-B6, B-K1 ch; K-Q5 and bringing the king over to KB8.

PLAN SUMMER SCHOOL AS CAMP CURRY ATTRACTION.

THE management of a summer school course for laymen to be offered at Camp Curry, in the Yosemite, July 1-26, is planning a course of approximately twenty lectures to be given by prominent publicists before general audiences of visitors to that resort during week-day evenings in July.

The government is manifesting great interest in schools of this character, and it is expected that speakers of national renown and selected by the government will tour the country and speak on educational subjects that are incident to results of the war. Two of the speakers already engaged for the Camp Curry course are Reynold E. Blight and Dr. Wharton James. Both are well known to the Pacific Coast as lecturers and publicists.

Some of Mr. Blight's topics for the lectures of the third week of July are as follows: "The Status of Labor After the War," "New Incentives and Progress in the Reform Movement, Due to the War," "The Moral Regeneration of America."

Dr. James will lecture on geographical topics as follows: "Changes in the Map of Europe After the War," "Geographical and Economic Reasons for the Various Conquests and Campaigns of the War," "Historic Significance in Prototypes of Present Campaigns."

Mitchell Sixes

A 120-in. Wheelbase
In This $1250 Six

IT IS the longest Six, the roomiest, sturdiest, handsomest Six which is sold at that price now. The motor is the latest type of 40-horsepower Six. It's a high-speed motor, and very economical.

The rear springs are shock-absorbing, so the car is a marvel of comfort. The equipment is extra complete. And the exquisite bodies give it distinction in any crowd of fine cars.

There is nothing in its price class this year comparable with this car.

An Expert Creation

Every important detail is designed and produced by a specialist. In the past year many new experts have been added to the Mitchell staff, most of them masters of endurance.

They have built this car to meet export requirements. In many parts they have added much over-strength. They have fixed new standards and new tests, to insure that any part can meet any super-strain.

No car in this class was ever built to such extreme requirements, in sturdiness and endurance.

This is the car you will choose in this class. In this price-class there is nothing that compares.

A Model Factory

Mitchell cars are built complete in a mammoth model plant. Experts have spent years to equip this plant to produce the six-type economically.

All these extra values are due to scientific methods. They come from saving waste.

Barney Oldfield Tells You Exactly What Carbon Will Do When It Gets in the Motor.

Invention.

MANY NEW IDEAS BORN IN AUTO LABORATORY.

FRANK B. ANSTED, president and general manager of the Lexington Motor Company of Connersville, Ind., always takes great delight in showing visitors at the plant through the laboratory. For there he claims much of the special planning has been done.

This laboratory under the direction of John C. Moore, chief engineer, is constantly checking up all materials entering into the construction of Lexington cars, in addition to searching for improvements in design and construction. Alloy and high carbon steels, worked out from special formulas developed here, are used exclusively. The composition of all materials has in mind the maximum of service and protection against breakage or undue strain.

One unique feature used on Lexington cars, distributed here by W. P. Wisdom Company, saves a great deal of attention on the part of the driver. Oilless bushings are used wherever the construction makes them practical. These bushings are used on spring bolts, both front and rear, on brake shafts, inside the brake drums, and in the clutch. Once installed, they need no further attention. They eliminate all squeaks and rattles and will rarely, if ever, require replacement.

Another idea which has been worked out in the Lexington laboratory, is found in the nonmetallic universal joints connecting the propeller shaft to the rear axle. These are made of heavy six and one-half-inch discs of specially prepared fabric, bolted at three points each to the propeller shaft and to the adjacent power transmitting members to form a strong, flexible connection between them. Lexington officials claim that these require no lubrication of any kind nor any other attention when once installed.

"It is no wonder we are proud of this laboratory of ours," Mr. Ansted said. "In it we have worked out the perfect balance of all of our materials, labored for unification, and conceived all of the clever devices which make the Lexington Minute Man six a motor car which is strong, light and flexible."

HILL-CLIMB HERO PLANS NEW STUNTS.

"Pete" Eschardies, star salesman of the Los Angeles branch of the Chevrolet Motor Company of California, is getting ready to pull off a few "stunts." Eschardies was the hero of the Rim o' the World hill climb last year, when he finished second after being forced to stop for three minutes to extinguish a fire which nearly consumed his car. Even then he lost to the winner by less than thirty seconds.

Barney Oldfield: 1. When my car is going fifteen miles per hour the dial indicates twenty amperes, but when I speed up to twenty-five or thirty the dial indicates less voltage than at fifteen. Could the generator be dirty or what is wrong, if anything? The car is a 1916 Maxwell, which has been driven 7000 miles.

2. What causes a storage battery to sulphate and is it harmful?

ALAN BARSTOW, Anoka, Minn.

1. That condition is all right. The regulator is set so as to give the best all around results. Then if you do much slow driving you will still have a battery up to charge.

2. Sulphation is a natural thing for the battery. During discharge sulphate deposits on the plates, but during charge this sulphate is removed. If, however, a battery remains in an uncharged condition for some time the deposit becomes hard and difficult to remove by any kind of charge. Battery action is one of chemical action between the solution and active material.

THE Cord Tire

THE motoring world has proclaimed the cord tire, KING.

Tire users having glorified it far and wide as a tire of extra and special service, tire makers have labored to match the pioneer cord tire—the GOODRICH SILVERTOWN CORD—and make a 'cord' tire.

Remember how the cord tire sprung to far-famed and dominating rule.

It was when Goodrich put Silvertown Cords on thousands of automobiles.

Silvertowns have taught the motoring world the COMFORT and ECONOMY of the cord tire.

Why this quick and sensational schooling of motorists?

Because motorists found a new, superior service in—

SILVERTOWN
SERVICE VALUE CORD TIRES

Cord is a mere WORD, but SILVERTOWN CORD is a tire, a tire of different service.

Silvertowns are utterly unlike all other tires.

They look different outside in the smartness of their trim, graceful lines, emphasized by the Red Hallmark of Tire Quality, the RED-DOUBLE-DIAMOND, neatly inlaid in their side wall.

But the difference goes deep into their sturdy body, that patent protected fusion of rubber and spiral-wrapped CABLE-CORD.

Silvertowns' different structure has greater resistance to shock stress. It runs with a smoother ease—

And immune to tire fever, the internal friction which multiplies in tires and burns them up, it outserves with phenomenal mileage.

Cord tires mean comfort and economy to you. But make sure that you get REAL Cord Tires by demanding

PRESIDENT GREER LEAVES FOR AUTO MEN'S MEETING.

EXPECTING to be absent from Los Angeles five or six weeks, P. H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, distributor of Hupmobile and Chalmers automobiles and recently elected president of the Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association, left for the East last Tuesday. At St. Louis he will attend an important meeting of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, of which he is a member of the board of directors.

The national dealers' organization is to the dealers of the nation what the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is to the manufacturers. "At the coming meeting," stated Greer before leaving, "the subject of reduction of output will be undoubtedly the principal topic. With a membership of approximately 20,000 dealers, the association represents many millions of dollars invested by them. While they all want to do their share in the great emergency, they feel that they should be offered some protection as well as the manufacturers. The radical reduction of 75 per cent. so much talked of, however, is I am well informed, based upon rumor. Willys, Durant, Dodge and Flanders compose the committee representing the manufacturers that is trying to effect a satisfactory arrangement with the War Trade Board."

After leaving St. Louis, Greer will visit in turn, Chicago, Detroit and New York as well as other large business and manufacturing centers. He will also be present at several large tractor demonstrations and will attend the annual summer meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

"I am very much interested in the tractor problem and have been for some time. The field is a great one and it is bound to revolutionize farming. Under the influence of the tractor intensive farming on a gigantic scale in this country can be carried on," he declared.

Commenting on the much talked-of car reduction, Greer said: "If the radical reduction of output was made effective, there are small manufacturers of automobiles who would be forced out of business, while thousands of dealers would have their investments ruined. From what I know, I cannot believe that the government intends putting any such measure into effect. Labor and transportation as well as coal figure largely in the problem. Some equable working basis will be worked out, I feel sure."

Carbon is just about the w thing that can happen to the inter-goes. Not only does it cause the engine to lose most of its pep and power, but it induces overheating, misfiring, backfiring and things that may cause injury to power plant. The engine that

WHAT CARBON DOES FOR YOU

Causes Engine to Lose Mo of Pep and Power.

Induces Overheating, Misfi ing and Backfiring.

BY BARNEY OLDFIELD.

[Copyright, 1918, by King Features Syndicate, In Carbon is just about the wo thing that can happen to the inte nal combustion engine, as far as terrupting its efficient opera goes. Not only does it cause the e gine to lose most of its pep a power, but it induces overheati misfiring, backfiring and ot things that may cause injury to power plant. The engine that packed with carbon cannot throttled down properly and if condition is bad enough, it may on firing for several minutes af the ignition has been switched o

Not only that, but carbon depo work havoc with the engine it and with the valve system as w Carbon deposits occur on both valve faces and on the seats. flinty hard particles of the car gradually are ground into metal, completely destroying even seating of the valve, which so vitally important to efficient eration. Fuel leaks begin to oc compression is impaired and action of the motor becomes sl gish and extremely inefficient.

The commonest seat of car deposit troubles is the combus chamber. These are formed fr the products of the burned with dust which has found trance to the compartment oil which forces its way past rings and enters the combus chamber mixes with these other gredients and forms a solid cake a flinty hardness that sometimes quires a chisel to loosen. These posits are not perfectly smo Many small projections occur these becoming red hot with flame of combustion retain their candescence after the explosion taken place. As the new gas ch rushes into the combustion ch ber, it is fired by these incandes particles and this premature tion is one of the most serious fects of carbon.

When a car owner finds that engine is losing power with acco panying overheating and occasi knocking, he may be sure that bon is back of it. Sometimes a may run for several thousand m without serious deposits of this stance forming and again the n car may develop unmistakable sy toms after only 500 miles of ning. The new car requires lubrication and this means the sibility of carbon deposits. owner must not assume simp cause his car is new that th no carbon present. Another of excessive carbonization is dr on an over-rich mixture, whic a very common trick of Amer motorists. When the fuel contains too much gasoline, the cess burns rather than exp and this means carbon. If th owner will be careful to giv vehicle plenty of lubrication, not an excess of oil, keep wel ting piston rings and drive on leanest mixture consistent with isfactory operation, he will half his carbon deposits bef hand.

There are many methods of moving a carbon deposit. M car owners attempt to remove injecting kerosene into the cylinder, thinking that the coal acts as a loosening agent. It do so when the deposit is just ginning to form, but against a cake of flinty carbon, it wil powerless. Alcohol has also used in the same way, with a the same effect, I think. The called oxygen method burns out carbon. The good old-fashi method of scraping is laborious sure. In fact, it is about the way to treat a really serious ca carbonization. When the has a detachable head, the owner can carry out the oper of removing the carbon without ficulty. From time to time compounds of various sorts signed to remove carbon dep have been placed upon the ma These are chemicals, designed cause the carbon to loose its hol he walls of the cylinder, so th can be blown out of the exhau

The Aluminum Six with Magnetic Gear Shift

THE WAR requirements of our government have caused a scarcity of metals. The fulfillment of war contracts and the production of war supplies have drained the ranks of skilled workmen.

Today, materials and labor are at a premium. Manufacturers in producing high grade motor cars consistent with their reputation have no other alternative than to advance the price of their product.

Strict adherence to the policy of uniform quality makes it necessary for the manufacturer of Premier to advance the price $300.

This change goes in effect June 1st to give you ample time to place your order for Premier with its aluminum motor and Magnetic Gear-shift at the present price.

KEROSENE IN DEMAND AS TRACTOR FUEL.

"Engine designers as a rule have made no special provision for the utilization of low-grade fuels. Instead they seem to have put the matter up to the carburetor manufacturer, when in reality the more efficient use of present low-grade fuels and the possible utilization of still heavier oils is more contingent upon engine than accessory design," declared E. M. Chandler, sales manager for the Master Carburetor Company.

"Manufacturers of carburetion devices will warmly welcome the arrival of a fuel of constant characteristics, for the problem so far submitted to them is complex. Beyond doubt the oil refiners would have us use a fuel which they can produce in largest possible volume. Throughout the East, Middle West and Northwest, kerosene is in big demand as a tractor fuel."

OWNERS OF COSTLY CARS HOOVERIZE.

An interesting incident showing the trend of the motorist's activity in Hooverizing took place last week at the office of the International Sales Company's headquarters for the Gates half-sole tire, where four wire-wheeled limousines were lined up at one time for the purpose of getting the half-sole equipment, showing that it is not the small-car owner alone who is helping to conserve rubber and tire stock.

A. R. Goodale, president of the company, said that it is not at all unusual for the large, expensive cars to drive up for this equipment, where it was an almost unheard-of thing five or six months ago, and from the word which is received from other sections of the country the same thing seems to be the rule.

Barney Oldfield: I have a 1913 Overland, the emergency brake of which does not hold. I have looked over the adjustments and find them O. K. Have taken off the wheels and washed shoes in coal oil. The lining looks to be in good condition. No amount of strength affects the emergency, though the foot brake works well. I do not like to depend upon it altogether, however, and will be grateful for any suggestions.

O. W. GAFFKE, Los Angeles.

The bands may have stretched and the lining compressed so much that even full application will not make the brake take hold. The connections are all right. The trouble is in the bands and lining and should be given careful attention.

Another Line.

AGENCY PUTS ON BIG DISPLAY OF NEW CARS.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week by W. D. Wright of the Wright Motor Car Company that they had taken over the agency for the Monroe line of cars and that he had already received a shipment of them which are now on display at his salesroom.

The Monroe has been represented in Southern California for some time and through the great record it made last year on the Yosemite economy run it made a host of friends.

This car was built to meet the ever-growing demand for a moderate-priced automobile in which pleasing appearance is combined with great mechanical efficiency, says Mr. Wright, and the motor is of the high speed type, four-cylinder, with overhead valves which engineers have developed to create a smooth running engine. In addition to the valve-in-the-head motor the outstanding feature of this car is the scientifically counter-balanced crankshaft, which is accomplished by the use of counterweights which are forged integral with the shaft, and are therefore a part of it. They can not come off, even under the high centrifugal pressure to which they are subjected under operating conditions. These counter-weights absorb the vibration which in cars not equipped with this type of crankshaft escapes to the motor structure and thence to the entire body of the car.

And to insure a perfectly lubricated motor they have installed a system of circulation with gear pump, through crankshaft to all bearings which has proven to be very satisfactory to Monroe users.

This line will be handled in conjunction with the Inter-State line, which Mr. Wright has had for a number of years.

SHOWS APPRECIATION FOR WAR AMBULANCE.

The place of honor in R. C. Durant's trophy room, where "Cliff" keeps the prizes won by him in automobile racing, is a medal from the republic of France, a token of appreciation of the gift of a field ambulance. Several months ago a Chevrolet "490" chassis was fitted with an ambulance body and sent across the water, and latest reports are it is doing noble work where it is needed.

LANCASTER RANCHER SAYS CAR IS INDISPENSABLE.

R. L. HOLST, owner of a large ranch near Lancaster, is of the firm conviction that the automobile is an essential to the successful farmer. He has found his machine indispensable, whether it be for running into town for supplies, or going on long business trips to Bakersfield, Los Angeles and other points.

Mr. Holst has a seven-passenger Hudson Super-Six, and he has found the car most satisfactory in every way. The Mint Canyon road is in a very bad condition at present, Mr. Holst reports, but he says that the repairs now being made, which are nearing completion, will alleviate these conditions, and also attract motorists to the Mint Canyon route, particularly on through travel to Bakersfield.

Mr. Holst points out that the most important factors in automobile travel through rough country of this kind is to have proper tire equipment. His Hudson is equipped with Silvertown cords all around, and he has found them by far the most satisfactory tires that he can use.

Passing through Los Angeles, he stopped at the local Goodrich branch and called attention to the tires on his wheels. One of them has given a mileage of 24,674 miles, two others have gone 20,000 and 30,000 miles, respectively, and the fourth tire has given slightly less mileage.

Naturally, Mr. Holst is delighted with this service, and feels it proves conclusively that the Silvertown construction used by the Goodrich company is ideal.

Coast League.

WATCH BEES AT CAPITAL.

McCredie will be Shy Siglin and Chapelle.

Four Teams Now Running Neck and Neck.

Crawford's Injury Affects the Angels' Batting.

BY EDWIN F. O'MALLEY.

The Pacific Coast League race enters on its seventh week with four of the teams neck and neck turning into the back stretch. For a spell it looked very much as if the Bees threatened to do a Johnny McGraw, but the Angels and Vernons got busy and, ably assisted by the Seals, were soon on McCredie's tail. Even with his present bunch of batting blue devils, Walter has been unable to dart out into a commanding lead. Mac, however, always has something up his sleeve, and no matter how far he falls to the leeway, he is liable at any time to start one of his early summer drives—one of those famous rushes from the rear that has carried him to a number of pennants.

What the Mormons will do in Sacramento next Tuesday remains to be seen. When Mac invades the home of the toga he will be shy the services of Paddy Siglin and Larry Chapelle, who have signed up with the medical corps of the Letterman Hospital in San Francisco. This loss is sure to weaken him, but he will be partly recompensed by the return of Karl Crandall, who will be with the club again in Sacramento.

THE RUB.

Karl will undoubtedly be assigned the keystone sack. He is a much better all around player than Paddy Siglin, but how about someone to fill Chapelle's shoes. There's the rub for Mac. Larry in the last few weeks has been a sensation with the bludgeon, thus confirming Walter's faith in the former White Sox player's ability. He may fall back on Miller, but Miller is no Chapelle. Then again—Leverenz is susceptible to the draft at any moment, and Lev is Mac's one best bet in the heaving line. Taking it all in all, the Bees are not going to travel on a bed of roses from now on, although we still think they are the babies to beat for those aspiring to grab the gonfalon.

With Sam Crawford out of the line-up the Angels are somewhat weakened in their batting efficiency. Sammy is expected to be in the traces again when Killefer comes here next week to meet the Seals. His sprained ankle is coming along nicely. The Seraphs have come into their own lately and are now playing excellent ball. Cooper, who was very weak at the bat some weeks ago, has discovered his slamming eye and is now poling them out regularly. This is encouraging news to Angel rooters who were beginning to fear that Cooper would be unable to fill the bill in center field.

HOLDING OWN.

Little Bo-Peepy is also slashing away at the pill and is holding his own at the difficult corner. He is surely a vast improvement on Bobby Davis, for Joe hits the ball, something Bobby rarely did last fall. Terry's work the first two days at Sacramento was a revelation to the bugs there. Zeb is really playing the game of his life and appears to be there with the hickory when hits are needed. Fournier is going along on the even tenor of his way and Red Killefer's arm is getting into that shape that he will soon be able to negotiate double plays. All the rest of the Angelic battalion are doing very well.

Bill Essick took a slump last week. This can be traceable in a measure to the loss of Long, who was there now and then with a clean-up wallop. Bill tried Snyder for a spell in the right garden, but the former Northwesterner appeared unable to deliver. Bill then fell back on Mathes, and to the delight of all Tiger rooters, Mathes came through with a rattle. He is hitting the ball good and hard and is beginning to make the fans forget all about Long. Mathes batted over .300 in the Central League and seems to have gotten into that stride again. If he can keep up his present good work he should be Essick's mainstay as the fourth position man. All the Bengal twirlers are going fine and this alone should always keep them up in the first division.

THE SEALS.

The Seals, with Goldie and Maggert back in the outer gardens, are now putting up a high-class article of ball. At present they have the poorest heaving staff in the league and unless Graham can buttress this important department, Jerry Downs is going to have a difficult time of it keeping out of the second division. However, with another good twirler or two (but where is he going to get them?) Downs would have some team. As we have often said before, he has the infield par excellence of the Coast. He has mastered his weakness in the outer gardens, now let's see what he can do to bolster his mediocre chucking staff.

The Oaks are surely surprising us as we expected to see them in the cellar by this time and remain there to the end. Clint Prough is the baby that is keeping them on the baseball map. He is going great guns and is sweeping everything before him. And then there is Speed Martin, a cragman forsooth! Should either of these worthies, however, get into a losing streak it won't take long to precipitate the Commuters into the cellar where they really figure.

Sacramento is doing rather indifferently without the services of that arch cloutman Art Griggs, who is out of the game through an injury. Art should get back at first soon and then when Harry Wolter regains his batting eye—and regain it he will—Bill Rodgers is sure to grab off many a game when least expected. Bill has a nifty little club and, were he a little better off in the heaving line, who knows but what he would do a dark-horse act that would land him in Pennantville not long after the Ides of Next October. Having made these few remarks we shall now take our conge.

Benny Leonard, champ of champs.

When Benny Leonard knocked out Freddy Welsh we all said he was a whale and when he knocked out Johnny Kilbane even his own manage was forced to admit that he was good. Los Angeles fans are to get their first glimpse of the lightweight champion tomorrow night at Shrine Auditorium, when he boxes Louie Rees one of the toughest lightweights on the Coast in a benefit bout for the athletic funds of the various encampments on the Coast.

MONROE

A COMFORTABLE CAR AT REASONABLE COST.

THE main difficulty that the automobile buyers will encounter today in the selection of a motor car is to get the kind of car wanted at a moderate price.

They naturally want their car to be a handsome one. Their pride must be satisfied on this important point. They want a car in which quality has not been sacrificed in order to make a low price possible, and they also want a car, economical in maintenance cost; a car that gives the maximum service at the minimum expense.

The Empire is a car of enhancing beauty; its graceful, flowing lines blending in perfect harmony. The high radiator, the tilted windshield, the handsome cowl and instrument board, the double cowl effect in center of body, the deep tufted, genuine leather upholstery, the roominess inside, these features testify to the marked attention that the Empire company has given to appearance and comfort.

Reliability and economy are the most desirable qualities of any motor car. Without all these, any car, regardless of its other desirable points, is a poor investment.

"In the latest Empire we have met most fully the desires of the buyer for a comfortable, sturdy car at a moderate price, that you will be proud to drive in company of owners of the highest priced vehicles," said I. L. Parker, sales manager of the Speers Motor Company, distributors of Empire cars. "The attractive appearance of the Empire car is but an indication of the mechanical excellence of its construction. Exceptional strength is built into every part, taking driving strain, or carrying weight, reducing up-keep expense to minimum. In the Empire there is a special appeal to the woman who drives, for every control is at the hand of the driver's seat, gears shift noiselessly, throttle and starter are convenient. The red seal Continental motor is an engine of remarkable performance, capable of a speed from less than two to more than fifty miles per hour, on the high gear.

"Claims are all right—but only proofs count."

That was the caption to a recent Maxwell advertisement.

You've read it of course. If you didn't, you've missed something.

In that advertisement we stated no claims were made for Maxwell motor cars that had not been proven.

For example, that 44 days and nights non-stop test during which a standard stock model Maxwell covered 22,022 miles at an average speed of 25 miles an hour, was made under supervision of the A.A.A. officials—every minute of the time.

That test made the Maxwell the long distance champion of the world.

It proved the reliability of this car.

Then we set out to prove that this Maxwell gives a greater mileage per gallon of gasoline than any other car.

First we asked 1000 Maxwell dealers to make, all on a certain day, a "gasoline economy" run. They did, and the average was 27.15 miles per gallon.

"Good!" you say.

Yes—but not for a Maxwell. Big as the mileage was, we knew it wasn't what an average Maxwell ought to do.

General Manager Flanders had a hunch that one thousand Maxwell owners would beat that record to a frazzle.

You see, he figured it this way—and events proved he was right:

The average dealer or garage man is a "bug" on carburetor adjustment. He thinks he is an expert. If you ask him, he will admit that he knows more about how to make a carburetor and how to adjust one than do all the Maxwell engineers!

He'll admit that—reluctantly and bashfully 'tis true—but if you are adroit you can extract the confession from him.

So Mr. Flanders opined that these experts had very carefully adjusted their carburetors—and failed to obtain the results they should.

And he figured that owners wouldn't do that—they would just drive their Maxwells as they came from the factory.

And, let us say here, just as it comes from the factory, a Maxwell is pretty nearly a perfect automobile.

So we offered $50,000 in Liberty Bonds, to be divided among Maxwell owners, for a gasoline economy test.

We hoped one thousand would enter—more than three thousand did. Such is the enthusiasm of Maxwell owners!

The conditions were that only owners or members of their own families could drive, and the car must be their own.

The observers must be local newspaper men, or owners of other makes of cars. Get the point?

Of course you do—owners of other makes would naturally be critical and just a trifle skeptical.

But we had another object in this—we knew that every Maxwell would carry three prospective buyers—if the Maxwell made good under their own supervision. And we knew it would!

A little red tank—holding a fraction of a gill less than one gallon—was furnished each contestant.

Attached to the dash, that tank attracted a lot of attention.

"But why the fraction less?" you ask.

To compensate for the amount of gasoline held in the tube running from tank to carburetor.

Each owner drove till his tank was empty—then he had to stop.

And those three thousand Maxwell owner-drivers, over all kinds of roads in all climates, in every State, averaged 29.4 miles per gallon of gasoline. Every record was attested under oath, too.

One owner actually made 51 miles on his gallon.

It was almost incredible but a careful checking of the route, measurement of the tank and statement under oath of the three observers proved he had actually done it.

The 500 highest obtained mileages ranging from 35 to 51 miles.

Our plan of inviting owners of other makes of cars to act as observers and checkers, worked out fine—thousands of sales can be traced directly to that.

In at least one case, all three observers sold their other cars and bought Maxwells within a month!

Our dealers had a lot of fun, too, with those little red tanks afterwards. Here's a typical case.

Maxwell owner enters. In tones of undisguised skepticism says, "I see some owners average 29.4 miles on a gallon of gasoline. Got any cars like that to sell?—I'd like to buy one."

"Why, you have one already—your own Maxwell will do as well or better."

"You'll have to show me," he replies. "Why, I don't average eighteen miles per gallon."

"I'll show you," laughs the dealer.

In a few minutes a little red tank is attached to that Maxwell.

Owner himself measures the gasoline and pours it in, and the owner drives.

And in thousands of such cases no owner got less than 26 miles out of his gallon.

From that time on, you may believe he was a Maxwell booster, right.

Many Maxwell dealers still do—and all should—keep that little red tank on demonstrating cars, to prove our claims of gasoline economy. It is an unanswerable argument—positive proof.

And we challenge any other car to prove its claims in the same way.

Sensational stunts can be performed with one selected motor, in the hands of experts and in ideal conditions.

Almost any motor car will perform creditably then.

But for three thousand cars of one make and of all ages—1915, '16 and '17 models—each driven by its own owner; each over a different route; in all parts of the country and on the same day, so that all kinds of weather from tropical to arctic were encountered;—

To average 29.4 miles per gallon under such conditions—that car must be a Maxwell.

Dear Eddie
Smithey's ma says we don't any of us take enough Vacations - she says to stay popular stay away. We are all getting on each other's nerves - We don't know how much we love each other until we get home sick. Get away, she says - monotony is killing more people than over eating - The same place and the same companions wear us out - She says "What is home if you are chained to it. Don't let your house own you. You own it - Don't let your friends own you - You own your self - Lead your own life - His ma says Some girl!

RESOLVED

THAT CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME - CHARITY IS LOVE, AND IF WE HAVE LOVE IN OUR HEARTS WE HAVE MORE PATIENCE WITH EACH OTHER. WE ARE ALL A LITTLE PEEVISH AT TIMES - WE FLY UP TOO EASILY. THEN OUR FALSE PRIDE MAKES US THINK WE ARE THE INJURED ONE AND WE DON'T WANT TO GIVE IN. NOW THE NEXT TIME IT LOOKS LIKE A STORM IN OUR HOUSE I'M GOING TO TAKE A LONG BREATH AND SEE IF I CAN'T BE THE ONE TO CONTROL MYSELF AND SAVE THE SITUATION "A SOFT ANSWER TURNETH AWAY WRATH" THE PERSON WHO CONTROLS HIS TEMPER HAS ALL THE BEST OF IT. OH IT'S NOT EASY AND IT TAKES PRACTICE. BUT IT IS THE TIME WHEN "SILENCE IS GOLDEN". LOVE BEGETS LOVE. HATE BEGETS HATE. LET'S TRY TO REMEMBER NEXT TIME TO PRESERVE OUR OWN RESPECT AND GAIN THE RESPECT OF OTHERS BY BEING THE CAPTAIN OF OURSELVES - THE GREATEST MAN IS THE ONE WHO HAS HIMSELF UNDER CONTROL - ITS SOME ACCOMPLISHMENT
